McCauley: 'Sayonara!'

By ROBERT BOSWORTH and JANE ARENA

"Sayonara!"

And with that final word, Mayor Francis McCauley waved at the audience and quickly disappeared from the City Council chamber into the corridor.

Sayonara!

He would not seek a fifth term.

MAYOR FRANCIS X. McCAULEY surprised many officials, family members, friends and residents Tuesday when he announced he would not seek a record fifth term of office as he delivered his mid-term address in the Council Chambers of City Hall.

Although some observers thought he would not seek re-election, he still managed to stun his mid-term address audience Tuesday when he officially took himself out of this year's mayoral ring.

By doing so, he will complete a 25-year political career.

And by doing so, he set the stage for a primary election in September between four candidates:

Councillors Steve McGrath and James Sheets, former Mayor Joseph LaRaia and Quincy businessman Peter O'Connell.

LaRaia who lost to McCauley by a narrow 474-vote margin last year, has already announced his candidacy. McGrath, Sheets and O'Connell are expected to make their announcements within the next few weeks.

No other mayoral candidates appear on the horizon.

McCauley had laced much of his address with Quincy's history, appropriately as it is the city's centennial.

Near the end of the address, those in the audience began to feel there might be a hint at least of his future plans.

And then it came, but not as a hint:

"On four occasions I was afforded the great honor of being sworn into office for a two year term as Mayor and then to deliver an inaugural address.

"On four other occasions, I've been privileged to be the guest of the City Council to deliver the mid-term address.

"As I have said, this is the eighth year I have been with you as the Mayor and it will be the last year I will be with you as the Mayor of the City of Quincy.

"After an awful lot of thought, soul-searching, and discussion with family and friends, political supporters as well as some political opponents, I have decided not to seek a fifth term of the office of Mayor, but to serve out the last year of my fourth term and then return to private life.

"When I step down, a year from today, I will have completed 25 years of elective office in Quincy...of the 437 individuals (who've served Quincy in elective office in 100 years), only four will have served longer in local office.

"I've had the privilege of serving with almost 10 per cent of those 437 people, 41.

"Prior to becoming Mayor, I had the great privilege of serving in the administration of five of my predecessors as Mayor.

"Politics has been a very interesting, challenging, rewarding, and sometimes, frustrating business. I think I can speak for all of elected officials here, both present and past, and, Steve Tobin, the future tomorrow, when I say that politics gets in your blood.

"President John Adams once said that 'politics is a disease for which there is no known cure.'

"But sooner or later the time comes in every politician's life when he or she must make the decision to step down, to leave the scene to other people.

"The late Congressman James A. Burke used to say 'You ought to leave while the music's still playing.'

"But I think the leaving of public office was best summed up by a friend of mine in the neighboring town of Braintree: Don Lang, a Braintree Selectman, startled his constituents a few years ago when he announced he would not seek re-election. When asked why, he simply said 'It's better to leave too soon then stay too long.'

"Sayonara."

Reaction: Surprise, Disappointment And Words Of Praise

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Reaction to Mayor Francis McCauley's announcement he will not seek a fifth term ranged from surprise and disappointment to words of praise for him.

Samples:

Ward 4 Councillor James Sheets: "Well I think that Frank has been an outstanding mayor down through the last eight years. He has done a tremendous job in bringing this city back financially from Proposition 2½.

"I did not think he was going to run. I haven't thought that he would run for the last year but I did not know that he wouldn't run. I don't think anyone knew except Frank.

"He's made his mark in government in Quincy at all levels; history will remember him well."

With the mayor's decision, Sheets said he's been and still is "leaning towards being a mayoral candidate" and will make an announcement later this month.

Councillor Stephen McGrath: "I was somewhat surprised that he made his announcement today. I think what he must have thought of was that in getting into the historical aspects of the 100th anniversary (of the city) and running down the list of individuals who have served in the mayor's office, I think he determined appropriately that it was the time in the historical context to make the announcement."

McGrath, another expected mayoral candidate, said, "Our plans have been going forward for some months now and I will be making an announcement at the end of January or early February of what my political plans will be next year."

Businessman Peter O'Connell: "Well I think it was a surprise to all of us here watching the mid-term but I think Frank McCauley ended it with a lot of class, a little bit like the Standard and Poors rating which he has increased to A+. I think the McCauley administration gets an A+ for its financial management of the city over the last seven years and I wish him a lot of luck.

"That's the way to end a term: strong and the city in good financial position."

O'Connell, a potential mayoral candidate, said he "had no intention of running against Frank McCauley.

"I think that his leadership in the city is to be commended and I think now that the mayor has decided not to seek re-election certainly accelerates the planning and probably within the next

Squantum School Conducts Clothing Drive For Needy

"Be a Star! Help Warm the Heads, Hands, Feet and Hearts of the Homeless" was the theme of a clothing collection this holiday season of students and staff at the Squantum School in Quincy.

Children and adults donated new hats, scarves, mittens, gloves and socks to those people serviced by the neighboring Long Island Shelter.

The fifth graders visited each classroom, made announcements and posted colorful posters to publicize the effort, and have manned the collection desk. Each person who donated clothing signed his name to a star and added it to the bulletin board in the main corridor.

The staff is very proud of the generosity of the students and parents and sincerely thank all who participated.

Quinoil Seeks To Expand Town River Marina Facilty

Quinoil Industries, Inc., is seeking permission from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to expand a marina facility in the Town River in Quincy. The expansion would include dredging, adding new floats and reconfiguring existing floats to increase the number of slips from 170 to 248.

The work also includes finger floats, gangways, access piers, mooring piles, ice protection dolphins, repairs and upgrading of a 20-ton boat lift to a 40-ton boat lift, and rebuilding of an existing granite block and wood sheet bulkhead with granite blocks.

No filling is proposed. Existing shoreline to high tide line will remain as is except for site clearing and interface with proposed dredging.

The application for the federal permit was filed with the Engineers in compliance with Section 10 of the Rivers and Harbors Act which provides for federal regulation of any work in, under or over navigable waters of the United States; Section 404 of the Clean Water Act which regulates the discharge of dredged or fill material in U.S. waters, including wetlands; and Section 103 of the Marine Protection, Research and Sanctuaries Act which regulates the transporting of dredging material for open water disposal.

To assist in evaluating the proposed work, the Engineers are soliciting public comments.

Written statements should be forwarded to their office no later than Monday, Jan. 30.

City Signs New 4-Year Contract For Hospital Management

A new four-year contract was signed by Mayor Francis X. McCauley and Hospital Corporation of America Management Co., Inc. for the management of Quincy City Hospital Tuesday morning, just prior to the Mayor's mid-term address.

Several hospital managers and city officials were present at the ceremony.

The new contract, which extends the present three year contract, will insure that the contract expire in the middle of a mayoral term rather than requiring future negotiations at the time of a possible mayoral transition.

Other changes are:

- The first-year fee shall be $769,400, an increase of eight percent from the current year. This figure represents a 12.25 percent increase over the first-year contract amount of the prior three-year agreement.
- Annual adjustments during this contract will be 1.33 times the cost of living adjustment with a seven percent cap each year.
- A guarantee by the HCA Management Co., Inc., parent company HCA has been deleted. HMC is the subsidiary of the HCA which manages all hospitals not owned by HCA and with an eight year track record by HMC, it was agreed to be unnecessary.

McCauley referred to the contract signing during his mid-term address Tuesday in the Council Chambers of City Hall.

"Eight years ago on the first Monday in Jan., 1981, the Hospital Corporation of America (HCA) took over the professional management of the Quincy City Hospital. This firm is one of the largest in the country.

"Six months later enterprise legislation which divorced the hospital from the city budget was passed. Over the past eight years, this has been an excellent agreement both for the City of Quincy, the hospital, and the patients of that hospital.

"The first contract was for five years and expired in January of 1986. Three years ago, in my Inaugural Address I announced that I'd signed a new three-year agreement with HCA.

"That agreement expired this morning and at 9 a.m. this morning, I signed a new, four-year agreement with HCA so they can continue to manage that hospital over the next four years," McCauley said.

Mayor To Seek Funds For Fire Dept. Study

During his mid-term address Tuesday, Mayor Francis McCauley announced he will recommend an appropriation of between $25,000 and $30,000 for an outside study of the Quincy Fire Department.

According to McCauley, the request for the study came from Acting Fire Chief Thomas Gorman. The study will be similar to the one conducted in 1986 on the Quincy Police Department.

"Chief Gorman and I have interviewed two firms, one is a consulting firm hired by the MMA and the other is a private consulting firm.

"While I haven't decided which firm to use, I have made a decision to recommend the appropriation of some $25,000 to $30,000 by the City Council to have this outside study done," McCauley said.

"I think it's a good idea from time to time to have studies done at least of our major departments, and I will be sending an order to the City Council regarding this matter within the next several weeks."

McCauley Recommends $100,000 Transfer To Hospital

Mayor Francis McCauley said Tuesday during his mid-term address he will recommend to the City Council $100,000 be transferred from the UDAG Fund to the Hospital Charitable Trust.

"In conjunction with the Hospital Replacement Project, the Quincy City Hospital was required to raise $1.6 million in funds, sort of equity capital, sort of hard down payment.

"We could have come to the Council for that $1.6 million, but, given the constrictions of Proposition 2½, I felt that that would not be the proper thing to do.

"A Hospital Charitable Trust was formed, and, in the last two and a half years, they have raised $1.4 million of that $1.6 million. They either have that money in the till or it's pledged over the next three years," the mayor said.

"However, I think the City of Quincy should participate," he said, adding that he will be making his recommendation "over the next several weeks."

"That will bring the committed money to over $1.5 million, and I think it will be relatively easy for the trust to raise the remaining $100,000."

Mental Health Center Receives $1.8 Million Grant

The South Shore Mental Health Center, Inc. has been awarded a grant of $1.8 million from the nation's largest health care philanthrophy to implement Project STAR.

The project is a four-year city-wide project to prevent the spread of AIDS and to provide outreach, home, and center based services to women and children who have been diagnosed as having the HIV infection.

The grant is one of 54 in the U.S. awarded by the New Jersey-based Robert Wood Johnson Foundation under its AIDS Prevention and Service Projects. STAR received the highest funding.

The Robert Wood Johnson Foundation was established in 1972 and to date has awarded more than $906 million in grants to improve health care for people of the U.S.

Keep Walkways, Stairs Clean Of Snow, Post Office Asks

The managers of the Quincy area Post Offices are asking residents to keep their walkways and stairs clear of snow and ice so that their letter carrier may be able to safely deliver their mail.

Letter carriers experience a high incidence of injuries resulting from slips and falls when icy and snowy weather conditions prevail, they said. Many of these accidents could be prevented if walkways and steps were shoveled, salted and sanded.

When a letter carrier suffers a serious injury due to Negligence, home owners are personally liable for any medical and lost work time and injury compensation costs, they noted.

Where threatening conditions compromise the safety of the letter carrier, mail delivery can be curtailed at a specific residence.

The managers thank customers who always maintain a safe route of delivery.

Safe access to your property benefits your letter carrier as well as all your friends and family who visit you, they said.

We care about our employees and ask you to ensure safe access to and from your property.

THE TOTAL COST OF PURCHASING A VEHICLE

When buying a vehicle there are two important factors to consider: the feeling and the total cost. Both should be kept in mind during the decision making process.

For most people, a vehicle represents something about thier personality, whether real or fantasized. The choice of make, model, options, and color is usually an emotionally based decision. Once you are swept up in that aspect of the process, be sure to also take the total financial implications into account. Remember, there is more to the bottom line of costs than the price you negotiate with your dealer.

Insurance costs should also be included in your consideration, and they may vary according to price, make and model. If you consult our agency before you make the purchase, we can determine exactly what it will cost to insure any given vehicle. Such information will help you make a fully considered choice.

If you are considering protection get in touch with the insurance professionals at Riley & Rielly Insurance Agency, Inc. Please visit our office at 1050 Hancock Street in Quincy or give us a call at 471-6200.

The Next Mayor?

The next mayor of Quincy may have been sitting there in the City Council chamber Tuesday when incumbent Francis McCauley quietly dropped his little bomb.

Or, maybe he wasn't there.

City Councillors Steve McGrath and James Sheets were at their desks at the mid-term ceremonies. Businessman Peter O'Connell was in the audience.

Former Mayor Joseph LaRaia was no where to be seen.

McCAULEY

One of the four will be Quincy's next mayor -- the 28th man to hold the office.

McGRATH

SHEETS

O'CONNELL

LaRAIA

LaRaia has already officially announced his candidacy. McGrath, Sheets and O'Connell will do so within the next few weeks.

It will be the largest mayoral field in some time. And the first primary election since 1979.

It should be one of the most interesting political years in modern Quincy history.

McCAULEY'S ANNOUNCEMENT he would not seek a fifth term took most of the audience by surprise. Even his wife, Sandra, didn't know for sure when she arrived at City Hall.

SANDRA

"I really don't know," she said when asked a few minutes before if McCauley was going to make his political plans official.

"But I began to sense that it was coming," she said, "as he spoke."

Others in the audience could feel it coming, too, when he spoke of past mayors and then said:

"On four occasions I was afforded the great honor of being sworn into office for a two year term as Mayor and then to deliver an inaugural address.

"On four other occasions, I've been privileged to be the guest of the City Council to deliver the mid-term address . . ."

And then, he pulled the grenade pin.

"As I have said, this is the eighth year I have been with you as the Mayor and it will be the last year I will be with you as the Mayor of the City of Quincy.

"After an awful lot of thought, soul-searching and discussion with family and friends, political supporters as well as some political opponents, I have decided not to seek a fifth term of the office of Mayor, but to serve out the last year of my fourth term and then return to private live."

Suddenly what was a routine mid-term story was a news blockbuster.

There was quick reaction from political figures. Words of praise, disappointment. Some were surprised, stunned. Some had thought he wasn't going to run, but he took them by surprise by announcing it when he did.

He had said he would announce his plans in January but gave no indication it would be this day in January.

But there was a pretty sure sign he was not going to run and that he might just make the announcement in his mid-term address.

McCauley had not booked the Quincy Neighborhood Club for any time in January. And that is where he always made his announcements about running and in January.

WHAT ARE HIS plans? First of all he and his wife will take a little vacation in Aruba.

Then what?

"I'll finish out my term."

And then?

"Find something in the private sector."

His wife has a feeling though, he is not through with politics.

"I think he will run again for public office."

But she declines to predict which one.

McCauley has had his share of critics in the past near eight years as mayor. Many have disagreed with him on certain decisions.

But most of them would agree that he had the courage to make them without counting votes. He really wasn't a politician in that regard.

He called them as he saw them -- right or wrong. He didn't let votes -- or lost votes -- sway him.

History, we think, will judge him as one of Quincy's top mayors.

Business Council Backs Cahill On Downtown Plan

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

After reviewing two proposals aimed at revitalizing downtown Quincy, the Quincy Business Council, comprised of concerned business owners, has unanimously agreed to support the plan set forth by City Councillor Timothy Cahill.

While members of the Quincy Business Council commend City Councillor Steve McGrath for his efforts to breathe life into the downtown area, after meeting with both proponents and reviewing their proposals we feel that Cahill's proposal better serves the residents and businesspeople of the city.

Foremost, the proposal focuses on a clearly defined area for development, thus creating no impact on surrounding residential sectors. Second, by creating a new zone, revitalization efforts will be targeted on a specific area, eliminating the chance that other areas will be affected. The plan will inspire creative building ideas and therefore attract developers to the downtown area. Fourth, serving as the Design Review Committee for building proposals, the City Council will retain the final approval on all projects.

With the feeling that Cahill's proposal represents a solid beginning to revitalization efforts, members of the Quincy Business Council urge other businesspeople, city councillors and residents to support this proposal to encourage business in the community. Quincy Center needs your support.

Please contact your City Councillor to voice your support.

If I could wish for one thing for Christmas it would be for a clean, beautiful environment, an environment where the ozore layer wouldn't have a large hole in it and be thinning. We would have an environment where garbage wouldn't be thrown on the ground and in the water, but placed in waste barrels. People could collect rain water themselves and use it for a lot of things such as washing dishes or even for cooking and drinking. No hazardous nuclear waste would be a danger if it could be regulated. In this environment people would be able to go outside, beathe fresh air, and know that their environment is clean and safe. It would be tough, but if we all worked together, we could beat pollution in a big way!

I would wish for world peace. I wish for that because this world is really too confusing. Everyday I open the newspaper, I always find articles about people killing people, dead bodies found here and there, wars, people starving, missing children and all kinds of other bad things.

I read articles about scientists trying, using and inventing new weapons to attack other people everyday on the paper. World leaders are worried day and night about dangerous weapons exploding and the whole world dying of the effects. Why can't the scientists try to find new ways to cure disease, instead of inventing new weapons?

Santa, if you could only grant me the wish of world peace, then everyone of us could have a happy and good life forever. There will be no more fighting, killing, disease, wars...etc. to worry about. Santa, please grant me my wish for this Christmas.

It would be the cure of all the sicknesses and diseases that exist in the world today. I feel that too many people and young children die because of disease. I also feel that if all the diseases were cured, then everybody in the whole world could live a happy life. For one thing, there would be no grief in a sick child's family. People also wouldn't have to worry about medical care. But the greatest benefit of this one wish is that a child could live a whole life of happiness with loved ones.

To have this very wish come true would make a big difference in the world.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

One hears the word 'love' bantered around, so much so, that it seems to have lost all meaning... Love is rarely wasted on the young. It is an abstract subject, not easily defined. One could say it borders on the ethereal. The husband and wife who share it, possess one of the most precious treasures on earth.

Love is conceived and nurtured through sharing both good fortune and bad. Those in love suffer the torments of the damned, when their loved one is ill. Love comes in the form of the secrets we share, it secludes us from all others. It is transferred to our offspring because they are our unique creation, a symbol of our love.

Love come in many forms; it may be a glance, a touch or a guarded smile. Love isolates us from the commonplace. The love for our Lord separates us from the animals and love of country creates better citizens.

If we love love, if we love friendliness, if we love helpfulness, if we love beauty, if we love health, if we love to create joy, if we love usefulness and not self-seekers, the spirit which expresses itself in love and helpfulness and beauty will enter into us and abide there.

We become what we love ...

Surprise, Disappointment And Praise

couple of weeks we'll make an announcement," he said.

Former Mayor Joseph LaRaia, who recently announced his candidacy for mayor and who came within 474 votes of upsetting Mayor Francis McCauley in the 1987 mayor race: "The issues are still there and his decision doesn't change our plans in addressing the issues of the campaign."

Referring to issues such as development, traffic, downtown revitalization as well as the environment and waste disposal, LaRaia said, "Those things I would like to see tackled and solved.

"As far as the mayor's race, I would just look at what's in front of me."

Senator Paul Harold: "It didn't come as a surprise to me that he wasn't going to be running again. The timing of it I think caught everyone by surprise.

"I think it was a wise decision; I think it is one that will be a benefit to both himself and also to the city. He's had a remarkable tenure in the office as mayor, one that we can all be proud of."

Sheriff Clifford Marshall: "I cannot honestly say that I am surprised that the mayor chose today because of the tone of his speech. As I sat and listened to him, it was obvious that he was in a relieved state of mind, one that was talking a great deal about the history and being a major part of the history of the city of Quincy in which I believe he was and that's the way he wanted to leave it.

"It's been said before that anybody in public office what they want at the end of their careers is to be able to hold their head high and walk down the streets of the community from which they served and be proud of it and I think Mayor Frank McCauley can do that today."

City Clerk John Gillis: "I'm really surprised at the timing. I didn't think he was going to run again by the way he was doing certain things but you never know about Frank McCauley but he did it was class and I hope he's happy with his decision."

City Council President Patricia Toland: "Frankly, I'm not greatly surprised because I kind of thought from different hints the mayor has given that he may not have run again. I was surprised that he announced it this morning but I think that he did so because he gave a long chronology of the history of the city and the mayors and in the contest of that, it was very appropriate and it had a lot of impact.

"Of course, the mayor is a very decisive person and once he makes a decision, he lives to get the word out.

"I think we have been very fortunate in having excellent mayors along the way and I think Mayor McCauley is certainly one of those excellent mayors. He did a very good job under the budget constraints of Proposition 2½ and I think he's done well with the money that he had and I congratulate him for it."

School Committee Vice Chairman Mary Collins: "It's been a real pleasure serving with Frank; my 11 years on the school committee eight of them have been with him as mayor and three as a councillor-at-large. He's made my job as a member of the School Committee a lot easier.

"He's a very practical, sensible, steady person. I feel the city is at a loss. I'm sure Mayor McCauley has put a lot of thought into this and it's best for himself and his family but we'll miss him tremendously.

Councillor Timothy Cahill: "I'd just like to take this moment to acknowledge and congratulate what Frank McCauley has done in the past seven years. I think he made a very wise decision. It's not reflective on whether he could get re-elected or not but just when it's time it's time.

"One of his keyes to success was knowing when to get out and I think he knows that in his own mind and I think that's important. I look forward to working with a new mayor, whoever that may be."

Ward 1 Councillor Michael Cheney: "I was shocked to hear the mayor make his announcement while giving a historical overview of the city. There is no doubt that he himself has made history today by making the announcement.

"Mayor McCauley has done an outstanding job fiscally for the city. I think he'll go down in history as one who has turned this city around fiscally."

School Supt. Dr. Robert Ricci: "I am very, very surprised that the announcement came today. From the school perspective, although at times I had differences with the mayor, I think he has been very fair."

Former Councillor Leo Kelly: "We people in Houghs Neck are extremely proud of Frank McCauley and his years of dedication to the City of Quincy and to his outstanding eight years of office as mayor.

"We wish him and Sandra the best of luck and we want them to continue to always be living in Houghs Neck along with the rest of us."

Mrs. Sandra McCauley: "I have mixed emotions. He's spent 25 years in politics and I know he's going to miss it but maybe he isn't through in politics.

"Knowing Frank, I wouldn't even say he is all through running for office. I think that he just felt this was the time to make his exit for now anyway and let somebody else have the honor of behind mayor and tackle the problems of the city. You deal with problems in the city for 25 years and it gets a little exhausting but I don't honestly think that he'll give up politics altogether.

"I don't have any office in mind but knowing Frank the way I do I just feel he cannot be content to sit on the sidelines indefinitely.

"He does plan on taking some kind of a job; what it is we have no idea. The year will tell what comes up but I still think politics is in his blood."

State Rep. Stephen Tobin: "The McCauley style of leadership will definitely be missed. I'm fortunate that I'll have a year to serve working as an elected official in the city with him and I hope that in the year that we'll both be serving and I'll be able to learn as much from him as I can."

John "Jake" Comer, executive director of the Quincy Housing Authority: "Well I was not surprised and in fact this morning as I left home I was commenting to my wife that all along I never thought he would be running and I thought he would announce here today.

"He's had eight years as to what I consider eight outstanding years. He's been a great mayor. Listing the free cash that he has and the type of fiscal responsibility that he's brought to the mayor's office determines that."

Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan: "I just like to congratulate the mayor, obviously it was a decision that was made not just for him but also for his family.

"The eight years of the McCauley administration have certainly been eight good years for the city."

Ward 6 Councillor Thomas Nutley: "I congratulate the mayor on a very effective, active term. Personally, I am very disappointed.

"I admire him tremendously for his courage and his restraint and his fiscal sense where he has stood up to everybody and run a really tight ship and ran this city well.

"I admire him and respect him and wish him well."

Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro: "I was very surprised that the mayor came out today with the announcement that he wasn't going to run. I didn't expect it until later on this month.

"On the whole, with the seven years that we've worked with the mayor, I've been happy with him except for a couple of decisions that he made that we didn't agree with, but overall I think the mayor has done a credible job for the city of Quincy."

Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien: "I have very much enjoyed working with the mayor in my first year on the city council.

"I disagreed philosophically on certain issues but I very much did have to admire his honesty, integrity and basic competence. The city has done well during his eight years."

Text Of McCauley's Decision

The text of Mayor McCauley's mid-term address pertaining to his decision not to seek re-election to a fifth term:

"Over the past twenty five years I've had the opportunity to attend many of these first Monday in January ceremonies. I've been sworn into office in the position of Ward Councillor, School Committee Councillor, and Councillor-at-Large. And for the past eight years it has been a very great privilege to be a part of these ceremonies as the Mayor.

"On four occasions I was afforded the great honor of being sworn into office for a two year term as Mayor and then to deliver an innaugural address. On four other occasions, I've been privileged to be the guest of the City Councilor to deliver the mid-term address on this first Monday of January.

"As I have said, this is the eighth year I have been with you as the Mayor, and it will be the last year I will be with you as the Mayor of the City of Quincy.

"After an awful lot of thought, soul-searching, and discussion with family and friends, political supporters as well as some political opponents, I have decided not to seek a fifth term of the office of Mayor, but to serve out the last year of my fourth term and then return to private life."

"When I step down, a year from today, I will have completed 25 years of elective office in Quincy...of the 437 individuals (who've served Quincy in elective office in 100 years), only four will have served longer in local office.

"I've had the privilege of serving with almost 10 per cent of those 437 people, 41.

"Prior to becoming Mayor, I had the great privilege of serving in the administration of five of my predecessors as Mayor.

"Politics has been a very interesting, challenging, rewarding, and sometimes, frustrating business. I think I can speak for all the elected officials here, both present and past, and, Steve Tobin, the future tomorrow, when I say that politics gets in your blood.

"President John Adams once said that 'politics is a disease for which there is no known cure.'

"But sooner or later the time comes in every politician's life when he or she must make the decision to step down, to leave the scene to other people.

"The late Congressman James A. Burke used to say 'You ought to leave while the music's still playing.'

"But I think the leaving of public office was best summed up by a friend of mine in the neighboring town of Braintree: Don Lang, a Braintree Selectman, startled his constituents a few years ago when he announced he would not seek re-election. When asked why, he simply said 'It's better to leave too soon than stay too long.'

Sayonara."

May Ours Be A City Of Peace And Light

The following invocation was given by Rev. Sheldon W. Bennett, minister of United First Parish Church, at the mid-term ceremonies Tuesday at City Hall:

"God of all faiths, Thou whose eternal justice, whose perfect freedom, and whose abiding love are the foundations of human community, may Thy wisdom and Thy guidance be with us now at mid-term, as we take up again the tasks of city government.

"Not only do we stand this day at the threshold of a new year, but we now set forth as a city upon a second century. Grant that we may bravely accept the challenges before us and boldly seize the opportunities as they come. Remembering that it takes time, care, and consideration to make good decisions, teach us patience as we would learn decisiveness. Save us from hot heads that would have us act foolishly. But save us, too, from cold feet that would keep us from acting at all. But let us neither be only lukewarm.

"May we as civic leaders be men and women of character and integrity equal to our high trust. Grant that we may have wisdom in our decisions, understanding in our thinking, love in our attitudes, and mercy in our judgments. Save us from bitterness and resentment, but lead us to mutual respect and a thoughtful hearing of one another.

"As we seek to be practical in our wisdom, may we also be generous in our compassion, and large in our vision, that ours may be a city in which life may flourish, as well as a city in which budgets balance.

"May ours be a city of greatness, not only in prosperity, but especially in spirit. May ours be a city in which the spirit of brotherhood and sisterhood is strong, that this city may be, not a city of hostility, but a city of hospitality, among all of Thy people — black and white, Asian and Irish, Catholic and Muslim, Jew and Protestant.

"May ours be a city that ever remains a city of peace and of light. May our lives be worthy of the noble heritage that is ours, and may all honor and glory ever be yours. In Thy name we pray, Amen."

Collins Takes Oath

School Committee Vice Chairwoman Mary Collins was sworn in as a Norfolk County Commissioner Wednesday in the Council Chambers of City Hall by "two good friends."

Collins, who was elected commissioner in November, asked Gov. Michael Dukakis to name Mayor Francis McCauley and Councillor Patricia Toland commissioners so that they could administer the oath of office.

Collins, who is up for re-election on the School Committee, has not announced whether she will seek re-election.

One vacancy has already been created on the board. Last week, Margaret "Peggy" Nigro announced she would step down from the School Committee to spend more time with her family.

Quincy Edges North In Tourney Consolation Game

The Quincy and North Quincy boys' basketball teams aren't scheduled for their first Suburban League meeting until next week, but they got to meet for the first time last week in the consolation game of the annual Christmas Tournament at Weymouth South High.

Both teams were defeated in the opening round and John Franceschini's Presidents edged Ted Stevenson's Raiders, 64-62, in a hard-fought consolation game. The win improved Quincy's record to 3-3 and dropped North to 1-5. Quincy has already won more games than it did all last year.

The Presidents played Brookline Tuesday in their league opener, will host Brockton Friday night at 7:30 and will play at Cambridge Rindge and Latin next Tuesday at 3:30.

The Raiders faced Newton North Tuesday in the first league game and will host Cambridge Friday night at 7:30. They will be idle Tuesday.

Mike Perkins led Quincy over North with 24 points and Jody Beauchamp added 11.

North was led by Kip Caldwell, who had an outstanding game with 19 points and 21 rebounds. Derek Goodson has 11 points. Eric DeBoer's three-point shot at the buzzer went off the rim.

In the opening round of the tournament Weymouth North topped North Quincy, 63-53, and host Weymouth South defeated Quincy, 83-63.

Goodson paced the Raiders with 18 points and Caldwell added 12.

For Quincy Joe Russell had 20 points, including five three-pointers, Beauchamp had 18 points and Perkins contributed 12.

Weymouth South won the tournament with a 65-54 win over Weymouth North.

North Girls Bow To Weymouth

The North Quincy girls' basketball team dropped a 47-44 decision to Weymouth South last week in the finals of the annual Christmas Tournament, the first time in four years the Raiderettes have not won the tournament. The loss dropped North's record to 3-3.

Paul Bregoli's Raiderettes had defeated Weymouth North, 50-39, in the opener.

Doug MacFarlane's Quincy girls lost to Weymouth South, 37-24, and to Weymouth North, 44-35.

Deirdre Murphy paced North against Weymouth North with 22 points, 14 rebounds and three blocked shots. Paula Tolson had 17 points and four steals and Kellene Duffy, who played a solid game, five steals and four assists.

In the championship game Weymouth South led at the half, 26-17, but North tied it at 30 midway in the third quarter with Murphy dominating the inside play to score 11 of her team's 13 points.

However, South spurted again to take a 36-31 lead into the fourth quarter. Foul shooting became a problem as North continually went to the foul line and hit for only three of 10. North was dealt a blow when Murphy fouled out with 3½ minutes to play.

The Raiderettes, trailing by five, tied it at 44 as Duffy, Kara Sullivan and Paula Tolson hit down the stretch. But, while North was missing at the line, South made three to get the win.

Murphy had 20 points, 11 rebounds and four steals and was named a tournament all-star. Debbie Panaro had seven points, four rebounds and three steals, Duffy six points and five assists and Tolson six points, seven rebounds and five assists.

In Quincy's opening night loss Tracy Shea led the scoring with seven points.

Against Weymouth North Christine Barrett scored eight points and Jennifer Dondero seven.

North Quincy opened its Suburban League season Tuesday against undefeated Newton North, and will host Cambridge Rindge and Latin Friday at 5 o'clock. It will be idle Tuesday.

Quincy met Brookline Tuesday in the league opener, will be at Brockton Friday at 7:30 and will host Cambridge Tuesday at 5 o'clock.

Record Turnout For Winter Track At North

By TOM SULLIVAN

After three seasons of relatively low numbers, the coaching staff welcomed a record 52 boys and 35 girls for the North Quincy winter track teams.

Girls coach Jeff Hennessy has returned after spending the last five years coaching the UMass/Boston women's team and leading them to four NCAA Division 3 championships and three runnerup sports. He is assisted by former North captain and state champion Nancy McCarthy, a Holy Cross graduate.

Peter Chrisom is back as boys' coach and is assisted by Ken McPhee.

The boys and girls' squads practice together with Hennessy handling the sprinters and hurdlers, McCarthy the middle and long distance runners, Chrisom the field events and McPhee the strength and conditioning program in the weight room. It is hoped that, with the increased numbers, the boys can improve on last year's 1-5 record and the girls their 3-3 mark.

Leading the boys' thin distance corps is senior Brian Barrett, 27th in Division 2 cross country last fall, and Andy Wohlrab, a junior. They will alternate between the mile and two-mile.

Middle distance runners include senior Dan Kallenberg, juniors Mike Doherty and Brian Glennon, sophomores Pat Faherty, Joe Matheny, Chi Young and Justin Belanger.

The sprinters have good depth and talent, led by senior football standouts Ryan Craig and Sean Glennon, juniors Keith Gott and Kevin MacDougall. Also looking good are Blaine D'Acci, Gary Rawdon, Jim Rayne, Andy McPhee and Wayne Sit. Freshman sprinters include Dave Bellanich, Bill Chan, Mike Kane, Dan O'Shea, Chris Peck and Mike Yee.

Hurdlers are led by senior captain Jim Chou and Steve Ziolkowski. Others are freshmen Greg Buck, Marc Larson and Paul Kerr.

Nine boys are throwing the shot. Craig, Glennon and Dave Joyce, along with sophomore Chris Lineman have been impressive. Others are Mike Oliva, Adam Strout, Chris Campbell, Jim McTiernan and Steve Oaks.

High jumpers are senior Brian Mahoney, sophomores Kevin Glennon and Hiep Ngo and freshman Marc Larson. No relay teams have been set as yet.

"League-wise Brockton and Cambridge appear to be the best in the league," said Chrisom. "Hopefully the number of candidates will help. Last year we had only 16-20 boys and this is a definite improvement."

The girls' squad is thinner, but twice the size of last year's team. Almost all of last year's girls are back and an impressive crew of freshmen and sophomores should help.

The distance runners are senior captain Bridget Toland, Joanna Moriarty and league all-star Sherrin Quintiliani.

The middle distance runners are led by four-year veteran Karen Cashman. Other returnees are sophomores Amanda Young, Claire Walsh and Jenn Flynn.

Newcomers include junior Fiona McDonagh, sophomore Danielle Lewis and freshmen Jennifer McDonough, Suzanne Sidahmed, Cindy Walsh and Amy Wong.

The sprinters are led by senior captain Robin Guilfoy, who will run the 50 as well as throwing the shot. Others, all rookies with no experience, including Becky Zadig, juniors Nathaly Nolido and Michelle Sardo, sophomores Erica Ogden and Carol Wirtz and freshmen Tammy Coull and Cheryl Kelly.

Hurdlers include returning soph. Tristen Mastrogiacomo, along with newcomers Ruth Adams, a sophomore, and freshman Maria Mattson.

Shot putters include juniors Christine Mazrimas, Maura McGlame and Katie Wismar and soph veteran Maria Gavros.

The high jump, the weakest event, has Cashman and several others who are learning.

North Girls Defeat Waltham

The North Quincy girls' freshman basketball team improved to 2-1 with a 44-32 victory over Waltham.

Tricia Hughes led the way with 19 points and 10 steals. Cidy Mitton has eight points and 12 rebounds, Erin Duffy four points and 12 steals, while Jenny White, Stephanie Olsen and Brenda O'Connor played excellent defense.

North lost its opening game to Braintree, 52-46, falling behind, 16-2, early. The young Raiderettes rallied and trailed by only 22-20 at the half and, after the teams went back and forth, North fell short late in the fourth quarter.

Hughes had an oustanding game with 27 points, seven steals and six assists. Olson had seven points, Melanie Moffet five and O'Connor and White had fine defensive games.

North came back to Overwhelm Newton South, 60-21. The Raiderettes roared to a huge 31-2 lead and never looked back.

Mitton had 27 points, White 10 and Hughes eight as nine players scored. Hughes, Cindy White, Jenny White, Olson, Tara Guarnieri and Noreen McDonagh all played fine defense.

2-Way Tie For Top In WPH League

Findley's and AGWIAB remained in a top tie in the WPH Hockey League after playing to a 2-2 tie at the Quincy Youth Arena.

Findley's scored first on Tom McLaughlin's goal with Bill Shea and Rich Cobban assisting. AGWIAB tied it 22 seconds later. The score remained tied until Findley's Marty Tolson gave Findley's the lead but AGWIAB tied it with five minutes to play.

Marc Nantel of Findley's lowered his league-leading goals against average to 2.08.

Roman Gardens and LeSnappe Rouge skated to a 4-4 tie. LeSnappe took a quick 3-1 lead on goals by Tom Chisholm, Ted Viles and Glen Peterson, but Roman Gardens scored two goals in the second period and one in the third to tie it up. Dave McNulty of Roman Gardens had his first hat trick of the season.

Tom Cadigan had a fantastic night with seven goals and Beau O'Shaughnessy had six as Sullivan Tire bombarded the Varmints, 18-1. Jack Walsh had the lone goal for the Varmints.

Mite Bs Move Up

After winning four games in a row, Quincy's Mite B hockey team was moved up to the Open Division of the Greater Boston League. The Open Division consists of strong B teams and the weaker A teams.

For some reason, Quincy, with a 5-2 record, was moved up while South Boston, with a 6-1 mark, stayed in the lower division.

Although the Mite B's have lost their first three games in their new division, they have played good, solid hockey.

In Monday's 3-1 loss to Medfield at the Canton rink, Quincy outplayed the winners at both ends of the ice but ran into an extremely hot goalie.

Quincy's only score came in the third period when Kevin Regan hit Matt Flynn with a perfect pass for a breakaway on which Flynn rifled a shot past the goalie. Regan was robbed of two goals earlier as were Mike Gallagher and Pat McGann. Regular wing Chris Carthas played in goal when the regular goalie was unable to play and did an outstanding job.

Squirt As Hot

Quincy's Squirt A hockey team, sponsored by South Boston Savings Bank, took five out of a possible six points in Greater Boston League play and improved its record to 6-1-1.

The team defeated Parkway, 5-1, and South Boston, 7-1, while tying Medfield, 1-1 to close in on the league leader.

Against Parkway Quincy overcame a sluggish start to rally for two goals in each of the final two periods, while holding Parkway scoreless until the final minute of play. Ron McGann, Steve Barrett, Brendan O'Brien, A.J. Carthas and Robbie Callow scored the goals. John Healey had two assists and Barrett, O'Brien, Jenna Nolan, Tom Sullivan and Jamie Murphy one each.

The tie with Medfield saw some outstanding work by Quincy goalie Mark Smith, who had a 1-0 shutout until Medfield scored with just two seconds left in the game when it pulled the goalie and scored on a desperation shot.

In the win over South Boston McGann had a hat trick, O'Brien two goals and Callow and Murphy one each. Callow had two assists and McGann and Barrett one apiece.

Goalie Brian Beaton was outstanding, especially in the first period when he allowed one goal and made 16 spectacular saves.

Quincy came back to top Falmouth, 6-3. John Barron, Eric Wood, Betsy Stone, Ryan, John Bertucci and Michael Sullivan scored the goals and Matt Langille, Barron, Winter, Bertucci and Chris DiMattia had two assists apiece and Ryan, McTomney and Billy Graney one each. Bantam As Start Second Half Sunday

Quincy's Bantam A hockey team, now sponsored by Bryan VFW post, starts the 2nd half of its season Sunday against All-Bright at Boston University with a 7-2 record.

Quincy is in fifth place in the 15-team Division 1 Greater Boston League standings. The team is averaging 5.4 goals a game and has scored 49 goals to 21 for its opponents.

Adding both offensive and defensive depth are Shane Abboud, Mark Gilmore, Mike Morrison, Mike O'Brien and Matt Swierk, all outstanding defensemen, and Chris McCallum, a fine forward.

Sharing the best goals-against average in the league (2.3) are goalies Sean Connelly and Dennis Ruggere. They have three shutouts in nine games.

"Considering the team is comprised of 12 first-year and six second-year Bantams, I looked on this as a building year," said coach Jim Gilmore. "Much to our delight, they have proven to be seasoned players and have constantly shown the spirit and competitiveness required at this level to be the winners they are." Gilmore acknowledged the efforts of assistant coaches Tom Connelly and Joe Zona.

The Bantam A team will compete in the annual Kiwanis Tournament next month at the Quincy Youth Arena and again at the Lake Placid Invitational tournament in March.

Joanna Vermette Presented Garden Good Sport Award

Joanna Vermette, a senior at North Quincy High, was presented a Boston Garden Good Sport Award by Garden president Larry Moulter.

She was honored for supporting her school through participation, enthusiasm and encouragement in all areas of school and community activities.

"Four years ago Joanna joined our swimming team," said North coach Bill Walker. "She is still not the best swimmer in our program, but certainly is the most appreciated. BIRTHDAY THIS WEEK
Your most notable trait is ambition; you set your sights on a goal and diligently strive to reach it. You're also a creature of habit. The next six months focus on personal goals; the latter half of '89 favor professional goals. In both areas, a slightly unconventional approach may work to your advantage.

AQUARIUS – January 21 - February 19
An important resolution is to work at becoming more assertive. The sooner you refine this trait, the sooner you make key strides on the job. Family support comes from an unexpected source.

PISCES – February 20 - March 20
Recent career decision may be subject to revision. Visitors may be arriving in droves. A financial news-brightener brightens the picture. Good week for drafting resolutions.

ARIES – March 21 - April 20
Your specialty this week is in arranging large or intimate functions. Watch habit of promising too much to too many. A so-so project becomes much more interesting by Wednesday.

TAURUS – April 21 - May 22
Individualistic streak is prominent and wins you the respect of someone you hold in esteem. A recent recommendation of yours is passed. Think twice before accepting community assignment.

GEMINI – May 23 - June 21
Disappointing message received in late '88 may not be all correct. Short trip could be lengthened. A key platonic relationship is launched as the year gets under way.

CANCER – June 22 - July 22
Rearranged plans are finalized - - at long last. Financial matters dominate your time and merit close scrutiny. Impulsive streak begins to surface and should be kept in check,

LEO – July 23 - August 22
Travel is indicated and may lead to a renewed friendship. Other friends may be feuding, and it's best - - though difficult - - for you to stay out of the fray.

VIRGO – August 23 - September 22
Ideas that seem inconsequential begin to show that they have a good deal of substance. Variety is the theme of the week. Some joint ventures require clarification.

LIBRA – September 23 - October 22
Loved one is unusually persuasive, and you may have to move your wishes to the sidelines - - at least until Monday. Your own ingenuity brings successes on the job and in the community.

SCORPIO – October 23 - November 21
Your carefree mood proves contagious, and you're not the only one who finds it hard to concentrate. Visitor brings some important news. Economics may not be current strong suit.

YMCA Strypers Off To Fast Start

The South Shore YMCA Strypers swim team is off to a fast start in its second year of Division 1 competition.

After meets against some of the toughest opponents, Melrose, Beverly and Brockton, the E girls (8 and under) team, A girls (15-18) team and D boys (9-10) team are undefeated.

Pacing the girls E team is a freestyle relay team of Meridith Curley, Angelina Cangiano, Erin Murphy and Kate Palmeria, who came within one second of setting a New England record. They have a good chance of bettering their 1:03.5 time and breaking the record of 1:02.41.

The A girls are led by Captains Tracey Feeney, Loretta Orlando and Kim Bray, Sheila Dillon, Shannon Connolly, Cindy Galman, Erin Keneally and Blythe Bumpus.

They face a real challenge Saturday against Andover.

The D boys are led by their 200-yard freestyle relay team (2:10.12) of James M. Keyes, James Morelli, Cory Madera, Terrence Roche and Paul Zukauskas, who was New England's best freestyle swimmer last year.

They also face a major challenge Saturday against Andover.

In the other age groups the Y has many standout swimmers.

For the B boys (13-14) David Cangiano has done a 1:00.2 in the 100 butterfly and a 1:00.45 in the 100 backstroke.

The A boys (15-18) 400 freestyle relay team of Captains Brad Tilden and Tim Roche, Richard Griffen and Eric Stenfors defeated Melrose by less than a yard with a time of 3:45.81.

$1.2 M Elks Home Gets Council Go-Ahead

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

A $1.2 million home for the Quincy Lodge of Elks to be built on a nine and a half acre site on Quarry St. in West Quincy was unanimously approved by the City Council

The motion to approve the building was made by Ward 4 Councillor James Sheets, who said the Elks have endured a "long journey" in search of a new home.

The Elks, a well-known charitable organization, was founded in 1904 and first occupied a building on Foster St.

The lodge built a new home in 1924 at 1220 Hancock St., Quincy Center, and remained there for 56 years. They then moved to their present, temporary home at the former Miles Standish School on East Squantum St.

The new home will consist of a two-story, 18,130 square foot building.

"They have come a long way," said Atty. Robert Fleming who represented the Elks. "It has been a building that has been in the works for a long time."

The $1.2 million cost covers building construction, foundation, 209 parking spaces and landscaping.

Among the new home's features will be a first floor with a function hall and kitchen and a ground floor with a member's lounge, meeting rooms, recreation area, offices and ancillary facilities.

According to Fleming, the home will not impact the neighborhood since the closest any homes will be to the building is 400 to 500 feet away.

He also noted that the building will be located 200 feet off Quarry St.

In voicing their approval, several councillors also thanked the Elks for their community service and charitable endeavors over the years.

"The Quincy Lodge of Elks has a long and outstanding history of service in the city of Quincy," Sheets said.

Ward 2 Councillor Theodore DeCristofaro said, "I feel very strongly for the things they have done in the past," pointing out the annual food basket drive the Elks conduct every Christmas season.

Ward 6 Councillor Thomas Nutley said the Elks "have been a good neighbor" since they relocated to the former Standish School.

Thanks

City of Quincy, Massachusetts

Office of the Mayor

A Centennial Message

It is my pleasure as Mayor to address the citizens on the occasion of the 100th anniversary of Quincy as a city.

There are many wonderful things happening in the City this year. We have made great strides since our forefathers voted to incorporate Quincy as a City in 1888, and obviously, many changes have taken place.

It is evident that over the years, elected officials, community agencies and neighborhood leaders have worked hard to make Quincy a fine place to live, to work and to raise a family.

Today, the City of Quincy faces many challenging issues and projects.

Government officials and citizens have joined forces to preserve the natural environment of Quincy through rezoning land to "open space".

City and state officials were instrumental in the creation of the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority, the agency which will clean up Quincy Bay. The clean up will allow all of our citizens to enjoy this great natural resource.

Downtown Quincy is undergoing a revitalization. There are two large projects taking place in this area of the City.

On the site of the familiar Bargain Center, the Presidents Place project promises to revitalize the northern rim of downtown Quincy, while the Remick's building is currently undergoing renovation.

There are major municipal projects going on in Quincy. The renovation and addition to the Quincy Police Station and the Quincy City Hospital replacement are two dynamic projects.

The Quincy Police Station will be upgraded to a better, more attractive building, adding much needed space. The front of the addition boasts a wonderful colored stone replica of the City seal.

The hospital project, when completed, will make the hospital one of the finest health care facilities in the area.

It is difficult to guess what visions the honorable Charles H. Porter had for the City when he was inaugurated as the first Mayor, January 7, 1889, but I think he would be pleased with how far we have come as a City in the last century.

And, today as Mayor, I have to wonder what exciting events will face our future generations.

I am sure that with the cooperation of all its citizens, the City of Quincy will continue to be a great City.

Sincerely yours,

Francis X. McCauley

Quincy: Transition From A Town To A City

Between 1860 and 1910 the United States experienced an extraordinary growth and development of urban areas. In 1860 the rural population was four times the size of the urban. By 1920 both were equal.

Fundamental economic changes spurred this growth. Specialization of labor in factories and mills caused the rise of trade and manufacturing areas. During the 1880's, immigration reached a new peak with 5.3 million newcomers entering the United States primarily from Southern and Eastern Europe. By 1910 more than thirty percent of city dwellers had come from rural areas and forty one percent had come from other countries.

The rapid growth of the urban population made it difficult for local governments to provide efficiently the essential services necessary for a concentrated population. A new technology was needed to cope with the problems of transportation, water supply, waste disposal, housing, roads, and lighting.

During the 1870's ordinary citizens stressed the need for better education, public safety, and preservation of open space and joined the movements to make governments more efficient and responsive. By the 1880's urban reform was a national issue. Municipal governments began to centralize authority and turn to experts in the field of government.

The Town of Quincy was in the mainstream of this movement. By 1870, population had increased to 7,442 residents with community centers of retail stores located in Quincy Proper, Quincy Point, South Quincy and West Quincy. What became Wollaston, Norfolk Downs and Atlantic were mostly farms and large estates. Only twenty-five percent of the population was foreign born and by far the largest number of these immigrants were Irish.

The early churches, First Parish and Christ Church Parish, had been joined by the Evangelical Congregational Church (now Bethany), the First Universal Church, three Catholic Churches and a Baptist Church.

This scene was to change dramatically in the next twenty years. Population would more than double. By 1875 aproximately 39% of Quincy residents had been born in the town, 36% had moved from other parts of Massachusetts and the United States and 27% were immigrants. Within this twenty year period, migration from Sweden would be large enough to warrant the establishment in 1888 of an evening school division of the public schools to provide instruction in English for Swedes.

To accomodate all newcomers, eight more churches would be established primarily in West Quincy, Quincy Point, and Wollaston, the fastest growing neighborhoods of the city.

A new street car line from Quincy Center to Houghs Neck opened that area for summer visitors. The Western Union Telegraph Company extended its line to the Quincy Depot, and the first public telephone station opened in 1882 in the drug store of Arthur B. Hayward at 5 Temple Street.

The Quincy Water Company was building a 64 acre reservoir in Braintree, and by 1876 there were already 100 street lamps in Quincy. The event, however, that would have one of the greatest effects on Quincy's move from town to city was the purchse of a large tract of land in 1870 by the Wollaston Heights Land Company.

Coping with this rapid development was the town government of which Quincy citizens were proud.

Daniel Munroe Wilson states the sentiment in Where American Independence Began: "In the old New England town meeting every man is conscious of his sovereignty and counts for all he is worth, and all business and elections are done aboveboard and by unquestioned majorities."

John Quincy Adams II had introduced reforms in the Town Meeting in the 1870's with wit, fairness and expertise. Ladies observed from the gallery, men removed their hats and took their seat and a committee of fifteen guided discussion.

Henry Hardwick Faxon, temperance agitator and public benefactor could always be trusted to insure that this "Wisdom Corner" would not stray from a righteous course.

When not serving as a volunteer constable without pay to preserve Quincy as a "no license" dry town, voters could rely on him to challenge the town meeting with his speeches (forty times by actual count at a single session).

The town meeting in its existing form had, however, outlived its usefulness. The population was now too large. The Town Hall could not hold all the voters who wished to attend the meetings and speak. Even meetings at the skating rink could not accomodate the crowds.

Moreover, the needs of the town, citizen demands for increased services, and the increase of commerce and industry required a different decision-making process. A centralized administration with direct authority was needed.

Wollaston Heights had become an important feature of the town's demography. Established in 1870 to develop homes for Boston businessmen who brought their families to the clean air and water of Quincy, it was a thriving community in the 1880's and boasted of a religiously tolerant community with three new churches: First Baptist (1871), First Congregational (1876), and Methodist Episcopal (1885).

Twenty-four trains took commuters to and from Boston each day from the Wollaston Depot. A free commuting pass was given to each homeowner for one year. Later, the free pass was extended for three years.

In 1873, the community had its own permanent school. By 1889, Wollaston would even have its second bank.

"There's no place like home" and there's no home like a home at Wollaston Heights" was the proud claim of its advertising pamphlet.

It was in the Heights that the movement for a change in local government formally began. At the end of 1884, 500 people attended a Wollaston meeting where a committee was appointed to study the question of a change to a city form of government. On January 3, 1885 Josiah Quincy VI presented an extensive report which was "ardently" debated at a later public meeting of six to seven hundred citizens who met at the Coliseum on January 8, 1985. Eleven months later, two more reports were filed to represent majority and minority views.

"WHERE IT ALL BEGAN"--The Coliseum, at the right rear of the then Town Hall and across the tracks from the Quincy Railroad Station, was the site of the meeting where by vote of 812 to 454, the town government became the City of Quincy in 1888.

The public meeting on November 30, 1885 at which Henry Hardwick Faxon and William Everett, Master of the Adams Academy, opposed the change became too "hot" and was adjourned for one week.

In response to the majority who were in favor of a change, Theophilus King was chosen to chair a committee of fifteen to frame a charter. Two young lawyers, Josiah Quincy and Signourey Butler were commissioned as a sub-committee to make an extensive study of municipal government in the United States. For one year, they communicated with public officials all over the country who had knowledge and practical experience with the issue of safeguards to prevent the corruption that was plaguing other American cities at the time.

Public meetings, debates and many amendments occurred before the town meeting of December 1, 1887 when the charter was approved and sent to the state legislature. It was passed on May 17, 1888 without debate and signed by Governor Oliver Ames on the same day (Chapter 347, Acts of Massachusetts, 1888).

On June 11, 1888 the Selectmen of the Town of Quincy called a special Town Meeting in response to a petition. 1,266 citizens from an electorate of more than 2400 voters attended. The vote was 812 to 454. The issue was decided by a majority of 358 votes. The pealing of bells, the sound of horns and guns, and the explosion of fireworks greeted the announcement that Quincy would officially become a city on the first Tuesday of December, 1888.

The "model charter" was unusual for its time. It created a strong mayor who had the authority to appoint and remove department heads at his own discretion. The city was divided into six wards which would be represented by 18 ward councillors and 5 councillors-at-large, elected annually. Management of the school department was placed in the hands of an elected school committee, three chosen at-large and one from each of the wards who would serve without pay.

Under the powers of the new charter, the city government guided Quincy into the 20th century. Population grew from 16,723 in 1890 to 32,642 in 1910. In the 1890's the immigration pattern in Quincy had shifted to people of Italian ancestry. Quincy's houses of worship had been joined by the First Orthodox Synagogue Congregation, Ahavath Achim (Brotherly Love) which was gathered in 1890 and incorporated in 1899. There were a number of new land developments.

Among these, a new suburban land company purchased the Massachusetts Fields and held a contest which produced the name of Norfolk Downs.

The Manet Land Associates began to develop Houghs Neck. Assessors' records indicated a growth from a tax rate of $16.70 on 2,453½ dwellings with a real estate value of $7,825,250 in 1888 to a tax rate of $28 on 6,353 homes with a real estate value of $25,108,750 in 1910. A small population in Houghs Neck was hosting a summer population of more than 3,000.

Quincy's tax base was kept secure, however, when the state legislature rejected the petition of Houghs Neck to secede from Quincy and become the town of Seagirt.

Finally, the Quincy Daily Ledger reported on August 7, 1913 that in an eight hour period in July, seventeen motor vehicles per hour had travelled on Newport Avenue. When 3,525 motor vehicles and 90 horse-drawn vehicles passed a checkpoint on a hot Sunday afternoon in July, the time had come for extra police to direct traffic and protect pedestrians.

Indeed, Quincy had firmly established itself as the Gateway to the South Shore!

Granite Played Major Role In City's Growth

By Edward James Iorio V
Grade 11 Quincy High School
(Centennial Scholar)

World famous Quincy granite is a significant part of Quincy's history and fundamental in Quincy's transition from a rural town to a prosperous city, providing the necessary capital to support the town's growth and drawing a wave of immigrants which helped to build the city.

In the 19th century, before Quincy's transition from a town to a city, the granite industry was by far the greatest of Quincy's industries trailed by Quincy's shoe, tool, and building industries.

The granite's composition, location and the caliber or skill which it drew, all contributed to the Quincy granite industry's great success. In truth, Quincy's history cannot be examined without first examining its granite industry which contributed so much to Quincy's development and fame.

Quincy granite or riebeckite - aegirite granite ranges in appearance from a medium bluish gray to a dark bluish gray. The granite is riddled with dark spots and is basically comprised of gray feldspar, medium to dark smoky quartz, some lime soda feldspar, riebeckite or hornblende and aegirite or augite.

Quincy granite's demand can be attributed to the granite's composition. Since it lacks mica and incorporates hornblende and augite instead, it can be polished to a smoother finish than many other types of granite. Its unusually high density and resistance to compression also made it attractive as a building stone.

The granite's high density, however, also made it difficult to transport. Its coarse grain, requiring intensive hammering and polish and its lack of cleavage lines, also made it expensive to produce. In order for the granite to produce a significant profit, its transportation problems had to be solved to counterbalance its production cost for competition to make it competetive, and of course they were.

Conveniently, the quarries were situated in such a way that they had easy access to cheap salt water transportation, namely vessels that could navigate the Neponset River. This gave the Quincy granite industry an early advantage and helped its development.

Sloops and schooners, some of which were built in Quincy, provided for the granite's transportation. Peleg Jones, whose shipyard was located in Quincy Point, originated the design for the granite sloop and constructed eight sloops and one schooner for the industry between 1835 and 1868.

Transportation, however, still remained a problem. The granite had to get to the tidewaters before it could be loaded onto its transport ships. At this time, heavy carts drawn by oxen or horses were used to transport the granite to tidewater. To shorten the distance, the Quincy Canal Corporation constructed a canal for large sloops and schooners in 1826.

This canal ran from the tidemill dam at Town River Bay to present day Washington Street. The transportation problem was further assessed by Gridley Bryant who won the consent of prominent Boston men in the fall of 1826 and the backing of Thomas Perkins, the richest merchant in Boston. He built a railway from a quarry to the tidewater of Massachusetts Bay. The cost of the railway completed in 1826 came to $33,158.95.

It had over three miles of rail and allowed granite transportation from the Bunker Hill Quarry to the Bunker Hill Wharf on the Neponset River. Notable in its own right, the railway was the first commercial railway in America. On March 27, 1827, the Granite Railway Company contracted with the Bunker Hill Monument Association. Three thousand tons of granite were shipped to the Neponset River where it was then shipped to Charlestown by boat.

Although construction of the Bunker Hill Monument was by no means efficient, it was a revolutionary accomplishment. Its construction was a revolutionary idea, and techniques were incorporated by Solomon Willard, earning him the title "Father of the Granite Industry in America."

Drawing skilled laborers from other states as well as foreign immigrants, the Quincy granite industry flourished in the 19th century. The first were Northern Europeans and most were Irish and Scottish. They arrived after 1826 and settled in West Quincy. Next came the Swedes and then the Finns who began to migrate into Quincy in large numbers after 1880.

The Finnish and Swedish community developed in the South and West areas of Quincy. Brewer's Corner was the central shopping area for them. Next came the Italians who migrated to Quincy at the close of the 19th century. They worked as granite cutters, quarrymen and granite polishers. Many of the Italians were highly skilled in the art of sculpting. The Italians also settled in South Quincy and in the Brewer's Corner area. Many of these immigrants found their first job opportunity in the thirty granite quarries at the height of the industry.

The most familiar were Swingle's Quarry and the Granite Railway Quarry.

Immigrants also found work in the stone cutting industry located in South Quincy which supported an expanding tool industry. The stone cutting industry became particularly hazardous when power tools came into use. The workers breathed in large amounts of stone dust which ruined their lungs.

Treatment of the workers was the major reason for the founding of Quincy City Hospital. In the quarries, the granite was drilled and blasted, hoisted out of the quarries to be split into blocks, hammered, finished, and then moved to be polished. The process was dangerous as were all jobs in Quincy's various industries. Deaths were not unknown.

By 1895, the value of the goods produced and the work done involving the stone industry was $1,886,698 a year. The stone industry employed 66% of all the people who were involved in an industrial work in Quincy, paying a total of $899,296 in salaries.

By the late 19th century, the granite industry had peaked and was then in a state of decline. This decline was brought on by various reasons, the foremost of which was the drop in demand for granite as a building material due to the use of steel and concrete. A further cause of the decline was the loss of Quincy's transportation advantage with the construction of roads and the use of trucks which made inland sources more accessible. Despite these developments, the granite industry survived through the demand for granite grave stones, paving stones and breakwaters. These, however, were not as profitable as granite's use as a building material.

The industry was dealt a final blow by the Great Depression and the closing of Swingle's quarry in 1963. This marked the end of Quincy as a granite city. The stonecutting industry survived, however, and still continues to produce fine work to this day, although being dependent on Quincy granite alone.

The granite industry has not left without a trace. Some of the quarries in West Quincy are still open but mainly used by practicing mountain climbers. The granite industry also left its mark in the shape of monuments and structures throughout America. Structures comprised of Quincy granite can be found in as many as fourteen states, including such far off places as Illinois and Wisconsin.

Outstanding granite structures are numerous including the old City Hall and the First Parish Church. The granite industry should be remembered for its instrumental role in Quincy's development by providing the capital for its growth and supporting various other industries which include shipbuilding, the railroad industry and the tool industry. The granite industry attracted and employed scores of new immigrants, some of whom became mayors of the City of Quincy. Indeed, one cannot visualize Quincy's past without examining its granite foundations.

Public Education In 1888

By Marsha Goodman
Grade 11 Quincy High School
(Centennial Scholar)

An exciting thing to look at when comparing present day Quincy with the Quincy of 100 years past, is education in the year 1888. In order to gain a better understanding of the education system, it helps to have a little knowledge of education in Quincy in the years before Quincy's transformation to a city.

Education had historically been a prime interest among the people of Quincy and Old Braintree -- from William Coddington's provision of funds for maintaining public schools in 1640 and for many years after, to the town of Old Braintree's contribution of eighty-seven pounds, fourteen shillings and six pence, about $292.43 in 1669 towards the then young and struggling Harvard College.

It is also mentioned that in earliest times, when the town was founded, there was marked advance in schools and education.

"Promptly the settlers placed the public school by the side of the church, and the early opening of a private school for 'young gentlewomen' carries an impression of culture." Beyond that, records from 1735 referring to Quincy as 'having kept a free Latin School for about ninety years' indicate the first school house may have been built as early as 1645. Obviously, Quincy has held education in high esteem for many, many years.

By the 1800's education was well underway in Quincy, having survived a switch to a new town government. The town had been through the rebuilding of schoolhouses due to location problems, overcrowding and even a fire in 1815, and by 1829 the situation called for the installation of the district system. New schoolhouses were built in widely separated parts of the town with three built that first year and two more the next. The first free public high school was built in 1852, and by 1878 there were a total of thirty five schools in Quincy.

However, other problems besides the building of school houses were erupting. A school committee of sorts -- actually a fact-finding committee, with John Quincy Adams II heading it -- was established in 1873, and it went after the problems of Quincy schools with a vengeance.

Although the first two evening schools were beginning in 1870, at the Adams and Willard Schools, there were troubles in the regular schools. "The average graduate of the grammar school in 1878 could read but falteringly, and could barely write an ordinary letter in a legible hand with words correctly spelled." Other complaints were that there was "immobility in the schools; no advance in ten years; little change and no improvement in a century." There were serious accusations and Quincy set about finding a solution to these problems. The solution was to employ a specialist to undertake a complete renovation of the school system.

Colonel Francis W. Parker was the person who came to aid in April of 1875. A former colonel in the Union Army, he had studied elementary instruction as a science, and with his knowledge and experience became Quincy's first Superintendent. Colonel Parker exercised the "qualities of his genius and the results of his study" in the establishment of "The Quincy System" which completely reformed Quincy's schools.

This system stressed individuality and instilled great enthusiasm among the students and teachers. The system has objectives which were: "to give the student the ability to do practical useful things; to find the interest upon a note, to keep accounts to measure wood, stone and timber accurately, to write a good business hand, to prepare a properly spelled, well composed letter, to use correct and refined language, and above all, to act promptly, intelligently, and honestly."

The Quincy system was extremely well received and quickly became famous all over. People began to observe Quincy to improve their own school systems.

Today, the Quincy System is still discussed in graduate education courses as far away as California. In 1878, the achievements of the Quincy System produced such outstanding results that the State Board of Education said that "Quincy furnished a striking example of what can be accomplished, even in a short time through the right kind of superintendance."

A problem arising out of Quincy's success with the Quincy System was the frequent loss of teachers with experience. Some other benefits, however, were that with the new revolution, costs for education diminished by 1/5 instead of increasing.

A large factor in diminishing the cost of education was the practice Parker introduced of having the schools rather than the pupils buying textbooks. This allowed books to be bought in quantity at about half price. Colonel Parker remained Superintendent of Schools for five years, then left the Quincy Schools. In 1883, George I. Aldrich became Superintendent, beginning a nine year reign after succeeding Mr. Sylvester Brown. While Mr. Aldrich was superintendent for the Quincy schools, he also remained superintendent in Milton.

So you see that in 1888 there was much activity within the Quincy school system, and at that time George I. Aldrich was superintendent of schools. There were seven grammar schools: The Adams, John Hancock, Coddington, Washington, Willard, Wollaston and Quincy schools; and there was one High School, held then on High School Avenue, the street around the corner from the present day Fire Station.

The 1888 grammar school population was 3,296 students, not including the John Hancock school which was still too new to be included in the population figures. (There were 358 pupils attending the John Hancock school, according to attendance charts in the School Committee report of 1889). The ages of students ranged from age 5 in the grammar schools to age 20 in the high school, with the starting age of school probably being five and the ending age being somewhere between 15 and 20, with most falling in the age group of sixteen to eighteen.

As was the national trend, the school committee was now a well established group of educators/executive decision makers who met monthly to decide on important matters. They consisted of Dr. John A. Gordon, Sylvester Brown and Dr. Joseph M. Sheehan elected at large, and for the wards: Ward 1 - Rupert F. Claflin, Ward 2 - Reverend H.E. Cotton, Ward 3 - Reverend Eben Muse, Ward 4-John F. Cole, Ward 5- Francis L. Hayes, and Ward 6 - Thomas Gurney. Sylvester Brown was the Chairman and George I. Aldrich was the secretary.

The total expenses for that school year, as stated in the school committee's report were $49,996.45. They even had $42.65 left over from money allotted for or given to them! The expenditures included teachers salaries at $32,442.00 for the year for all the teachers in the town. Other expenditures included: Fuel, Care of Rooms, Superintendent's Salary ($1,700.00), transportation, Books and Stationary, Repairs, Improvements at the John Hancock School, Evening drawing school, and Incidentals.

The "incidentals" included I believe, the cost of a baby grand piano, purchased for the High School. This piano existed up until a few years ago at Central Middle School, when it was removed because of excessive wear and tear.

The School Committee reported that, 'It is believed that as regards the essential condition of success -- that of having a good teaching force -- the schools were never, as a whole better equipped than at present." Unfortunately, they also reported that "The selection of such teachers with the salaries at his disposal is the most difficult duty of the Superintendent."

It was further said that "Faithful, efficient teachers, whose hearts are in their work, teach the children of Quincy today, and great credit should be, and is given to this devoted class of public servants." The School Committee definitely felt great concern over the issue of good teachers and teachers salaries.

There were 60 teachers - a gain of two from the previous year, one each at the John Hancock and Washington schools, at the beginning but eleven teachers including one principal left during the year. The Superintendent cites the salaries of the teachers as a major reason for the loss of teachers. Other communities were offering better salaries.

Some other interesting things about the school system in 1888 included an evening school especially for drawing. A music department program which had begun in 1886 and a teacher training class. The training class was made up of 40 students at least 18 years of age who hoped to become teachers. Each student in the class had to have completed a high school course of study or its equivalent.

Another great accomplishment was the evening school's program. By this I do not mean the school for industrial or mechanical drawing, which was also excellent, but the school for Swedes. At this time, there was a great influx of Swedish population and this school was to teach them to understand, read and write English. One hundred and fifty people were at this school which was of great benefit to the community.

In the 1800's there was controversy about whether females should be schooled. In 1888 the people of Quincy had definitely solved this problem. Although there were a greater number of boys than girls in the grammar schools, in the high school there were twice as many girls as boys! An example is seen in the graduating class with only 9 boys and 15 girls!

Quincy was a stable and productive area for learning in 1888. It had made great strides, roughly over the decades before. Many important and exciting things were happening that would change the school system: nature work was introduced in 1890, sewing for grades 5-7 and cooking for the high school established in 1892, and a commercial course in 1893 for people expecting to go into business. Most importantly a new high school was built in 1894 on Hancock Street where Central Middle School is now. These changes helped to mold the City of Quincy's education system into what it is today.

The 1888 high school graduating class of 24 students was a historical group of people. It included Frederick Ellis Jones, a doctor in World War I, after which the lower hall of the American Legion Post #95 is named. The graduates of 1888 were part of a long tradition of success in Quincy education. The tradition has been carried through to the present day and will continue for many years to come.

QUINCY SCHOOL COMMITTEE

Quality Education: Always

During the past one hundred years the Quincy Public Schools have faced numerous challenges. After World War II the system experienced rapid growth in both student enrollment and plant expansion. More recently we have seen declining enrollment, the closing of schools, and the consolidation of programs. Throughout the years no matter what the circumstances quality education for all of Quincy's children has been the goal of the school system. The past is our history and it has given us much to be proud of. The future may be unknown and yet what is known is that our goal must remain the same: quality education for Quincy's children of tomorrow. The entire Quincy School Committee joins together in saluting the City of Quincy on its one hundredth birthday and optimistically greets the future.

The Battle Of Squantum

By Susan Williams
Grade 11
North Quincy High School
(Centennial Scholar)

In 1888, as well as today, there were questions about home rule.

In October of 1888 the city of Boston wanted to lay water mains through the streets of the Squantum section of Quincy. The Boston Water Department wished to supply Long Island with water. To do so, Boston would have to place water pipes under the streets of Quincy.

William Hodges, chairman of the Quincy Board of Selectmen was invited to a meeting in Boston in January of 1888 to discuss the proposal. Since Mr. Hodges had no evidence at that time to contradict the opinions of Boston's lawyers, he stated informally that there probably would be no objections from the town of Quincy.

However, upon consultation, the Quincy Board of Selectmen found no statute that gave Boston any right to lay water pipes under the streets of Quincy. Also, the Road Commissioners concurred that only the state legislature could grant such rights.

The Boston Water Board began to take action on September 26 by stating in a letter to the City of Quincy that construction would begin October 1. In reply to the request for instructions, the Quincy Road Commissioners simply stated their opposition to the use of Squantum's roads for a Boston water project. Undaunted, the Boston authorities indicated they would proceed as scheduled until stopped by a court injunction.

Boston did start work on Monday, October 1, 1888.

This came to the attention of the Road Commissioners that night. They went to the site on Tuesday morning and started to fill in the trench. When the Boston laborers arrived, Commissioner Duggan of Quincy told the Boston foreman that the Quincy men intended to fill the hole. The Boston laborers left the scene and went to Moon Island. When it started to rain, the Quincy men left. With the Quincy men gone, the Boston laborers continued with their work in Squantum and laid 400 feet of pipe.

After a special meeting of the Road Commissioners that evening, Quincy men were determined to resist Boston and went to the site again the next day. When they did, a battle of shovels ensued. Quincy men removed the upper layer of gravel over the pipe and Boston men put it back. After a few minutes, the Quincy side realized how futile this was and stopped their work. When more workers from Boston arrived and tried to lengthen the trench, however, the Quincy men picked up their shovels again. This time they were the ones trying to throw the gravel back in the trench while the Boston workers threw it out. The Boston foreman at first ordered his men to throw the gravel over a fence into the marsh. He changed his mind after he realized that it would be difficult to cover the pipe once it was laid and it might lead to a charge of trespassing. After both sides got more men, Assistant Superintendents Cushing and Brackett of the Boston Water Department visited the site, but left a few minutes later.

As the Boston men outnumbered the Quincy defenders, the latter called for the Quincy Fire engine. When it arrived, many Boston men left the trench. The engine was driven to the side of the trench, and began to fill it with salt water from its two hoses. With Boston's abandonment of the trench, the Quincy men quickly filled it.

Presently, three Quincy selectmen, including Mr. Hodges, arrived on the spot. The Boston foreman then ordered his men to begin digging up a new section of the road. The Quincy side did nothing to resist, knowing that with the advantage of their hose they could quickly undo any work by Boston.

Later in the morning, Superintendent Brackett of the Boston Water Works and Boston Water Commissioner Robert Grant arrived on the scene. They ordered the Boston men to keep hold of the place where they wanted to dig the trench and to start their digging again.

Quincy Road Commissioner Duggan then ordered his men to throw the dirt dug by Boston back into the tunnel. The struggle intensified as the men began to try to hit each other with their shovels. Two men were arrested in the mess. A Boston laborer was charged for disturbing the peace, and a Boston foreman was arrested for assault on a Quincy man.

When Quincy tried to use its hose, Commissioner Grant ordered his men to seize it and threatened that he would capture the whole steamer if necessary. As the digging and filling continued at the trenches, Mr. Grant ordered the men to keep their positions by using necessary force.

Quincy Selectman W.N. Eaton alleged that Grant ordered his men to throw the Quincy forces into the trench and hit them if necessary. Quincy men saw their situation was hopeless, sent the steamer home and all took a lunch break. Selectman Hodges even proposed a truce until higher authorities could be consulted, but Mr. Grant refused by claiming that everything would be fine if he were only allowed to continue with his work.

The battle resumed. Boston soon introduced a rope that kept Quincy from getting at the trench. By 2:30, Quincy broke through the "enemy lines' and started to fill the trench once again. But Boston put another rope before the men and Quincy Police cut it; injuring a Boston worker's hand. When the Boston man swore revenge, Police Chief William's friends drew revolvers to "protect" him.

When Selectman Hodges again asked Mr. Grant for a truce, he agreed. Both sides admitted they feared bloodshed, should any work by either side continue.

Two days later, Quincy selectmen and Road Commissioners decided to ask for an injunction. They also filed a separate suit to stop another incursion on their territory. Boston wanted to lay a siphon over the Neponset River to supply Long Island.

Justice triumphed on October 10, 1888. The Quincy Board of Selectmen sought an injunction against the Boston Water Board. Both sides presented their pleas and evidence to Justice Walbridge A. Field of the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court on November 13 and 14. Boston claimed its rights based on legislative acts of 1846 and 1872 and Justice Field reserved the case for consultation of the full court.

On January 5, 1889, the newly formed government of the city of Quincy achieved one of its earliest victories. The Supreme Judicial Court of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts unanimously granted the injunction to defend the territorial integrity of Quincy. The opinion was written by Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Colonial Federal Savings Bank

Originally Incorporated in 1889, the year Quincy's first Mayor, Charles H. Porter, took office.

Incorporated in 1889 as the Wollaston Cooperative Bank with offices on Newport Ave., later it located at 80 Beale Street. In 1937, the bank converted to a federal charter and was named Wollaston Federal Savings and Loan Association. Then in 1948 a corner stone was laid for the present building at 15 Beach Street.

In 1971 the name was changed to Colonial Federal Savings and Loan Association of Quincy as part of its growth program. The same year, Colonial began its expansion into other areas by opening a branch in Holbrook. Another branch was opened in Wareham in 1973, and another in East Weymouth in 1976. On January 19, 1983 the name was changed to Colonial Federal Savings Bank.

That Was Entertainment!

By Annunziata Sodano
Grade 11 Quincy High School
(Centennial Scholar)

Something that would be a shock to many people is the fact that the people of Quincy were very active in the entertainment department. It wasn't all work and no play for Quincy residents in 1888.

Clubs, societies, and associations were plentiful and were the heart of Quincy's pastimes and pleasures. From organizations such as the Quincy Dramatic Club to the Quincy Brass Band, each club provided different types of entertainment. While the Quincy Dramatic Club was devoted to dramatic and comedic plays and poetry and religious readings, the Quincy Brass Band was strictly for concerts.

A successful play done by the Quincy Dramatic Club was "That Comical Brain." The Hancock Glee Club was exclusively for young men, to entertain them as well as to teach them etiquette and manners. The Glee Club have the Quincy people shows of song and drama and performances were well attended. One of their dramas was entitled, "The Wept of the Wishton Wish." Keith's Theatre, Quincy Opera House and the Colonial Theatre housed many of the performances. These are just a few of the many establishments where Quincy residents joined family and friends to watch a performance. Braintree, Houghs Neck and even Boston residents also attended.

Music and song were undoubtedly major aspects of Quincy entertainment. Another interest was drama and comedy which ranged from love stories to satires. Plays and comedy skits were favorite events and were always well attended by 100 people on a great night. The most famous and most watched drama was "Ben Hur."

One form of entertainment which really wasn't a big attraction was the reciting of Shakespeare, performed by the Shakespearean Club. Reaction was lukewarm. This was about the only club that never sold out a show.

Throughout the year, there were many festivals, such as the May festival. Outdoor events and picnics were common. At these special events, there was literally something for everyone: refreshments, grab bags, wheels of fortune, gifts and much more. There was music, magic, drama, juggling, comedy and even pantomine to enjoy at the festivities.

One of the most pleasurable pastimes Quincy residents enjoyed was dancing. It was also the most expensive. While one would pay 25 cents for a ticket to a concert, musical or choral performance, it cost $1.00 to dance right after the show. Though it was costly, dancing was considered a favorite entertainment.

Many Quincy residents were present at many benefit balls. As they enjoyed dramas or songs, the donations went to a good cause. There were many benefits in the course of the year and the people looked forward to being a part of them. The contributions went to things like a new piano for a school to help the needy. On a good night, the organization which threw the ball, most frequently the Ladies' Soldiers Aid Society would collect around $100.00 and sometimes more.

A new form of entertainment in 1888 is still strong now 100 years later - rollerskating. There were many sports played and observed. Such sports were baseball, golf, tennis, boat racing, and even rollerskating. There wasn't a rollerskating rink, so the Quincy Opera House was used. Each sport would have its own club or association, like the Quincy Point Base Ball Association, the Quincy Tennis Club and the Quincy Yacht Club.

It was not long before women got involved in the sports craze. It wasn't uncommon to see women in Quincy play golf or tennis. In one year Rock Island Golf Club in Hough's Neck grew from 35 players to over 50.

The residents of Quincy always found time to enjoy various types of entertainment. From dancing to gambling, music to baseball, people had a full life in 1888 and truly savored their free time by spending it in countless numbers of ways.

"ELINAN SURMA" (Death or Demise of Elina) was the 1912 production of the Finnish Workingmen's Association "Veli" Drama Club, with Finnish Hall in background, 74 Arthur St.

(Courtesy Quincy Historical Society)

"Shall an act passed by the General Court in 1888 (an act to incorporate the City of Quincy) be accepted."

This was the question posed to voters in the town of Quincy more than one hundred years ago—812 voted in favor, 454 against. It was a dramatic break with the past, but one that we, their successors have benefitted from.

At the beginning of our second century as a city let us continue their work by demanding excellence in city services and by participating in city affairs so that our legacy will be as enduring as theirs.

Shipbuilding Activity Here Since The 1600's

Quincy Historical Society
By H. HOBART HOLLY
Historian

Quincy's fame nationally and worldwide has been primarily as The Granite City, as the Home of the Adams Family, and for Quincy-built ships.

While granite had the greatest impact on transforming Quincy from a rather small rural community to a prosperous town and eventually a prosperous city, shipbuilding here has been important since early times, and during much of the past 100 years, the City's major industry.

A most unusual if not unique feature is that within a one-mile radius of Quincy's Fore River Shipyard, there has been significant shipbuilding activity since the 1600s. This activity endured through the transition from wood to steel and from sail to power because of good shore and water, accesibility to ship materials and components, and men who knew how to build ships.

In colonial days, almost every coastal town had some shipbuilding. In most cases their capabilities were limited. In 1789, Daniel Briggs built the Ship Massachusetts, the largest vessel built in this country up to that time, at Philips Head in Germantown because he lacked deep water at his yard in the Braintree Landing area and in Milton to which he was moving.

There followed many builders who needed deeper water for the larger ships being sought. In 1811 William James and David Torrey came from the North River to establish a yard on Town River Bay at the foot of Follett St. In 1815 John Souther came from Hingham. His yard for many years was where the Quincy Lumber Company was later located. In 1820 Nathan Josselyn came from Pembroke and opened his yard on Fore River just above the bridge. Peleg F. Jones came from Marshfield in 1835 and built his famous Quincy granite sloops on Quincy Point where the tank field is now located. Deacon George Thomas came from Maine in 1854 and had his important yard on Quincy Point where Procter and Gamble is now located.

Quincy point was indeed a maritime community with shipbuilders living there, fishing industry, and starting in the 1870s, some important yacht building on the Town River Bay side of Quincy Point.

It was the deep water and the presence of men who knew how to build ships that led to the establishment of the Fore River Shipyard here.

In this area of shipbuilding environment and tradition, Thomas A. Watson and Frank O. Wellington in 1883 opened a machine shop in East Braintree to manufacture marine steam engines. The partnership operated as the Fore River Engine Company where the Braintree Yacht Club is now located. In the early 1890s they started building some wooden yachts and the steamboat City Of Quincy for their engines.

In 1898 and 1899 they built the steel lightship Diamond Shoals and the destroyers Lawrence and MacDonough.

With naval contracts now avaible as a result of the Spanish American War, the small shipyard had outgrown its limited facilities. Land was purchased a short distance downstream on Quincy Neck in 1900 where there was good water and room for future expansion. The unfinished destroyer hulls and some of the buildings were towed to the new yard of the Fore River Ship and Engine Company.

With increasingly large building contracts, the operation became more than Mr. Watson could handle financially. The business was taken over by the Fore River Shipbuilding Company in 1903. In 1914 the business was purchased by Bethlehem Steel Corporation which operated it until 1963.

It was noted that the business started as a manufacturer of marine engines. Until after World War II, the Quincy Yard continued as one of the country's leading producers of marine propulsion machinery. Another feature of the operation was the Shipyard's capability to build any vessel from the simplest to the most complicated and innovative. It was second to none in the country.

In the early years the Yard build battleships, cruisers, submarines for the United States, British and Japanese navies, barges, car floats, passenger ships, freighters, colliers, tugs, a suction dredge, early tankers, trawlers - almost anything that could float. Notable vessels of this period were the world's only seven-masted schooner Thomas W. Lawson, the steam yacht Aloha, the pioneer otterboard fishing trawlers, and the battleship Rivadavia for the Argentine Navy.

During the World War I period, some cargo ships and tankers were built but the work was predominantly destroyers and submarines for the United States Navy. The capacity of the Fore River Yard was supplemented by the Victory Plant at Squantum which was built by the Navy and operated by Fore River for the mass production of a single type of destroyer; thirty-four were built here. The pioneer aircraft carrier Lexington was contracted as a battle cruiser at this time.

Work in the 1920s and 1930s included a wide variety of merchant and naval vessels. Tankers were becoming an increasingly important product of the yard, and a number of well-known passenger vessels were built in the 1930s. Some pioneer destroyers were features of this period.

Many still living in this area remember with pride their participation in the Yard's notable performance of the World War II period. A top employment of around 40,000 included the Hingham Yard where 227 smaller type navel vessels were built. At the Quincy Yard were built the battleship Massachusetts now enshrined at Fall River, six aircraft carriers, the powerful heavy cruisers including the two USS Quincys, light cruisers, destroyers, and other types most needed for the war efforts.

After the war naval construction included the U.S. Navy's first nuclear-powered surface vessel, USS Long Beach. Oil tanker construction was very important, topped by the SS Manhattan of 100,000 tons, the largest vessel built in this country at that time. The passenger liners SS Independence and Constitution were built in this period.

It should be noted also that the Quincy Adams Yacht Yard, after building fine yachts for many years, received a Navy E for its naval construction work during the war.

At the close of 1963, Bethlehem Steel Company closed the shipyard business and sold the shipyard property to General Dynamics Corporation. The new operation continued the long shipbuilding heritage of our area until the Yard closed in 1986.

A number of types of large vessels were built for both the government and for private interests. Most notable were the giant LNG carriers of which the Goliath crane, the largest in the Western Hemisphere remains a reminder.

It is hoped that the next 100 years may see a continuation of Quincy's great shipbuilding heritage.

The Centennial Scholars

The Quincy Centennial Committee of Quincy asked high school students in Quincy to research the year 1888 for the purpose of describing the Quincy community and reasons that it chose to change to a city form of government.

All students in grade 10 in Quincy schools, public and private, were given the opportunity to volunteer for research during July, August and September. They worked in libraries in Quincy and Boston as well as site visitations in Quincy during the summer months.

Eleven students completed the project, using 72 sources, primary, secondary and manuscript.

The published articles consist of four detailed papers that highlight individual research topics.

The article "Quincy: Transition From A Town To A City" is a compilation of the work of seven students. The research of the students were entered as individual papers in writing contests sponsored by the Quincy Historical Society and Eastern Nazarene College.

Marsha Goodman and Kristin Clarke were the winners of the Richard LaBrecque Awards of the Quincy Historical Society. Marsha Goodman and Lorrie Swanton won the Dean's Award of Eastern Nazarene College.

Sweeney Funeral Service

Established 1917

A LITTLE HISTORY . . .

Sweeney Funeral Service has been serving families in the city of Quincy and the surrounding South Shore area for over 70 years. Owned and operated by three generations of the Sweeney family, it is the oldest operating Funeral establishment in the city.

Since 1917, beginning in a small storefront on the corner of Hancock and School Sts., it was founded by Dennis S. Sweeney. Here it remained until 1929 when property was purchased at the corner of Elm St. and Miller Stile Rd. for the purpose of one of Quincy's first "Funeral Homes." Today it serves as the main office for the Sweeney Funeral Service.

In 1948, after the death of the owner, the business was acquired by his nephew, M. Joseph Sweeney through personal bequest in 1950.

In 1962 a second funeral home was opened at the former Elcock Estate, 326 Copeland St., West Quincy. This was to serve as a branch of the corporation. People in West Quincy remember well this home as that of the former Dalhia King noted for the beautiful Dahlia flowers raised by the Elcock family.

Now under the ownership and direction of Dennis S. Sweeney, son of the late M. Joseph Sweeney and grandnephew of the original Dennis S. Sweeney, it continues the tradition that has earned the reputation as one of the finest funeral homes in Quincy.

The Staff of Sweeney Funeral Home and the Sweeney family salute and congratulate the city of Quincy on its 100th Anniversary.

Local Politics: The Early Years 1889-1916

By FRANCIS X. McCAULEY
MAYOR

On Monday, January 2, 1989, Quincy marked its 100th Birthday as a City. First settled in 1625, the Quincy area, became a part of Braintree in 1640 and a separate town in 1792.

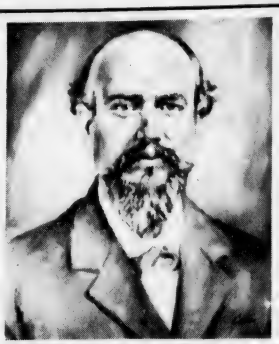
On June 11, 1888, the citizens of the Town of Quincy voted to become a City and adopt a city charter. The so-called "Homemade Charter" drafted by a committee of Quincy residents provided for a strong Mayor form of government.

The Mayor, elected for a one year term, had broad powers which included the right to make appointments without confirmation by the city council and the sole right to initiate budgetary and other spending proposals. The City Council was comprised of 23 members.

Elected for one year terms, the Council was comprised of 18 ward councillors, three from each of the six wards and five councillors at large.

The School Committee was comprised of nine members, one from each of the six wards and three at-large. School Committee members wee elected for terms of three years on a staggered basis.

The City of Quincy was governed under this "Homemade Charter" from 1889 though 1916, a period of 28 years. During that period, 14 men served in the Office of Mayor, an average of one new mayor every 2 years.



Charles H. Porter, a Civil War veteran, served as Quincy's first Mayor for the three years 1889 and 1990. Active in the insurance business in Quincy, Mayor Porter had also been active in the affairs of the Town of Quincy, serving as a selectman and a representative in the General Court. After leaving the Mayor's Office, Mr. Porter served 14 years on the School Committee and was its chairman for a number of years. He died in 1911.

Other Mayors serving during this period included:

- Charles Francis Adams (1896-97), a descendant of the John Adams Family who later served as Secretary of the Navy during the Hoover Administration.
- Russell Sears (1898), at 27 years of age the youngest Mayor in the City's history.
- John L. Miller (1914). Mayor Miller, who served nine years on the School Committee, was the only Mayor to die in office (Oct. 6, 1914).

The city election of 1898 recorded the election of Dr. Nathaniel S. Hunting to the School Committee. Dr. Hunting, who took office in January, 1899, began a period of service in local government that has not been equaled to this day. Dr. Hunting served for 36 consecutive years on the School Committee, under both the "Homemade Charter" and the Plan A Charter, which took effect in January, 1917. He served for a number of years as chairman under the original charter and for many years as vice chairman under the Plan A Charter.

PORTRAITS OF QUINCY'S first mayor in 1888, Charles Porter, and Francis X. McCauley, Quincy's 30th and present mayor painted by Edwina Caci of the Quincy Art Association. (Photo by Doris Oberg)

Dr. Hunting continued his service as a school committee member while serving with a medical unit in France during World War I and was a member of the first medical staff at the Quincy Hospital when it opened in 1890. Dr. Hunting, who retired, undefeated from the School Committee in December 1934, died in 1937. An elementary school constructed in 1928 in Adams Shore was named in his memory.

Over the years, many criticisms were aimed at the city charter. Many Quincy residents felt that the 23 member city council was unwieldy and that the one-year terms were too short to allow mayors to undertake and complete a legislative agenda. During this period, the state legislature passed legislation setting up standard-form city charters which could be adopted by the voters of the cities in the state.

At the national election held Nov. 7, 1916, the voters of Quincy adopted a Plan A charter form of government. The charter provided for non-partisan city elections, with a mayor and nine city councillors all elected at large for two-year terms. The School Committee was comprised of six members elected for staggered terms of three years.

The Plan A Charter provided that the Mayor also serve as chairman of the School Committee, "Ex-Officio." The Mayor had the same broad powers for the appointment of department heads as well as the sole authority to initiate spending proposals that were contained in the original city charter.

The City Seal And A Mistake

By PAUL HAROLD State Senator

In the town's rush to adopt the necessities of city government (a chair for the mayor, a new seal, etc.) - someone made a mistake.

For the past 100 years, the city seal has had four dates on it: 1625 (when Mt. Wollaston was settled), 1640 (when Braintree was established), 1792 (when Quincy became a town) and 1888 when it became a city. The seal was ordered by action of the Mayor and Council in March of 1889. Its importance is evidenced by the fact that it was just the 10th ordinance of the new city.

Seals have been important symbols since medieval time. They evidence the authority by which government action is taken. Even today, the ordinances of Quincy require all deeds and legal documents to display the city seal to be valid.

To be valid - that's the kicker -- because of the past 100 years it appears that the city seal has been composed incorrectly with the date 1888 displayed, but the ordinance calling for 1889.

A search of the original documents showed ordinance number 10 missing with the only reference to the seal in the 1889 city report (on page 47).

Normally this type of discovery is only of interest to a nitpicking historian (or a nosey state senator), but the question is, does the incorrect date invalidate legal documents that the city has issued for the past 100 years.

An interesting question, but not of great concern to current City Solicitor Joseph (Jay) MacRitchie who argues that the incorrect date is only one element of an otherwise properly constituted seal. He also points out that the correct date has been included in revised ordinances that are adopted periodically, the last time in 1976.

Tim Gassert (a Quincy resident), assistant General Counsel to the Secretary of State's division of public records agrees with MacRitchie. He basically says that the incorrect date would not have any effect in defeating the validity of city documents since the seal was an attempt to carry out the purpose of the ordinance.

Interestingly enough, however, Gassert points out that if the culprit of 1888 was still around the district attorney could charge him (or her) with defacing or altering a seal. The fine is only $50, but applies to each time it was used improperly. The fine could be billions, but even in the unlikely event the culprit was still around, it is certain that William Delahunt would not want to waste the resources of his office to prosecute someone whose only offense was that he was born before whiteout was invented.

Joseph Whiton First Plan A Mayor

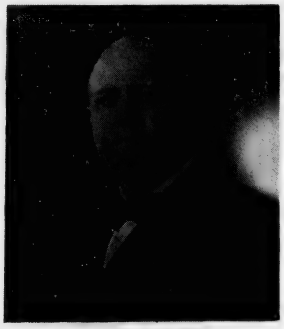
Plan A 1917-1949

The first Plan A election was held Tuesday, Dec. 19, 1916, when Council President Joseph L. Whiton, Jr. defeated incumbent Mayor Gustav Bates to become Quincy's first Plan A Mayor.

Mayor Whiton served on the City Council for 10 years prior to his election. He had also served for three months as Acting Mayor upon the death of Mayor Miller in October 1914. Mayor Whiton served two two-year terms from 1917 to 1920 and was mayor during World War I. After leaving office he returned to city politics serving as Ward I Councillor in 1932 and 1933.



Campaigning for re-election as Ward I Councillor in 1965, I had the opportunity to meet Mayor Whiton at his home on Whitney Rd. He was in the process of shaving when I rang his doorbell, but he spend an hour regaling me with stories of his career in city government as well as the politics of the day.

Other men who served in the mayor's office during this period included William E. Bradford, 1921-22, Gustav Bates 1923-24, and Perley E. Barbour, 1925-1926.

Mayor Barbour was rated as one of the most competent of all city's chief executives by the late Mayor Thomas S. Burgin and late City Councillor ANgelo Bizzozero, who served in the city council during his term as mayor.

Thomas J. McGrath was the first Mayor to serve three terms as Mayor (1927-1932). A self-made man who left school after the 8th grade to support his widowed mother, Mayor McGrath was recognized as an expert in municipal finance. His picture, along with the picture of Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa, Quincy's 25th Mayor, hang in my office. Both men were fiscal conservatives and when I get the urge to spend a lot of the taxpayers' money, I feel that both of them are watching me closely and urging caution.

Charles A. Ross, a long time city councillor, served as the city's 20th and 22nd Mayor (1933-34), 1243-1949). Shortly after taking office in January 1935 for his second term, charges were brought against him alleging campaign fundraising irregularities. A trial was held in Norfolk Superior Court in March 1935 and Mayor Ross was found guilty and stripped of his office. Ward II Councillor Leo E. Mullin, then President of the City Council, served as Acting Mayor for almost three months. At a special election held June 11, 1935, Thomas S. Burgin - a former Ward Councillor, Councillor at-large and state representative, - was elected to fill the unexpired term of Mayor Ross.

JOSEPH WHITON

Mayor Burgin, in my estimation, had the most difficult job of any Mayor in the city's history. During his tenure from June 1935 until December 1942 Mayor Burgin had to deal with the social and financial problems brought on by the Great Depression. He was also Mayor during both the great hurricane of September 1938 as well as our country's entry into World War II. Mayor Burgin resigned his office in early December 1942 to accept a commission in the United States Navy.

The retirement of Mayor Burgin paved the way for the return of former Mayor Ross to the Mayor's Office. After an unsuccessful attempt at a comeback in 1938, Mayor Ross won election to a three-year term as Mayor in December, 1942. He was subsequently re-elected to two additional two-year terms in 1945 and 1947. Mayor Ross retired at the end of 1949 when the Plan E, city manager form of government became effective in 1950.

Mayor Ross' political career spanned four decades, including 13 years in the City Council, six years of them as council president. From 1926 to 1947, he was a candidate for Mayor eight times, winning five elections while losing three contests.

Mayor Ross holds the longevity record for a Plan A Mayor serving nine years and three months. He passed away in 1956 at the age of 74.

During this Plan A period (1917-1949), a number of amendments to the charter were passed, among them:

Ward Council Representation - 1920.

Preliminary elections - 1926.

Elimination of staggered terms for mayor, city council and school committee - 1942.

In November 1947, the voters of Quincy endorsed a change in the city charter from Plan A to Plan E form of government. This change became effective on January 2, 1950.

Plan E: A 5-Year Stormy Marriage

Plan E 1950-1957

The Plan E form of government provides for a seven-member City Council and a six member School Committee, all elected at large. The council members elect a member of their body to serve a two-year term as Mayor. The Mayor presides over council meetings, chairs the School Committee and represents the city at ceremonial and city functions. The council then elects a City Manager, a person - preferably with a background in public administration to conduct the affairs of the city on a day to day basis.

At the organizational meeting of the first Plan E City Council Meeting held Jan. 2, 1950, the members of the council unanimously elected the Honorable Thomas S. Burgin, Plan A Mayor (1935-1942), as the first Plan E Mayor (1950-51). The council also chose William Deegan, the City Manager of Superior, Wis., as city manager.

The Plan E form of government was in effect for eight years in Quincy. After a "honeymoon period," was in effect for eight years in Quincy. After a "honeymoon period," anti-Plan E and pro-Plan E frictions surfaced in the city council. City Councillors Edna Austin, Amelio Della Chiesa, Frank Orcutt and Alfred Helfrich were supporters of the city manager form of government while Councillors David Crowley, Carl Anderson and David McIntosh favored a return to Plan A "strong mayor" form of government.

After a stormy five-year tenure, City Manager Deegan resigned in March 1955. He was replaced by Donald Blatt who served as City Manager until 1956. The question of another charter change was on the ballot in the city election held in November, 1955. The voters approved a return to the Plan A, (strong Mayor, elected by the people) form of government.

The city council in April, 1956 chose Edward T. Lewis, a career city employee, to serve as City Manager until the return of Plan A in January 1958. In addition to Mayor Burgin, David S. McIntosh (1952-53) and Amelio A. Della Chiesa (1954-57) served as Mayor under the Plan E form of government. During this period the voters adopted two changes in election procedures.

Proportional voting, a cumbersome and time consuming method of election, was eliminated in 1952. The voters in 1953 approved the election of school committee members for staggered terms of four years.

DUNKIN' DONUTS CONGRATULATES THE CITY OF QUINCY ON ITS 100TH ANNIVERSARY AS A CITY.

The first Dunkin' Donuts shop, which opened on the Southern Artery in Quincy in 1950, established the successful business concept Dunkin' Donuts continues to follow: to make and sell the freshest, most delicious coffee and donuts, served quickly and courteously in modern, well merchandised shops.

Over the years, the product line has been expanded to include fresh baked goods, a sider selection of beverages, and croissant sandwiches that build the breakfast and lunch trade. New distribution concepts also have been introduced to enable the Company to penetrate markets more efficiently and effectively. As a result, Dunkin' Donuts is the largest coffee and donut chain in the world. At the end of fiscal 1988, a total of 1,765 Dunkin' Donut shops were in operation in North America, including 39 U.S. states and Canada, and also in sixteen foreign countries.

Amelio Della Chiesa Takes Mayor's Office

Plan A Returns 1958-1989

The Plan A form of government returned to Quincy in January, 1958. Amelio Della Chiesa, who served as a city councillor for many years as well as Plan E Mayor of Quincy for 1954 through 1957, was elected Mayor for a two year term in the November 1957 city election. The nine member city council, all re-elected at large, chose James R. McIntyre as Council President. The voters at the November 1957 election endorsed the return of Ward Council representation effective January 1960.

The November 1959 election saw the election of four new city councillors who would represent four of the city's six wards. They included: The Honorable Joseph J. LaRaia, Ward Two; James S. McCormack, Ward Three; and George B. MacDonald, Ward Four and George G. Burke, Ward Five. Charles L. Shea and William C. Ellis, who served as Councillors-at-Large in the 1958-1959 City Council, and were elected as Ward Councillors in Wards One and Six, respectively. Three other Councillors-at-Large in the 1958-1959 Council, Carl W. Anderson, the Honorable David S. McIntosh and John J. Quinn, won the three Councillor-at-Large seats in the 1960-1961 City Council.

AMELIO DELLA CHIESA

Mayor Della Chiesa served as a Plan A Mayor for eight years (1958-1965). He was followed by Mayor James R. McIntyre (1966-1971), Mayor Walter J. Hannon (1972-1975), Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia (1976-1977), Mayor Arthur H. Tobin (1978-1981) and Mayor Francis X. McCauley 1982 to the present. During the current Plan A era, the voters acted on one major charter change. In 1973, the voters turned down a plan to expand the city's six wards to eight wards. In 1988, a proposal by Mayor McCauley to change the terms of Office of the Mayor and City Council from two years to four years won City Council approval, but died in the legislature.

Women In City Government

In the 100 years since Quincy became a city, 437 individuals have served in the four local elected offices of city government. Only 15 of those 437- or less than 4%-have been women. The first woman to hold local office was Mabel Adams, who has been mentioned earlier. Miss Adams held office as a school committee member (1896-1904) before women received the vote and was the only woman to serve under the original city charter.

Twelve other women have served on the school committee, including Mrs. Beatrice Walker Nichols, who served 7 consecutive 3 year terms on the committee from 1925 through 1940. Active in many clubs and civic activities, Mrs. Nichols was the first woman to serve as Vice Chairperson of the Committee, holding that office in 1936, '37, '38 and '43. Mrs. Nichols was also active in the republican party in Quincy. She died in 1968 at age 83.

From its inception in January 1889, the Quincy City Council was an all male bastion until January 1943, and Mrs. Edna B. Austin took her seat as a Councillor at Large. Mrs. Austin, a graduate of Bates College, was a Quincy attorney as well as a founding member of the Quincy League of Women Voters. Mrs. Austin served a 3 year term from 1943 through 1945, when she was defeated in her attempt for re-election. She was again elected, however, in 1947 and served until her retirement in 1959.

During her 15 years on the city council, Mrs. Austin established a reputation for political courage in dealing with municipal issues. If she believed in an issue, she would support it no matter what the political consequences. She died in 1979 at the age of 93.

Only two other women have served in the city council, Mrs. Joanne Condon, a community activist in North Quincy, served 4 terms (1978-85) as Ward 6 Councillor and Mrs. Patricia M. Toland, who is the only woman to serve on both the school committee and city council. Mrs. Toland who has been active in the League of Women Voters and the Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women was elected to the School Committee in 1975 and served on the committee until her election to the City Council in 1981. For the past 7 years she has served as a Councillor at Large. Mrs. Toland has held leadership roles on both of the city's legislative bodies, serving a 2 year term as Vice-Chairperson of the School Committee. In January 1988 her fellow councillors unanimously elected her Council President, the only woman in the city's 100 year history to hold this position.

Mrs. Mary P. Collins, who for the past 11 years has served as a member of the School Committee, was recently elected the first woman County Commissioner in Norfolk County.

A Gateway To Greatness

(Excerpts from Centennial Address June 19.)

Rev. Dr. Sheldon Bennett, minister of the United First Parish Church

What a great day this is!
And what great singing!
I gave some thought as to who would have the task of following the "Battle Hymn of the Republic." As host, I decided the burden was mine. I must look to such as the Prophet Isaiah for wards sufficient to the task.

"Go through, go through the gates, prepare the way for the people," he said. With these words, Isaiah called his people to new hope and to new greatness. These words were not just to one person or two, but to all the people, and all the people were to pass through into new life preparing the way for one another.

There is something exciting about a gateway. It is something that draws us towards it from many directions to a single place, before passing through and going out again in many new directions. A gateway beckons us with the promise of new worlds beyond if we would enter and go through.

Today is a great day in the life of this city. Today we come as to a gateway leaving one century behind as we prepare to pass through into the next. We pause this day to mark the moment with celebration for the occasion, and with thanksgiving for all that has been accomplished.

One hundred years ago, the people of Quincy came to a similar gateway. The town was changing and growing. No longer a quiet, agricultural village of a few hundred families, with the growth of industry, the population had now grown to nearly 16,000. There was new enterprise, and a railroad provided access to Boston and the commerce of the nation. Farmlands and fields were giving away to the building of residential neighborhoods.

The people of the town were at the gateway to a new age. The historic pattern of town meetings that had been followed since Colonial days was no longer able to meet the increasing demands for effective government. There were now too many items on the agenda, the issues were too complex. Gone were the days when the major issues were the maintenance of the meeting house and the regulation of grazing on the town common. After some four years of study and heated debate, in June of 1888, the citizens of Quincy voted to adopt a city charter and thus passed through the gateway and prepared the way for the building of a city.

The city welcomed new people and encouraged new industry. Over the next decades the population grew rapidly, five-fold, to its present level of some 88,000. As the earlier grante industry declined, Quincy went on to become a great center for ship building, metal working, manufacturing, and retailing. It also became a city of fine, strong neighborhoods.

Today, as Quincy stands at the city, we now stand before a new gateway into its second century as a gateway, a gateway of fresh challenge and new opportunity.

There is new development. And new people are again coming to make their lives in our city. Where earlier peoples had come from Europe, they now come from the far side of the globe, from Southeast Asia, bringing their talents, their ambitions, and their dreams. As we stand at the gateway to a new century, our task is to discern the future and to prepare the way. We cannot stand still. We cannot dwell over long on the glories of the past, and the way things once were. They may be for us inspiration, but ours is to pass through and to dream new dreams and to bring to pass new visions.

One hundred years ago, the task was to establish a system of city government so that the imagination and the creative energy of its people could better flourish. Now I think the task is for the people of this city to forge a fresh vision of the future and for the people to so employ our government that our city may continue to prosper and thrive. It is a task that calls for bold imagination and courage, by all of our citizens.

The greatness of our city is its people.

REV. DR. SHELDON BENNETT

It is people who have come from many different countries with their energy, their ideas, their dreams, and their passion for life that have made this city great. Quincy is now officially designated as a "Gateway City," recognizing the new arrival of families from China, Vietnam and Cambodia to our neighborhoods.

As a gateway city, Quincy has not only been a way for peoples from many different lands into freedom and a new life. We have also been a gateway for people and ideas from our city out into the nation -- the first iron works, the pre-Revolutionary manufacture of glass and pottery and other items, the invention of rail transportation, the early development of aviation, and innovation in the building of ships.

We are again at the gateway. We are watchful for ideas for new industry and new commerce that will bring new vitality to our city and assure ur future. Let us be ready to embrace those ideas

Quincy Junior College was established by the City of Quincy School Committee 30 years ago. In September of 1958 the College opened with a handful of students. In June of 1960 we held our first graduation with 4 graduates. We've grown since then into a major force in the Quincy region. This year we had a record-breaking day enrollment topping 1,400 students. While other area schools have been forced to cut back this year we have been serving more students than ever and plan to continue that growth. Quincy Junior College has been a leader in implementing Developmental Education, Child Care for our students, innovative Financial Aid programs and a variety of Continuing Education programs.

We're proud to be part of the City of Quincy in this centenary year, and we plan to be a part of the City's Bicentennial Celebration.

that promise the creation of wealth and good jobs and not stifle them out of fear of the change they will bring. Let us prepare and educate our children so that they can meet the challenges ahead with creativity and skill.

As we look to the century ahead we cannot be naive as to the challenges before us. There are problems of affordable housing and such employment that can promise a future. There are problems of balancing these needs with protecting the quality and character of our neighborhoods. These are problems that face all of us and our children, and not only the newcomers.

As we welcome our new Asian neighbors, these needs are brought into especially sharp focus by the special challenges they face -- housing, employment, and access to community services. Of course, as for many newcomers before, there is the immediate challenge of learning a new language.

It is crucially important, I believe, to do everything reasonably possible to help the new arrivals become fully part of the life of our city, to be able to communicate, to be able to understand how to secure community services, to be able to participate fully in the community. For the strength and the future greatness of our city is in its people -- all of its people -- living and working, helping and striving, dreaming and creating in full community with equity, understanding and mutual respect.

Three hundred and fifty-eight years ago, John Winthrop, the leader of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, charged his company that they consider themselves as a city upon a hill, with the eyes of all people upon it. They should strive to live and work as a whole community, relating to one another in brotherly affection, willing to give a portion of their resources for the supply of other needs. He called on his people to uphold their commerce with one another in all "meekness, gentleness, patience and liberality," and that they should "delight in each other, make others conditions their own, rejoice together, mourn together, labor and suffer together, always having before their eyes their ... community in the work, as members of the same body, ... so shall they keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace."

John Winthrop and his company were on board ship yet approaching shore as he delivered these words. Indeed, they were themselves just at the gateway to a new land. Their vision of mutual community has endured these centuries as the true strength both of our nation and of our city. May this vision yet endure and be for us a guide as we stand at the gateway of a new century and a new age. Let us "go through, go through the gates and prepare the way for the people," that our city may ever remain in the greatness of its people, in liberty and in peace.

So may it be.

Why Do We Pronounce It 'Quin-Zee'

Why do we pronounce Quincy "Quin-zee" when just about everyone else in the country calls it "Quin-cee"?

There are 19 other Quincys in the U.S. and they pronounce it "Quin-cee.

Can they be right and we be wrong? No.

We pronounce it "Quin-zee" because the Quincy family pronounced it that way.

The Quincy family which settled here at Mount Wollaston pronounced the name Quin-zee--including Col. John Quincy after whom Quincy, Mass.--the first Quincy--was named in 1792.

Colonel Quincy was the great grandfather of sixth president John Quincy Adams.

THE HOWARD JOHNSON restaurant chain was born here in this small drugstore on Beale St., Wollaston, in 1925.

Howard Johnson Started Here

The famed Howard Johnson restaurant chain started in a small drugstore on Beale St. in Wollaston 64 years ago.

Native son Howard Dearing Johnson purchased the store with $500 borrowed money and a willingness to put a lot of hard work into the business.

The store had a soda fountain, selling just three flavors of ice cream -- vanilla, chocolate and strawberry.

By experimenting with an old-fashioned hand-cranked freezer in the basement of the store, he came up with an ice cream formula that he suspected -- and the public quickly confirmed -- had a superior taste.

Three years later the business was a success. With the addition of frankfurters, hamburgers, and other easily prepared menu items, the little drugstore became the first Howard Johnson restaurant.

Johnson belived the automobile would change the face of America and he wanted to be the one to provide future American travelers with a chain of restaurants that would offer "good food at reasonable prices."

Johnson then convinced a fellow businessman to use the Howard Johnson name on a Cape Cod restaurant in return for a fee and an agreement to buy food and supplies from Johnson. The franchising concept worked for both men.

Soon there were roadside ice cream and sandwich stands bearing the friendly Simple Simon and Pieman logo throughout Massachusetts.

As the years progressed, the Howard Johnson restaurant chain expanded throughout the country and also diversified into many additional concepts, including Ground Round, Red Coach Grills, and Howard Johnson hotels and lodges.

The company went public in 1961 and in 1980 was acquired by Imperial Group of London. It was sold again in 1985 to Marriott Corporation, which retained several segments and sold others.

This was a new beginning ... in May 1986 the Howard Johnson franchisees acquired the Howard Johnson Restaurant Franchise System and incorporated as Franchise Associates, Inc. (FAI). The restaurants retain the Howard Johnson name as well as the familiar orange roof trademark and recipes and formulas for ice cream and food products.

Today, with 140 independently owned Howard Johnson restaurants in 25 states, Canada, and Puerto Rico, FAI offers its member-owners a wide variety of resources ranging from training, quality assurance and field supervision, to purchasing, distribution, and marketing programs.

Franchise Associates, Inc., is located just a few miles from Quincy in Weymouth, Massachusetts.

So Did Dunkin Donuts

The first Dunkin Donut was dunked in Quincy.

It all began with William Rosenberg who started a one canteen truck industrial catering service in 1946.

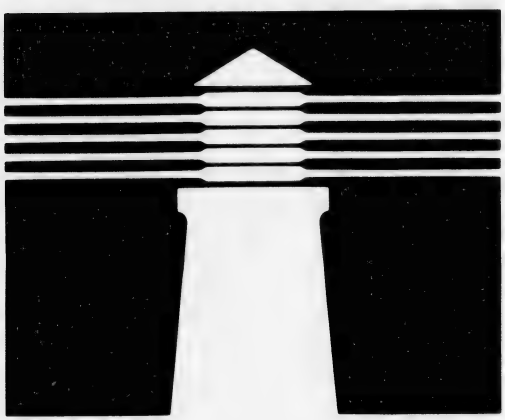
Four years later he opened the first Dunkin Donut shop on Southern Artery in Quincy in 1950.

And, it is still there today.

By 1954 there were five Dunkin' Donuts in operation in the Boston area. This growth was supported by the company's industrial catering activities which, by now, had expanded to include in-plant cafeterias.

The following year the company began licensing independent Dunkin' Donuts franchise owners in order to gain the capital needed for rapid expansion.

And, what has been garnered from the company's humble beginnings?



Today Dunkin Donuts is an internationally known chain with 1764 outlets--1543 of them in North America and the others in 14 different countries.

According to Robert M. Rosenberg, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, the net income for fiscal year 1988 was $13,503,000 on gross revenues of $112,774,000.

Total sales of all Dunkin' Donuts shops throughout the world in 1988 amounted to $777,844,000. Not bad for donuts and coffee.

And, it all began in Quincy.

Council Hits Secrecy

Nutley Wants Hearing On Land Deal

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Angered by the recent announcement that the MDC will take a 45-acre section of land in Squantum with fiscal aid by the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority, Ward 6 Councillor Thomas Nutley has called for a public hearing on the matter.

Nutley, whose ward the land is located in, and several other city councillors, said they want an explanation as to why Quincy officials were not given proper notice of the deal.

The call for a meeting and explanation was made at Monday night's City Council meeting, just hours after the announcement of the land acquisition was made.

"The meeting was called rather hastily over the weekend," Nutley said. "The fact of the matter is we're losing some valuable waterfront property and tax money," he said.

Nutley was referring to an announcement made at the site early Monday afternoon by state officials, including Gov. Michael Dukakis, that the MDC will acquire 45 acres of land between the Jordan Marsh warehouse and Marina Bay and convert the property into a waterfront park.

The MDC plans to purchase 10 of the 45 acres next month with $3.2 million from the MWRA. The agency hopes to acquire the other 35 acres, which have been appraised at $6.5 million, by July 1.

The Squantum land is presently owned by Boston Edison.

For supplying the revenue, the MWRA will get temporary use of three of the 10 acres for the Boston Harbor Cleanup project.

THOMAS NUTLEY

The Authority will construct a ferry terminal consisting of a pier and parking lot on the site. The terminal will allow 600 to 800 workers to board boats to Deer Island where the MWRA will build a regional sewage treatment plant in the 1990s.

According to Ward 1 Councillor Michael Cheney, the MWRA is expected to use the Squantum site for about 10 to 15 years.

After the cleanup, the land will go back to the MDC for park purposes.

Quincy officials on hand for the announcement included Sen. Paul Harold, Rep. Michael Morrissey, Rep. Arthur Stephen Tobin, Council President and Acting Mayor Patricia Toland, Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien and Cheney.

Builder Must Donate $200,000 For Community Center

The City Council Monday night approved a multi-family development project to be built in South Quincy, which includes a condition that stipulates the builder will give $200,000 towards a community center in that section of the city.

The project, a scaled down version of an original plan proposed over two years ago, will consist of 336 residential units divided among 17, three and a half story low-rise buildings on a 16-acre site located off Centre, Bartlett and Brewer Sts. in South Quincy.

The developers for the project are Lincoln Property Co. and R.J.B. Management Corp.

Estimated construction cost, excluding land, is $53,511 per unit or a total of $17,980,000.

Originally, the development called for a 10-story building with more than 500 units. However, many residents objected with the plan and met with the developers and Ward 4 Councillor James Sheets to iron out a compromise.

At first, the proposal "did not meet the standards of the community," Sheets said. Explaining that residents and the developers met during a two-year period in search of a compromise, he added, "If the people don't support a project, I will not support a project."

The permit was approved by the Planning Board Dec. 15. The project was given support by residents at the public hearing in October.

As passed, the project will include:

- 336 residential units, of which 216 will be one bedroom and 120 will be two bedroom.
- Sizes vary from 595 square feet to 840 square feet for one bedroom and 968 to 1,081 square feet for two bedrooms.
- A central building with exercise and function rooms.
- Five hundred and forty parking spaces.

The plan also includes 19 conditions, one of which states that the developer will contribute $200,000 towards the construction of a neighborhood center in South Quincy.

Sheets expressed his enthusiasm for the center and said he will meet with South Quincy residents for input on this matter.

"Having a community center in South Quincy is a dream for many residents," he said.

Other conditions call for:

- Proper fencing and screening from the neighborhood.
- All buildings to be located at least 25 feet from the rim of the quarry hole.
- Blasting to be done on site only after proper posting.
- A plan for both dust control and control of any and all other clean up materials, hazardous and non-hazardous.
- A group of four community residents to monitor the construction phases and any problems that may arise from construction work.
- All dumpsters will be placed on concrete pads and screened with fencing and shrubs.

Hearing March 6 On Revised Local Hiring Bill

The City Council has scheduled a public hearing for Monday, March 6 for the purpose of discussing a revised version of a local preference hiring bill.

The original ordinance was vetoed by Mayor Francis X. McCauley in October. It was reintroduced with modifications at the Dec. 21 council meeting by Councillors Stephen McGrath, Patricia Toland and Michael Cheney.

Councillors had hoped to have a hearing scheduled in February but because of a busy agenda, it was set for March 6.

The mayor vetoed the original ordinance a week after it passed the council because he said it was restrictive and unconstitutional.

The revised ordinance calls for Quincy residents to be hired for constructional projects wholly or partially funded by the city on a three to one basis.

The order would apply to projects costing at least $250,000.

Originally, it was drafted to hire qualified Quincy residents on a two to one basis on projects costing at least $10,000.

Speaking on the revised ordinance, McGrath said, "I think it does address most of the issues and concerns raised by the mayor in his veto message to the council."

McCauley, who is away on vacation, has not stated his position on the revised ordinance.

Post Offices Closed Jan. 16

Area residents are advised that all post offices will be closed and there will be no regular mail delivery on Monday, Jan. 16, in observance of Martin Luther King, Jr. Day.

Special delivery and express mail will be delivered on the holiday. Collection boxes will be picked up according to holiday schedules.

New Firefighters To Receive Badges

Eleven firefighters, seven in the Quincy Fire Department, will receive their badges on Friday after completing the Quincy Fire Department seven-week Recruit Training Program.

The recruits have already been sworn in.

Quincy Fire Department Captain Francis Sullivan and Lt. Robert Batson will present the badges at a ceremony in the second floor conference room at Quincy City Hall Friday at 10 a.m.

During the training program, the recruits went to "live fires" at the Barnstable Fire Academy, the Boston Fire Academy, and the Winthrop Training Academy. They were also trained in CPR, in procedures of rescue from MBTA trains, pumping and ladder operations, driver training and they completed a course in hazardous materials.

The seven Quincy recruits are:

Jimmy Wong, Robert J. Shea, and James Silcox, all of Quincy, Edward Barnes of Dorchester, and Michael Davis, Adam Gaines and Luis Ruiz, all of Boston.

Also receiving badges after completing the Quincy Training program are Braintree Fire Department recruits Richard C. Cleggett, James O'Brien, and Bruce R. King, all of Braintree; and Randolph Fire Department recruit Richard F. Donovan of Randolph.

Mary Collins Sworn In As First Woman County Commissioner

Mary Collins of Quincy was sworn into a four-year term as Norfolk County Commissioner by Mayor Francis X. McCauley and Councillor Patricia Toland during ceremonies at City Hall Jan. 4.

Collins, vice chairwoman of the Quincy School Committee, defeated incumbent George B. McDonald, also of Quincy, in the commissioner's race last fall. Collins is the first woman ever to serve as Norfolk County Commissioner.

The other commissioner elected was James J. Collins of Milton.

She asked Gov. Dukakis to name McCauley and Toland, two of her good friends, commissioners so that they could administer the oath of office.

After the swearing in, Collins thanked her family and friends for "making this day possible."

"I look forward to my new position. It will be challenge, a great learning experience over the next couple of months," she said.

"Thank you all very much and I want to thank my friends Pat and Mayor McCauley for making this day extra special for me."

As for her decision to seek re-election as a member of the School Committee, Collins said she will wait until the end of March or April before making an announcement.

She said she would wait and see if her duties as county commissioner interfere with her responsibilities as a School Committee member

Council Passes $693,065 For Central School Work

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

The City Council Monday night appropriated $693,065 to pay for engineering, repair and maintenance work at the closed Central Middle School in Quincy Center.

In explaining the cost, School Supt. Dr. Robert Ricci said "we believe the entire project will be completed by April 1."

The school was closed last fall for repairs after a beam supporting the roof and learning center was discovered twisted. The student body, totaling 476 students, were divided up and sent to three different schools.

The structural work included repairing the beam and demolishing the balcony in the school's learning center. Ricci said the engineers do not know for sure what caused the beam to twist.

According to the superintendent, the structural work to the beam should be done in February and a decision allowing some students to return will be made thereafter.

Ricci pointed out that a significant portion of the appropriation could be reimbursed by the state. Any money that is reimbursed will come back to the city over a five-year period beginning two years from now, he said.

Of the $693,065 figure, $514,000 is for structural work.

The breakdown for the structural work is:

- $30,000 for structural investigation and design by Gale Engineering.
- $20,000 for monitoring engineer, structural repair by Gale.
- $150,000 for demolition and shoring by Dorel Steel.
- $160,000 for fabrication and installation of steel trusses by Dorel.
- $14,000 for phase two of renovations including new ceilings, wall renovations, both interior and exterior lighting renovations, and new carpet.
- $140,000 for phase two renovations.

Some of the figures were estimates and Ricci was optimistic that they would not go higher.

He also said that some work may have to be done on the roof. The roof, which he described as "sound and stable," is allowing some light to pass through.

Ricci was hopeful that work to the roof could be included in the budget.

The appropriation also covers cost for personnel which totaled $52,732. This figure consists of $37,850 for increased salaries and overtime for the transportation staff, $11,810 for increased salaries and overtime for custodial staff and $2,072 for increased salaries and overtime for maintenance staff.

The transportation staff figure represents 20 weeks at $1,892.50 per week.

The custodial staff total refers to moving and fire watch as mandated by the Quincy Fire Department from Oct. 31 to Nov. 23.

The maintenance staff figure is for moving and fire watch.

Moving expenses amounted to $6,533 which includes truck rentals, cartons, tape, ridged panel classroom dividers and inter-departmental transfers.

While the school was closed to repair the structural hazards with the beam, some non-structural work totaling $120,800 was also done.

The breakdown for non-structural work is:

- $40,000 for interior painting of 70 percent of the building.
- $20,000 for seamless floors in locker rooms.
- $29,000 for two oil burners and controls.
- $1,700 for floor tile in Spanish room.
- $20,000 for industrial arts renovation.
- $3,500 for new ceilings and lights in two teachers' rooms.
- $600 for ceilings and lights in nurses room.
- $6,000 for exterior doors.

In voicing his support for the appropriation, Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien said the closing of Central has had some negative points but also strong, positive effects as well.

"I think one positive thing has been that it has united students and parents throughout the city of Quincy. It has reminded us how important education is," Chretien said, who is chairman of the council's Education Committee.

Ward 4 Councillor James Sheets commended the Central teachers, families of Central students and the students themselves for adjusting so well to the emergency situation.

"I think the students have done an excellent job in adjusting. I think we sometimes sell young people short.

"I think the young people should be congratulated on their adjustment," he said.

Estimate $150,000 Damage

4-Alarm Boarding House Blaze Under Investigation

By JANE ARENA

Ten people were driven out and fifteen remain homeless after a four-alarm fire destroyed a boarding house at 180 Monroe Rd. Monday afternoon. No one was injured in the blaze.

The three story building, co-owned by Christy Stadelmaier and Robert Rosati, caught fire when an old couch on the outside porch went up in flames. Quincy Fire Chief Tom Gorman said the initial cause of the fire is still under investigation.

Chief Gorman estimated the total damage to the building as $150,000, $25,000 of that in belongings.

Ten pieces of apparatus were used at the fire, including a Boston ladder truck, and 40 firefighters were at the scene. Boston, Milton, Braintree and Weymouth provided coverage for Quincy during the fire.

Chief Gorman said that the first alarm was sounded at about 3:47 p.m. Prior to the first alarm, one of the occupants of the house heard a noise, Gorman said, and looked out an upper story window to see the couch on fire. He called other tenants to help him extinguish the flames with a fire extinguisher, but, by that time the fire had already started up the walls of the house.

Off duty firefighter Gary Smyth was driving by the house at the time of the blaze and aided the occupants in trying to put out the fire. He then evacuated the house. Chief Gorman said that one ocupant was asleep at the time, and was awakened by Smyth.

Gorman said that the flames spread quickly from the couch to the attic due to the "balloon type structure of the building." He said that in older buildings there is less space between floors. The boarding house was built in the late 1800's, he said.

Gorman explained that at one point the firefighters thought the blaze was out, but men went inside the building to find that the flames were travelling throughout the house.

Gorman had to order firefighters out of the third floor when the blaze caused the slate roof to collapse, he said.

Chief Gorman emphasized that the boarding house is well run and in keeping with the fire codes. He said the alarm system worked properly and all exits were cleared.

"It's a well managed house," he said.

The Red Cross and the City Civilian Defense aided the residents in finding temporary shelter. Dennis Tardo, president of the Quincy Tenant Organization, said that food and clothing vouchers had also been distributed, but hopes that a fund will be established for the residents who lost all their belongings in the blaze.

Chief Gorman said that "it's lucky there were no injuries...it was a good job by all."

The fire was the second at 180 Monroe Road in eight years. Gorman said there was a two alarm fire in pine trees on the property in 1981.

Scorecard, Anyone?

You may need a scorecard to keep track of this year's city election candidates.

The mayor's field seems pretty well set as a four-man race between former Mayor Joseph LaRaia (already announced) and City Councillors Steve McGrath, and James Sheets and businessman Peter O'Connell. The latter three are expected to make it official within a month -- McGrath by Feb. 2.

There are no other mayoral prospects waiting in the wings.

But, stand back, there are a lot of names popping up as potential candidates for City Council and School Committee.

Add the name of Stephen Kamb, 26, of Crosby St. a native Houghs Necker, to the list of prospective candidates for the Ward 1 seat Mike Cheney is expected to vacate to run for the at-large seat McGrath will be leaving to run for mayor.

Kamb, an industrial water treatment service manager says he is seriously considering a run.

Kamb, incidentally, was a campaign worker for Steve Tobin in the latter's successful bid for state representative.

Others previously mentioned for the Ward 1 seat are Jack Nigro, Peter Kolson, former Councillor Charles Shea and Denis Tardo.

IN WARD 4, with incumbent James Sheets moving toward the mayoral ring, a number of prospective candidates are reported in the "thinking about it" stage.

Among them: Democratic State Committeewoman Bernice Mader, Joseph Shea, who was executive secretary to former Mayor Walter Hannon, Tom Fabrizio and Keith Westerman.

Fabrizio, who lives on Reardon St., is the son of Hugo (Flip) Fabrizio, former member of the Quincy Hospital Board of Managers and oil firm owner.

Westerman, a public relations account supervisor for a Cambridge firm, has been around the political block a few times but not as a candidate.

He has done PR work for Dan Raymondi in the latter's unsuccessful bid for mayor against Frank McCauley, Governor's Councillor Peter Eleey, Councillor Mike Cheney. He also served as deputy press secretary to Gov. Edward King and worked for John Glenn in the latter's Presidential campaign which didn't get off the ground.

Westerman, incidentally, says he is "very seriously considering a run."

ON THE SCHOOL COMMITTEE scene, Ron Mariano, who was a teacher in the Quincy School system for 12 years, is warming up to running.

Mariano has worked as an investigator for the Bureau of Special Investigations and is now an assistant director with Rep. Robert Cerasoli's Post Audit and Oversight Committee.

He is chairman of the Ward 2 Democratic Committee, president of the Ward 2 Civic Association and active in youth basketball.

Right now there is one opening for School Committee with Peggy Nigro's decision not to seek re-election. There will be another if Mary Collins finds time conflicts serving on the School Committee and as Norfolk County Commissioner.

ALSO CONSIDERING A run for School Committee is Alicia Gardner, Squantum mother of three who has been active in the Squantum Community Association.

Stay tuned. There will be more names coming.

TOM GILMARTIN, former city councillor turned political analyst, has dusted off his crystal ball to make a few fearless political predictions.

GILMARTIN

He's already right and wrong.

Gilmartin predicted (before their announcements) that Gov. Mike Dukakis would not seek re-election but that Mayor Frank McCauley would.

He also predicts:

Mary Collins will not run for re-election to the School Committee.

Quincy's Frank Bellotti will run for one term as governor.

Evelyn Murphy will run for re-election as lieutenant governor. (This was before the Dukakis announcement which now appears to propel her into the gubernatorial field.)

FEELING IS THAT former Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly will not re-enter the political arena as a councillor at-large candidates. But that he will be back as campaign manager for Steve McGrath, in the latter's bid for mayor.

KELLY

Kelly headed McGrath's highly successful campaign for councillor at-large last time out.

READERS MAY RECALL photos by Steve Liss in The Sun in the 1970's. Liss, a Quincy boy, who got his career start at The Sun, has gone on to the big time.

In the Dec. 26 issue of Time magazine, one of his photos appears in the Images Pictures of 1988 section.

It's a shot of Presidential candidate Michael Dukakis sitting on a bale of hay while campaigning in Hull, Ill.

Time notes that Liss, while covering the Dukakis campaign, travelled an estimated 400,000 miles and shot 100,000 pictures.

SMILE DEPT: Mayor Frank McCauley walked into Hand Shakes where the pols gather, the day after he announced he would not seek re-election.

McCauley was wearing one of those tall fur Cossack-like hats. Sun. Ch. 26's Bob Gohl said: "Mayor, you look like a Russian officer."

"No, he doesn't" said Tim Cahill, city councillor and Hand Shakes owner, "he looks like a lame duck."

TENANTS INSURANCE

If you rent your residence you should consider tenant's insurance. It covers the standard seventeen perils included on a homeowner's policy. Hazards such as fire, lightning, windstorm, smoke, vandalism, theft, etc. are covered. The policy has a liability coverage for $100,000.00 in case someone sues you for a bodily injury claim emitting from your residence; eg. a liquor liability claim. Loss of use coverage will pay for your living expenses in instances where a fire loss requires you to move to a temporary location. There is also medical expense coverage.

The most important aspect of coverage is seldom discussed and definitely warrants consideration. That is fire liability insurance. If you are the cause of a fire which destroys the building in which you live, the owner's insurance company may sue you for he value of the loss. In light of that possibility, you really should be covered. You will be pleasantly surprised at how inexpensive such a policy is.

Councillors Angered Over Squantum Land Deal

At Monday night's City Council meeting, several councillors said they were angry because they were not informed of the announcement and because the deal lacked community input. And because they weren't notified, potential problems such as increased traffic in the Squantum area have not been examined, they said.

"What really upsets me is that there was no input by me, other city officials or our state representatives," Nutley said.

"This is not fait accompli. We still have a long way to go," Nutley said, adding he would call for a public hearing and ask officials from the MDC and MWRA to attend it and explain their action.

"I'd like to see what the chances are of the MDC getting the $6 million for the rest of the 35 acres," Nutley said.

Other councillors agreed that the two agencies should have sought input from Quincy leaders.

Cheney, who said he was notified of the acquisition "only minutes before" the 12:30 p.m. press conference in Squantum, said, "No one sat down with any city officials" to discuss the deal.

Cheney also voiced his disappointment in the fact that the MDC did not include taking the former Quincy Lumber Yard site as part of the state's open space program.

Located along Route 3A, Cheney said the former yard is a historic site which needs to be protected from development.

The Squantum site is part of the state's open space program, which according to Gov. Dukakis, will enable Massachusetts to "move forward, not backward to protect and strengthen an environment for generations to come."

Cheney also pointed out that the Squantum land acquisition is another example of Quincy being asked to help solve a regional problem.

"The city of Quincy has really done more than its share. We've certainly done our regional responsibility and it's about time they start looking elsewhere," Cheney said.

"I hope their intent to make the site into a park sometime in the future is sincere," he added.

In agreeing with his colleagues, Councillor Stephen McGrath said "This points to a major, major problem that the city has had with the Commonwealth. Our input is nonexistent.

"If the park happens, that's great but it's a long road before that might happen," he said.

McGrath Opposes Sludge Incinerator At Spectacle Island

City Councillor Stephen McGrath has written to Massachusetts Water Resources Authority Executive Director Paul Levy stating his opposition to any sludge incinerator being located at Spectacle Island in Boston Harbor.

"I feel strongly it is not in the best interest of the City of Quincy to have an incinerator at the proposed Spectacle Island site — just as it would be wrong to site this incinerator at the shipyard property in Quincy Point," McGrath said.

Ward 1 Councillor Michael Cheney, who has been a long-time advocate of Spectacle Island to be used by the MWRA for pelletizing or composting, said he agrees with McGrath and does not support incineration at Spectacle Island.

According to McGrath, an examination of a map shows Spectacle Island is just as close to the northern sections of Quincy (Squantum and Atlantic) as Long Island.

"An incinerator at the Spectacle Island site would obviously have a disastrous impact environmentally on the Squantum and North Quincy areas," he said.

"I suggest that another location be considered due to the negative environmental impact of a proposed site on either Spectacle Island or Quincy Point as neither section of the city should be subjected to environmental disaster.

"We must properly preserve the environmental integrity of the Boston Harbor Islands," McGrath said.

How About 49.8 Inches Of Snow?

Jan. 12-18 1948 41 Years Ago

A weekend storm dumped nearly a foot of new snow on beleaguered Quincy, which was swamped with a record total of 49.8 inches for the season, the most since records were first kept in 1871.

The snow was so deep that its weight collapsed the roof of the Howard Johnson storehouse at 650 Adams St., scattering ice cream cans on nearby Shirley St.

Engineer Earl E. Nutter and his helper, Nicholas DiGiulio, were relieved after 32 hours of continuous duty at the Nut Island screening plant when Engineer Irving K. Carter finally reported to work on skis.

A cold wave accompanying the storm drove temperatures down to 3 degrees in Quincy Square.

NEW FIREFIGHTERS

The City Council approved the addition of 60 men to the Fire Department in order to comply with the 48-hour work week that was voted in the November election. It was to start Feb. 5.

Mayor Charles A. Ross asked the Council to approve 61 additional men, including a deputy chief, a captain, 12 lieutenants, 46 privates and a clerk. He got all but the deputy chief.

Fire Chief Thomas F. Gorman requested 89 new men, including a deputy chief, a captain, 13 lieutenants, 69 privates and a clerk. The Council turned him down after a 4½-hour session.

It was estimated the new hours would add $140,000 to the 1948 city payroll.

Minestrone Soup

Back To Basics

No matter what article pertaining to food is published, it tells us it's time to "get back to basics," and begin cooking soups, stews and all that good stuff. But, some of us never left the "basics." For instance, with the holidays behind us now, it's a great idea to make soup or minestrone as I did this past week. You only need to start with water!

MINESTRONE SOUP

I quart of water
I medium onion
I stalk of celery
I cup tomato sauce (or stewed tomatoes)
I can red kidney beans
(or white beans if you prefer)
I package of either frozen or canned mixed vegetables
I Tbsp seasoned bread crumbs (optional)
Some grated Romano cheese for sprinkling
Salt and pepper to taste
One half cup of small elbows or ditali
(or any small pasta you prefer)

Cut up the onion and dice the celery. Put in the boiling water with the tomatoes or tomato sauce. Add the salt. After this has cooked for awhile, add the elbows and cook until the pasta is about half cooked.

Add the mixed vegetables and the beans. Simmer until done (about 20 minutes). If you like a thicker minestrone, add the bread crumbs very slowly until the minestrone is the way you like it. The day I made it, I had some leftover cabbage and cut that up and also added that. Any vegetable blends well here. Serve hot with grated cheese. It really sticks to those ribs on these cold nights!

Marie D'Olimpio is the author of "Simply Italian-And Then Some," a collection of her own recipes. Copies of the book are available at That's Italian, Franklin St., South Quincy; Previte's Market, Sumner St., Quincy Point , Samoset Pharmacy, Samoset Ave., Merrymount and Winfield Gift Emporium, Hancock St., Quincy Center.

"Participants in the classes will learn more about diabetes itself, how to live with it more effectively, and the effects of medications and diet in controlling the disease," Ms. Ferretti explained.

The first session of the program, which will provide detailed information on diabetes and coping skills, will take place on January 18 from 6:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. The second session, scheduled for January 25 during the same hours as the first session, will address medication and diet issues.

Geraldine White Honored On 101st Birthday

Geraldine White, who recently celebrated her 101st birthday with a party at the Quincy Nursing Home, joined the residents at the home last April.

Born in Charlestown on Jan. 2, 1888, she grew up with two brothers and two sisters who are now deceased.

"Gerri grew up in Charlestown where she received a high school education and worked as a teacher at Brockton High School. She was a devoted teacher who worked for many years before retiring at the age of 62.

Gerri, who never married, is a social person and belongs to the Massachusetts Teachers Association and the retired Teachers Association.

She enjoyed traveling to different places, including Alaska. Gerri also traveled to Cuba before Fidel Castro came into power.

She can certainly attest to the many changes during her lifetime.

A fitness advocate, she has been careful about her diet and exercise all her life, but continues to smoke.

Gerri lived independently in her Scituate apartment for many years previous to admission. She has a beautiful smile and enjoys helping others.

Although the world has changed during the past 101 years, caring and sharing with others is what makes life worth living, according to Gerri.

The Quincy Nursing Home staff agrees.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Folk sayings are part of humanity's collective wisdom, but they become the basis of a philisophy of life? Hardly, for almost every wise pronouncement is countered by another, equally profound and equally wise. Each saying embodies a bit of distilled wisdom, either the wisdom of a single perspective mind or the wisdom of group experience. On the other hand, to quote one such maxim, circumstances alter cases.

Following are some examples of mutually contradictory sayings:

If you want something done right, do it yourself; If you want something done right, don't do it yourself unless you know how ... God will provide; God helps those who help themselves ... Look before you leap; He who hesitates is lost ... Seize the day; Plan for the future ... Clothes make the man; Many a brave heart beats beneath shabby clothing ... Turn the other cheek; Don't tread on me ...

Apparently, it is impossible to compress all wisdom, even on one subject, into one sentence that will solve all problems. There is, however, one maxim that applies to all situations of life; This, too, shall pass ...

Masked Gunman Makes Big Misteak!

Hold-up man robs popular Marina Bay Eatery and Drinkery... Sgt. Joe Friday said "It is obvious that the bandit has never eaten at Amelia's.

If the masked holdup man who robbed Amelia's Restaurant at Marina Bay in Quincy had only know how succulent the Baked Scallops Nantucket were or how tender and delicious the Broiled Tenderloin Tips were, he would have left the money and fled with the chef Roberto.

Just the facts Joe:

For the steal of a lifetime, join us for lunch or dinner overlooking beautiful Boston Harbor at Amelia's Restaurant and Lounge.

If you're in a hurry for lunch you will never be held up at Amelia's.

Bring your whole "GANG" down to Amelia's and confine them for a meeting at the most secluded function room on the South Shore.

Come to Amelia's where you will never be robbed.

If you are out on bail have an arresting cocktail in our Fireside Lounge. Sentence yourself to Amelia's where your only crime will be enjoying great cocktails and fine foods.

It sure beats bread and water in solitary at the Big House.

REWARD: Any customer who brings in a black ski mask on/or before Sunday, JANUARY 15, 1989 to Warden Joe Campbell at Amelia's will receive a reward. The said customers will receive their choice of any item on our menu without formal charges.

Do not appear for your reward before 11:30 a.m. or after 9:00 p.m.

PLEASE DO NOT WEAR YOUR MASK OR ASK WARDEN JOE WHERE THE LOOT IS.

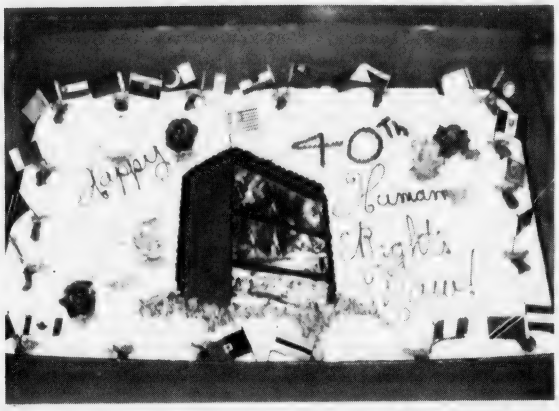
Broadmeadows Students Observe Declaration Of Human Rights Anniversary

In conjunction with Human Rights Week, 30 seventh and eighth grade students at Broadmeadows Middle School celebrated the 40th anniversary of the United Nations Declaration of Human Rights.

The students are members of a special Human Rights Awareness class which is part of a pilot program developed by teachers Ronald Adams and Eileen Sadof through a Horace Mann grant for Human Rights.



As part of the class, which meets for one hour per week, the students signed their names to the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and mailed this to the childrens display at the United Nations.

They have also written letters for the Amnesty International organization for prisoners of conscience, concentrating on child prisoners.

The anniversary party featured foods of many nations which were supplied and prepared by class members. Each student presented the background and tradition from his or her own cultural heritage.

The students also enjoyed a cake which was decorated with the United Nations Building surrounded by flags of several countries.

In addition, students presented original poetry, essays and posters based on Human Rights themes and highlighting some of the many activities of the class.

The following is an essay on Human Rights written by Lisa Chenette, an eighth grade student in the special Human Rights Awareness class at Broadmeadows Middle School:

By LISA CHENETTE

Human rights is a subject which deals with many different ideas. Therefore, I have learned many things from this class.

Some subjects that we discussed in class I have learned in Social Studies, but they are looked at in a different perspective in this class. There are still many more things that we have never learned before.

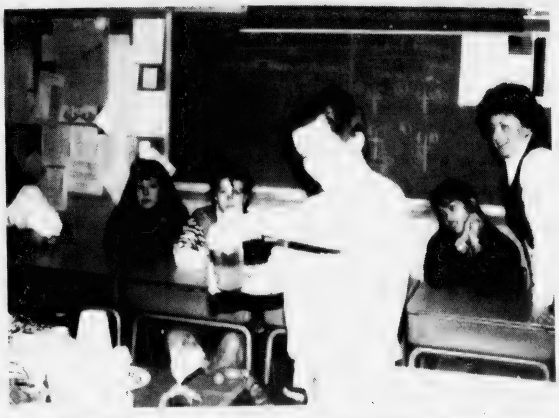
This class has been an extremely good learning experience for my classmates and me. I have experienced many new things.

One very special thing we have done was to make our very own World Wide Declaration of Human Rights. That really meant a lot to me.

Another very interesting thing we did was to discuss our ancestor's immigration to the United States of America.

We've taken two field trips so far. The first was to see the play, "Fiddler On The Roof."

The play was very entertaining and I enjoyed learning about the culture of the people of Russia at that time.



The field trip to the Boston Public Library was also very interesting. We saw the display "90 Years of Stereotypes in Comics."

In my opinion, I think the most important thing that I have learned from this class is friendship. I have learned not to form stereotypes of other people. Now, when I walk down the street, I feel differently about other people. I also feel better about myself because of this.

I think that this is a great opportunity for the students. I feel very privileged to be in this class and am every excited about the activities to come in the future.

Quincy, North Accepted In Old Colony League

By TOM SULLIVAN

It took three years, but Quincy and North Quincy have finally been accepted by the Old Colony League in all sports, effective the 1990-91 season.

The two Quincy schools, the smallest in the strong Suburban League, sought admittance to the Old Colony League two years ago but lost out by two votes. Last year they again missed, this time by a single vote.

"I am delighted that we finally have been accepted," said athletic coordinator Marty Finnegan. "There are a number of factors in our wanting out of the Suburban League.

"A major factor, of course, is the difference in enrollments. Some of the Old Colony League schools are bigger than we are, but we will be up against schools with numbers close to us. Instead of facing schools with 1700 to over 3500 (Brockton) enrollment, we will be up against schools in the 1300, 1400, 1700, 2000 range.

"With more parity, the kids will be much more competitive and I feel this is the major aim in school athletics.

"Another big factor is the traveling. It is bad enough now going through Boston and up Route 128 to meet such schools as Cambridge, Somerville, Arlington, Peabody, Medford and Malden. I dreaded the thought of going to those places and others the other side of Boston once work begins on the Central Artery."

The Old Colony League schools are Hingham, Weymouth North, Weymouth South, Marshfield, Silver Lake, Bridgewater-Raynham, Plymouth and Taunton.

"The longest trips will be to Taunton, Plymouth and Kingston (Silver Lake) and they are only a little more than 30 minutes away," said Finnegan.

"We'll have some fine neighborhood rivalries. It takes only a few minutes to get to Hingham and Weymouth and the other trips are not far."

One of the few problems arising by the move is the status of the two schools' girls' volleyball teams, which have dominated the Suburban League. The schools tied for the league championship this season and Quincy went on to win its third state title in seven years.

"We will try to keep the same opponents if it is possible and, if not, we will go independent," said Finnegan. "A few of the Old Colony schools now have volleyball and by the time we are in most of them could have teams."

Falmouth and Barnstable also applied to the Old Colony League but were turned down. Durfee High of Fall River and New Bedford have applied for admission to the Suburban League.

"If the league remains with 10 teams, it will make scheduling easy," said Finnegan. "We will have nine league games in football and 18 games in hockey, basketball, baseball and other sports, leaving us with only one football game and two games in the other sports to complete the schedules."

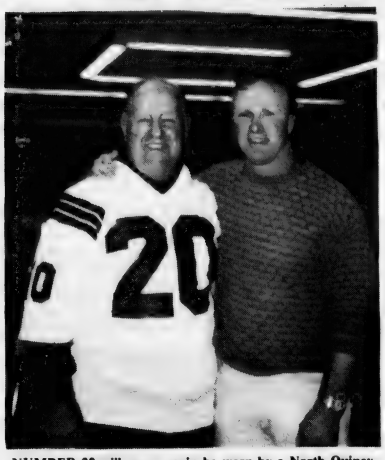
Both principals and virtually all the coaches are pleased with the move.

"This is something we have been looking for," said North principal Peter Chrisom. "A few of our teams have held their own in the Suburban League, but we are just too small for the league and I've been hoping to join a league like the Old Colony League."

"It is a fine move and should give our athletes a better chance at winning seasons," said Quincy principal Lloyd Hill.

"I think it is a terrific move and it should help our program," said Quincy football coach Jack Raymer.

"I was glad to hear we finally were accepted, it should help us all," said North football coach Ken McPhee.



"It is great, it is the most positive thing that has happened in several years," said Quincy basketball coach John Franceschini. "Our kids' spirits are up already, although we won't be in the Old Colony League for two years."

"It is an excellent move," said North basketball coach Ted Stevenson. "It is hard to ask our kids to go up against schools like Brockton and Cambridge in basketball."

"Actually, I'm a little disappointed," said North hockey coach Kevin Jago. "We have good relations with the Suburban League schools and we have more than held our own, qualifying for the state tournament four of the last five years. Maybe hockey is the exception. I think we will face some stronger teams in the Old Colony League."

There will be more than a little North Quincy interest in the move. Former North player and head coach Ralph Frazier is the athletic director at Silver Lake and Eddie Miller, North basketball coach for 11 years, is now the Marshfield coach.

One thing won't change. The Quincy-North Quincy game will continue on Thanksgiving.

NUMBER 20 will never again be worn by a North Quincy football player. Pete Zois, who wore the number while playing for Jack Donahue's Raiders from 1932-1935, is shown with North coach Ken McPhee at recent ceremonies at which his number was retired. Pete was captain of the 1935 team and was selected an all-star by the Patriot Ledger and Quincy Evening News in 1934 and 1935.

North Girls Defeat Cambridge Lose To Newton North

The North Quincy girls' basketball team evened its record at 4-4 by defeating Cambridge Rindge and Latin and losing to undefeated Newton North in its first two Suburban League games last week.

Paul Bregoli's Raiderettes were idle Tuesday and will face Quincy Friday night at 7:30 at the Quincy Vo-Tech gym.

The North girls rolled over Cambridge, 46-18, last Friday, taking a 22-10 halftime lead thanks to the excellent play of Karin Reister, who had six points and Kellene Duffy and Kara Sullivan four points each.

North outscored Cambridge, 13-2, in the third quarter to put the game out of reach as Tricia Mitton, Sullivan and Tara Miles came off the bench to spark both the offense and defense.

The Raiderettes widened their lead in the final quarter as Christine Salton scored three points and Kerry Tolson was outstanding.

Kerry Tolson had nine points and seven rebounds, Sullivan eight points, six rebounds, four assists and six steals, Duffy six points, six rebounds and seven steals and Reister six points and eight rebounds.

Earlier in the week unbeaten Newton North came from behind to top the Raiderettes, 59-42.

Tri-capt. Debbie Panaro sparked North to an 18-10 first quarter lead, hitting for six points. Tri-Capts. Paula Tolson and Duffy chipped in with four points each.

In the second quarter, after Newton had moved to within one, 22-21, Kerry Tolson hit five straight points to put the Raiderettes up by six. A Panaro driving layup and a Reister conversion of an offensive rebound pushed the North lead to eight at the half.

In the third quarter the Tigers went on a 16-2 run to go ahead, 42-34. A Sullivan shot at the buzzer left Newton ahead by six going into the final quarter.

Duffy went for a coast-to-coast layup to move North to within four but managed only free throws by Panaro and Paula Tolson as North turned the ball over and missed several easy shots.

Panaro had a career-high 13 points, Paula Tolson had 10 and Duffy six.

"We played pretty well in both games," said Bregoli. "We were still in the game against Newton until about three minutes left in the game. The kids played with lots of emotion in that one. Our bench played very well against Cambridge, particularly the underclassmen. We seem to be coming together better and things are looking up for the second half of the schedule."

Tough Week For Quincy

The Quincy boys' basketball team had a tough week as it lost to Brookline and Brockton in its first two Suburban League games to drop its record to 3-5.

John Franceschini's Presidents played at Cambridge Rindge and Latin Tuesday, will be at North Quincy Friday night at 7:30 and will host Newton North Tuesday at 5 o'clock.

Last Friday Quincy met Brockton, one of the Suburban League powers which has lost only to state Division 1 champion Durfee, and was overwhelmed, 82-41.

"We must have a good shooting game and if we do, we have a chance," said Franceschini before the game. However, the Presidents had a poor shooting night and numerous turnovers enabled Brockton to open up a 13-6 first period lead to a big 38-16 halftime advantage. At one point in the second quarter Quincy went nearly five minutes without a point as the Boxers went on a 15-0 run. Brockton took an insurmountable 63-26 lead into the final quarter.

Brockton coach Vic Ortiz used everyone on his squad but even the second and third-stringers increased the score.

"We just had a bad night and Brockton isn't really that much better than we are," said Franceschini.

The one bright light for Quincy was Jody Beauchamp, who scored 10 points, had 10 rebounds and two blocked shots. Mike Perkins had nine points.

Earlier in the week Quincy lost three starters on fouls in the fourth quarter and lost to Brookline, 58-53.

The Presidents came back from a 27-22 halftime deficit and took a two-point lead in the third quarter. Beauchamp, who finished with 16 points and nine rebounds, scored eight points in the third quarter.

Perkins scored nine points and had 10 rebounds before fouling out with six minutes left in the game. Joe Russell and Chris Noble also fouled out down the stretch.

Oscar Jara had a good night with seven points, seven rebounds and four steals.

North Bows To Cambridge

Things haven't been going well with the North Quincy boys basketball team and the Raiders were walloped by Cambridge Rindge and Latin, one of the top teams in the state, 85-48, last Friday, dropping their record to 1-7.

Ted Stevenson's North team was idle Tuesday, will host Quincy Friday night at 7:30 and will play at Waltham Tuesday night at 7:30.

"Cambridge has an outstanding team and its quickness took us out of our game early," said Stevenson. "They have everything, great speed, experience and size. They were just too much for us."

At the half Cambridge (7-1) held an insurmountable 52-20 lead.

Billy MacDougall had nine points for the Raiders and Tony Rugnetta and Erik DeBoer eight apiece.

Earlier in the week North turned in a fine performance but lost to Newton North, 65-61, after trailing by 10 points and coming within two points in the closing minutes of the game.

North trailed, 14-4, after a period and 46-39 going into the final quarter. Sean McDonough's basket pulled the Raiders to two points with three minutes left.

McDonough paced North with 15 points, Matt Sumner had 12 and Kip Caldwell had 10 points and 11 rebounds.

North Comes From Behind

The North Quincy hockey team came back from a 3-0 deficit to defeat Cambridge Rindge and Latin, 7-4, last Saturday in its Suburban League opener and improve its record to 4-3-1.

Kevin Jago's Raiders faced Quincy last night (Wednesday) and will host Newton North Saturday night at 7:50 at the Youth Arena.

Sal Mangnaro had a big night with a hat trick and three assists to spark North over Cambridge.

Brian Zimmerman and Joe Fasano had two goals apiece. Marty Feeney and Joe Keegan had two assists each and Paul McGrath one.

Jeff McClory had a fine game in goal for the Raiders and, with the score 3-3, made a spectacular save on a breakaway. North came back to score and led the rest of the way.

"It was a particularly important save for us," said Jago. "Jeff played an excellent game and he has been playing well in goal all season."

Earlier in the week North lost to Somerville, 5-2, when the winners scored three goals in the third period. North trailed by only 2-1 after two periods.

Mark Kelliher's goal put North on the board first and Mangnaro scored the other North goal in the final period.

McClory was especially outstanding in the second period when he held up well under four straight short-handed situations as he was peppered with 16 shots.

McGrath and Keegan played strong defense for the Raiders.

Quincy's scheduled game with Newton North Saturday night was postponed when the ice machine broke down.

Earlier in the week the Presidents suffered one of their worst defeats ever when undefeated Arlington rolled, 15-1.

Tim Mann had the lone Quincy goal. The game was over early as the Spy Ponders had a 5-0 lead after one period and a 13-0 edge after two.

Quincy will play Brockton Saturday at 4 o'clock at Brockton's Asiaf Rink.

Stephanie Olsen had six points, Cindy White four and Erin Duffy, Noreen McDonough and Jen Murray played an excellent game.

Hughes is averaging 14.8 points a game and Mitton 11.3. Jennifer White is averaging nine rebounds and two blocked shots a game and Mitton eight rebounds and two blocked shots. Hughes is averaging 11 steals a game and Duffy nine and Hughes and Duffy are averaging four assists a game.

And Rough For Girls

The young Quincy girls' basketball team continues to find rough going and last week lost to Brookline and Brockton in its Suburban League openers, dropping its record to 1-7.

Doug MacFarlane's First Ladies met Cambridge Rindge and Latin Tuesday, will host North Quincy Friday night at 7:30 and will be at Newton North Tuesday at 5 o'clock.

Brockton had too much height and experience for the Quincy girls last Friday and scored an easy 76-35 victory.

The Lady Boxers, sparked by Michelle Doonan and Julie Smalley, who combined for 38 points, reached out to a big 42-15 halftime lead.

Christine Barrett scored eight points for Quincy and Melanie Sullivan had seven points and took down 10 rebounds.

Earlier in the week the First Ladies bowed to Brookline, 53-28, after a 14-14 halftime tie.

Brookline's Jennifer Gray and Melanie Alexander combined for 32 second-half points to break the game wide open. Quincy was outscored, 16-4, in the third quarter.

Barrett had a fine game for Quincy with 10 points, eight rebounds and seven steals. She and Amy Baker had four points each in the first half. Sullivan finished with nine rebounds.

Girls Blank Nitehawks

The Quincy Youth girls' ice hockey team resumed league play with a 3-0 victory over the Nitehawks II team.

Stephanie O'Sullivan scored all three goals, two of them unassisted. Lisa Skehan and Janet Fennelly assisted on the other two goals. Nancy Craig, who filled in as goalie, recorded the shutout.

In their previous league game the Quincy girls lost to Randolph, 3-0.

The team competed in the fourth annual Connecticut Polar Bear tournament, losing the first two games, tying the third and winning the fourth game.

Bantam Bs Win

Quincy's Bantam B hockey team opened the second half of its schedule with a 3-1 victory over Hyde Park.

Brian Fitzgerald, David Mullen and Sean Vermette scored the goals, Vermette on a penalty shot. Mullen, Jimmy Smith, Fitzgerald and Mark Zych had assists.

Quincy Wrestlers Off To Impressive Start

By TOM SULLIVAN

The Quincy High wrestling team is off to a tremendous start with a 6-1 dual meet record (2-0 in the Suburban League) under second-year coach Lou Venturelli and assistant coach Joe Souza.

The Presidents' success is all the more remarkable considering the number of injuries and unexpected losses in personnel.

The Quincy grapplers, who competed in the Sanford, Me., Tournament last Friday and Saturday, faced Newton North in a league meet yesterday (Wednesday) and will be home to Braintree next Tuesday at 4 o'oclock.

The margins by which the "Men at Work" have won have been impressive, posting league wins over Malden, 40-27, and Brookline, 47-15. Non-league wins include Foxboro, 53-20; Durfee, 43-24; Plymouth, 37-35, and Norwood, 38-27. The only loss was a hard fought 38-32 decision to undefeated Randolph.

"I'm thrilled with the performances of a number of young wrestlers who have filled in for our anticipated starters," said Venturelli, himself a former Quincy star wrestler. "They have gone far beyond my expectations."

The Presidents have done without the talents of defending sectional champion Al Souza, returning starter Tom Burton and injured co-captain Scott O'Brien for much of the season.

Souza, a junior, has posted a spectacular 36-2 dual meet record in his first two years of wrestling. A state title was within his grasp until he suffered a year and possibly career-ending knee injury.

Burton, a sophomore 152-pounder, worked hard in the off-season and was looking to have a big year. A broken ankle sidelined him, but he continues to work hard in practice.

O'Brien, a senior at 135 pounds, started the year at 2-2, but has since been inactive due to a recurring knee problem.

This year's team features 24 wrestlers with only five returning starters.

Leading off at 103 pounds have been Matt Fratolillo, a sophomore, and Tim Schultz, a second-year senior. Fratolillo, only 94 pounds, frequently sees action due to the gap in the lineup at 112 pounds. Schultz has had to sacrifice his personal record for the team's goal and wrestle at 112 pounds much of the time. His impressive showing in fifth place at the prestigious Lowell Holiday Tournament is an indication of what he can do at 103 pounds in upcoming tournaments. Freshman David Cahill at 80 pounds is sure to be a big part of Quincy's future.

The 119-pound class is handled by freshman Greg Souza, another in the long line of Souza success stories.

Greg is improving rapidly and has a 5-2 record. He is followed by junior Brian Gannon, who, in the coach's opinion, has been "the most pleasant surprise of the season." Taking over for the injured Al Souza, Gannon has posted a 5-1 record with four pins. Freshman Roland Frenette provides backup in this weight class.

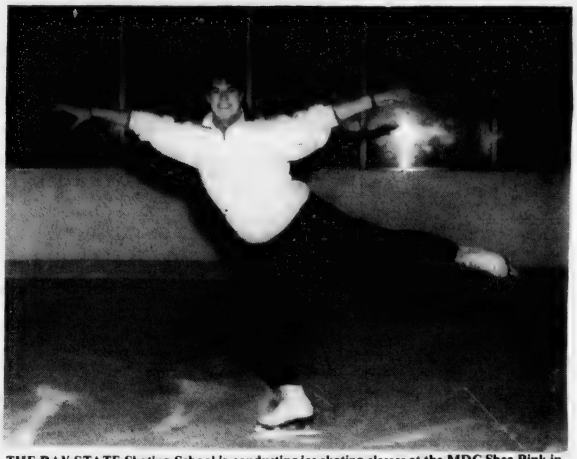
The 130-pound class is filled ably by senior Ennio Eleuteri. After three years of filling in where needed, Ennio has an impressive 5-1-1 record. His backups include junior Tom Fratolillo, who has seen varsity action at 135 pounds, and junior Donald Codner, who has been impressive with the junior varsity.

At 140 pounds senior Robert Connolly has won wherever he has been inserted. Most of his wins have been at 145 pounds and his record is 6-0-1. "Robert may surprise a lot of people come tournament time," said Venterulli. Sophomore Bob Stanton is 4-1 wrestling either at 140 or 145 pounds. First-year wrestler Dave Chevry and seniors Rob Grant and John Killen have seen action as well in the middle weight classes, by far the team's strongest point.

Quincy's "dynamic duo" have been senior co-captain Todd Kimmell (7-0) and junior Brian Burgess (also 7-0). Kimmell, returning as last year's Suburban League champion and sectional runnerup, is back at 145 pounds. He wrestles mostly at 152 pounds and even a match at 160 pounds.

Equally impressive has been Burgess. His quick start can be directly attributed to the hard work he put in during the off-season. "Brian will be very tough to beat," said his coach. "His strength alone is enough to win most of his matches."

Junior Jim Iorio has also seen varsity action at 160 pounds.



The 171-pound class was originally handled by junior Allan Spaur, but a recent shoulder injury has sidelined him for a few weeks. Senior Sean Gannon has worked hard, dropping over 25 pounds in an attempt to fill this weight class. Gannon has worked hard enough to pick up two recent wins and is one of the team's "unsung heroes." Junior Jerry Stavrakopoulos is 1-1 at 189 pounds.

Quincy's heavyweight, senior Tony Madden, is 5-1, often having the extra pressure of the meet being solely on his shoulders.

"I couldn't be happier for Tony, he is a fun kid to be round and he makes coaching fun," said Venturelli.

Among upcoming meets are league meets with always-tough Newton North, Waltham and Brockton, as well as cross-town rival North Quincy, the sectional tournament at Hingham and the state tournament at Reading.

"Come out and support a winning tradition in Quincy High School wrestling," said Venturelli.

THE BAY STATE Skating School is conducting ice skating classes at the MDC Shea Rink in West Quincy under the direction of Carolyn Burke, above. Lessons are available for children ages 5 and up and adults for beginners and intermediate skaters. Information can be obtained by calling the school at 965-4460.

Cheney Asks Alternative To Sludge Incineration

Ward 1 Councillor Michael Cheney has asked Quincy Public Works Commissioner Paul Anderson to reintroduce a process called "chemfixing" as an alternative to incineration as a treatment of sludge by the Massachusetts Water Resoures Authority.

Cheney made the recommendation at Monday night's City Council meeting.

Anderson is Quincy's representative on the MWRA Board of Directors.

Chemfix Technologies, a Louisiana based firm, operates processing facilities at several sites across the nation including Los Angeles and in Florida and has foreign licensees throughout the world.

According to a Chemfix media package, the company's goal is to "find solutions to waste disposal problems that will help both the generator and the environment alike-in ways that are the least harmful and most beneficial to both parties at the same time."

In commercial use since 1971, the Chemfix process has treated nearly half a billion gallons of hazardous and nuisance wastes.

Among the industries that have wastes suitable for the Chemfix treatment are automotive, chemical and municipal such as sewage and water treatment plants.

At Chemfix Technologies, a characterization of each waste material to determine the exact physical and chemical requirements for treatment are performed. By doing this, the firm can recommend the most effective, cost-efficient method for achieving a desired solution.

With the Chemfix process, specific chemical reagent combinations are developed that are designed to reduce toxicity in waste materials.

Then, in a specially designed processing unit, the predetermined reagent formulation is added to the waste material and incorporated into homogeneous mixture.

A series of chemical reactions, which begins to take place immediately, initiates the Chemfix process. The processed material is then discharged as a safe, non-polluting gel.

Moreover, the Chemfix equipment is capable of treatment more than a quarter of a million gallons of waste materials per day.

Since the clay-like end products are environmentally safe, they may even in some cases be sold to supplement the cost of processing, for such uses as landfill cover, bulk fill or as an agricultural liming substitute.

Cheney has been a long-time opponent of incineration as a way to treat sludge.

Anderson said he would bring the matter up with the MWRA at their next board meeting.

For Outstanding Community

Martin Finnegan Sun 'Citizen Of Year'

Martin C. Finnegan, coordinator of Project Impact, an innovative program to train teachers and community adults to help youngsters deal with drug, alcohol and other problems, has been selected as The Quincy Sun's "Citizen of The Year" for 1988.

Finnegan, who joined the Quincy public schools as a student physical education teacher under Munroe MacLern in 1950 and is now Director of Athletics, was selected from among 33 nominees submitted by Quincy Sun readers.

The final selection was made by a 10-member panel from the 33 submitted nominees.

Finnegan is the fourth winner of the award established in 1985 to annually honor an individual for outstanding community service or for a special achievement.

Prior winners were Anthony Siciliano, Deputy Civil Defense Director; Ruth Wainwright, long-time community volunteer and Richard J. Koch, Sr. a leader in charitable and community causes for four decades who was selected posthumously in 1987. He died in August of that year.

Finnegan was nominated for the award by Janet S. Powell, a teacher at Broadmeadows Middle School and a member of one of the help teams created by Project Impact.

In nominating Finnegan, she said:

"He has a tremendous vision for freeing our children from drug/alcohol abuse. He is responsible for Project Impact, a very important school and community partnership. Thanks (to him) for loving and caring."

Sun Publisher Henry Bosworth said:

"I congratulate Marty Finnegan for being selected for this award. He is most deserving. He has given thousands of hours of his own time since 1985 opening the line of communication between adults and youngsters, getting them to work together to better understand one another and fight the battle against drug and alcohol abuse.

Bosworth also congratulated the other 32 nominees. "We again

Local Women Who Met Her:

'Barbara Bush Will Be A Different First Lady'

By JANE ARENA

What kind of a First Lady will Barbara Bush be?

She'll be quite different than Nancy Reagan, according to three local women who remember her from a 1979 visit to Quincy.

Norma Gacicia, Quincy real estate broker, Joyce Card, mother of Rep. Andrew Card (R-Holbrook), and Joyce Baker, President of the Quincy Historical Society and an active member of the Quincy Republican Women's Club, feel that Mrs. Bush will be:

A symbol of motherhood and family; supportive of her husband, but not in the limelight; and a down-to-earth, real person.

In 1979, when Bush was running for the Republican nomination before becoming Ronald Reagan's vice presidential running mate, Mrs. Bush visited Quincy at a coffee hour hosted by Mrs. Gacicia.

Gacicia remembers her as being "a very warm person, and very nice." She recalls receiving a thank-you note after the coffee hour.

"It was in her own handwriting," she says, "and she mailed it herself, it wasn't sent by her staff."

As First Lady, Gacicia feels Barbara Bush will be "a symbol of motherhood...she makes you think of the American family. She's a good family woman."

Mrs. Card agrees. She sees Barbara as "a real good person...down to earth...she has strong feelings on the family unit...she's just what a First Lady should be."

"She's not the least bit pretentious," Mrs. Baker says. "She's very strongly family orientated, which is very positive, but, in my opinion, that has to be coupled with things outside the family."

The women also share the impression that Barbara Bush will not be in the limelight as much as her predecessor, but that she will still be strongly supportive of her husband.

"She's right there behind her husband," Gacicia says, "but she knows her place."

"She's very supportive of her husband," Card says, "and I really do admire her tremendously. It's very difficult to be the spouse of a candidate, and she does it with style, wit and charm."

While Nancy Reagan has been criticized for being politically involved to an extreme, these women feel that Barbara Bush will be more subtle in her approach.

"She's quite different, a completely different type of person than Nancy," Gacicia says. "She'll be there, but she won't be in the limelight. She'll be as effective as Nancy Reagan, but not as visible."

Card has similar thoughts:

"She'll be right there, but she won't hog the limelight...Nancy's very ladylike, but there's not the strong family unit as there is in the Bush family."

"She is quite different from who we have in the

Cheney Pushes For Chemical Treatment Of Sludge

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Saying it is "the only plan that will free up the shipyard and eliminate incineration in everyone's backyard," Ward 1 Councillor Michael Cheney is advocating the chemical treatment of sludge on Spectacle Island as an alternative to incineration of sludge processing as part of the Boston Harbor cleanup.

Cheney, who is the acting mayor this week, stated his position at a press conference Tuesday in Boston City Hall. He was joined by Boston City Councillor Maura Hennigan Casey; Roy Cohen, chairman of Stoughton's Board of Selectmen; and Steve Fradkin, member of Stoughton's Residual Task Force and the town's alternative delegate to the Massachusetts Water Resoruces Authority Advisory Board.

Members of OASIS (Organization Advocating A Spectacle Island Site) attended the press conference. Also, Peabody Mayor Peter Torigan, who has been a pioneer on the issue of sludge processing with the Chemfix technology, was scheduled to make a presentation.

According to Cheney, chairman of the city council's environmental control commission, the chemical treatment, better known as Chemfix, is environmentally sound, safe, odorless, non-offensive and eliminates incineration as an option.

EPA approved, Chemfix neutralizes toxic waste and metals and does not leech out, he said. Furthermore, Chemfix converts sludge into an environmentally-safe and reusable product.

"Chemfixing is the only plan that I envision will free up the General Dynamics shipyard and would also eliminate incineration in everyone's backyard," Cheney said.

Cheney also voiced concern that the MWRA might look into Clean Harbors in Braintree to incinerate their secondary sludge.

"It is extremely important that we oppose incineration of

Comer To Cover Inauguration For Sun

Quincy's John "Jake" Comer, past national commander of the American Legion, will cover the inauguration of President George Bush for The Quincy Sun.

Bush will be sworn into office as the nation's 41st president at 12 noon on Friday. Thousands of dignitaries and citizens are expected to attend.

Comer, who was named honorary chairman of Veterans Affairs for the Inauguration as outgoing commander, will travel to Washington, D.C., today (Thursday) with his wife, Eileen. They will return home to Quincy Sunday.

While in the nation's capital, the Comers will attend several inaugural ceremonies, including the "Medal of Honor Ball" which is sanctioned by the American Legion.

JOHN (JAKE) COMER

"This ball is always a sellout. People look for this ball because of the way it's run," Comer said.

One of those persons is President Bush, who is planning to make an appearance, Comer said.

"The President comes to the American Legion Ball; he does not attend all of them," Comer said in pointing out the ball's prestige and popularity.

When Comer greets Bush Friday night, it will mark another occasion when the two have met. One of those times was this past summer when Comer introduced Bush at the American Legion National

Kelly To Head Up McGrath's Mayoral Campaign

Councillor Stephen McGrath, who will shortly announce his candidacy for mayor, has announced that former Council President Leo Kelly will serve as his campaign chairman.

"I am very pleased that Leo Kelly has agreed to serve as campaign chairman," McGrath said. "Leo is a respected figure throughout the city and will bring knowledge, insight and an outstanding political and environmental background to this position," he added.

LEO J. KELLY

In a prepared statement, Kelly said he would not run for councillor-at-large in order to chair McGrath's campaign.

"I am very enthusiastic at the prospects of Steve McGrath running for mayor of the city of Quincy and serving as chairman of the campaign effort," Kelly said.

"Steve's candidacy brings a solid record of government experience with it, particularly in the area of city finances," he said.

Kelly, a former Ward 1 councillor, noted that Mayor Francis McCauley has deservedly received praise for his management of city finances and part of that success has been the good working relationship the mayor has had with the council leadership.

He pointed out that McGrath has served in all major leadership positions on the council including two years as president. He is currently in his fourth year as chairman of the Finance Committee.

These positions have required hard decisions in areas of city government where resources are limited and McGrath has proven his capacity to lead, Kelly said.

"I look forward to working with him in the campaign," he added.

Kelly had flirted with the idea of running for Councillor-at-large.

Nutley Opposes Spectacle Island For Sludge

Ward 6 Councillor Thomas Nutley has written to Massachusetts Water Resources Authority Executive Director Paul Levy stating his strong opposition to the use of Spectacle Island for either incineration or sludge treatment of any kind.

"Spectacle Island is much too close to the heavily populated areas of Squantum, North Quincy, and Wollaston to escape the harmful impacts of any such actions," Nutley stated.

"Poisonous fumes from incineration borne on the on-shore winds and/or odors from sludge treatment would seriously compromise the quality of life for residents in the nearby northern areas of Quincy.

"Additionally, that island, after being covered with fill from the Central Artery excavations, could become one of the recreational jewels of the Harbor islands. Our children, and theirs, would be the benefactors of a thoughtful and wise decision by your MWRA board to rule out Spectacle Island for incineration or any kind of sludge treatment," he said.

Continuing, Nutley stated, "In fairness, and fairness should play a major role in the siting of such facilities, then all communities — not just Quincy, Winthrop and Walpole — should contribute in some way to the overall situation of a regional solid waste problem.

"Other communities contribute to the problem; they cannot remain unwilling participants to its solutions.

"On that basis, I strongly recommend that some area other than Spectacle Island be chosen as the permanent regional site for processing sludge," he said.

PLANNING AND RETIREMENT
(A FOUR PART SERIES)

Retirement is a phase of life that usually arrives upon reaching the age of 65 or 70. With advances in medicine and the public's growning awareness of responsible health practices, more people will reach retirement than ever before. We will probably also live longer than ever too. It's conceivable to have ten to twenty years ahead of us when we enter that period. Planning is important, no matter how long we live. Most of us do not plan ahead and we find that all the tomorrows slip by much too fast.

What kind of issues about the future do people anticipate? Future finances is obviously an area that needs attention in the present. Will social security still be a functioning system when you are ready to retire? How would you cope with a long term illness and dependency on others? You may have concerns about having enough excess money after retirement to be able to enjoy your free time. What happens to your family in the case of a premature death? How does one keep up with skyrocketing medical costs?

I'll be addressing these issues in the coming weeks. To do so I'll divide my readers into three age groups. Each group has a different focus on issues. The groups will be: ages 20-40, ages 41-55, and 55 through retirement.

At Riley & Rielly Insurance Agency, Inc. our insurance professionals are happy to discuss the many protection options available today. Please give us a call at 471-6200 or stop by our office at 1050 Hancock Street in Quincy.

O'Connell To Take Campaign To People

Quincy businessman Peter O'Connell will formally announce his candidacy for mayor Tuesday, Jan. 24, and immediately take his campaign to the people.

O'CONNELL

O'Connell plans to make his announcement in five different places during the day and expects to do it in front of more than 1000 people.

He will start off on the front steps of City Hall at about 9:30 a.m. where he started his business career 30 years ago selling newspapers.

Amelio Della Chiesa was mayor at the time.

O'Connell will climax the whirlwind day with a reception from 7 to 9 p.m. at the National Fire Protection Association at Batterymarch Park in West Quincy. It will be open to the public.

O'Connell will become the second official mayoral candidate with two more to get into the ring.

First announced was former Mayor Joseph LaRaia. City Councillors Steve McGrath and James Sheets have announcements coming shortly.

A QUINCY DELEGATION is in Washington for President George Bush's inaugural. Included:

Mayor Francis McCauley and his wife, Sandra: City Councillor James Sheets and his wife, Joanne; City Council President Patricia Toland, City Councillors Steve McGrath and Tom Nutley, Arthur Foley, the mayor's administrative aide and Planning Director Richard Meade.

CHENEY

With both the mayor and city council president out of town, Ward 1 Councillor Michael Cheney gets to be acting mayor. Some day he'd like to take the word acting out of that.

While there, the Quincy delegation will attend the National Mayors Conference.

SPEAKING OF CHENEY, an item here last week mentioned him as among political figures Keith Westerman has done PR work for. Westerman is now considering a run for the Ward 4 City Council seat.

Cheney says Westerman once took some pictures of him but they were never used.

"I don't need a PR man," he says. "I do my own PR at the grass roots level. I talk to the people."

MICHAEL CONDON, unsuccessful candidate for City Councillor at-large in 1987 is considering a return to the political arena this year.

One of three possibilities: another run for councillor at-large, a shot at the Ward 2 seat or school committee.

Condon lives on Elm St. which is in Ward 2.

M. CONDON

MEANWHILE, there has been some speculation that his mother, Joanne Condon, might return to the political scene, herself.

J. CONDON

The former Ward 6 councillor, who ran against Mayor McCauley in 1985 is "being seen around again" as political observers call it.

In fact Condon will be the guest speaker at a meeting tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. of the Quincy NOW Chapter at First Parish Church. Her topic: becoming involved with community affairs.

THERE'S ANOTHER CANDIDATE warming up for a run for the Ward 4 City Council seat soon to be vacated by James Sheets to run for mayor.

Darrin McAuliffe, 28, of Grogan Ave., says he will conduct an aggressive campaign "that would reach out to every voter in Ward 4."

McAuliffe, who has been employed by the O'Connell companies, adds: "I was born and raised in West Quincy. I love my neighborhood and I want to see West Quincy get the best representation it deserves."

YOU CAN ADD the name of Marcia Olinto as a candidate for the Ward 1 City Council seat.

Olinto, 44, is a lifelong Houghs Neck resident and longtime community activist.

She is currently an executive board member of the Houghs Neck Community Council.

The seat is presently held by Michael Cheney, who is expected to run for councillor-at-large.

STORK REPORT: City Councillor Tim Cahill and his wife, Beth, are parents of a third daughter, Devon, who apparently isn't superstitious. She arrived Friday, Jan. 13, at Quincy Hospital, and weighed in at 10 pounds, four ounces. She is the Cahill's third daughter.

OBSERVATION via the Quincy Kiwanis Club and from wherever they got it:

"Plan ahead. Noah didn't build the ark in the rain."

Cheney Suggests Youth Work Projects To Clean City Areas

Ward 1 Councillor Michael Cheney, who is acting mayor this week, says he will meet with Public Works Commissioner Paul Anderson and Park-Recreation Director Ray Cattaneo to discuss the feasibility of implementing a youth-work program to clean up various sections of Quincy including its parks.

"We should not wait until the summer months to begin work on cleaning up public areas in the city of Quincy," Cheney said.

He will also ask Anderson and Cattaneo to investigate the feasibility of hiring teenagers to work Saturdays cleaning up parks and beaches.

According to Cheney, this will help Quincy in two areas: (1) the cleaning up of public areas in the city which is sorely needed and should not wait until summer and, (2) employ young men and women on Saturdays and during the spring school vacation.

Cheney will push for the program's implementation this spring.

He will also meet with the building inspector to discuss the implementation of opening the building inspector's office one night a week for residents only.

Cheney noted that a number of residents in Quincy work during the daytime hours and find it extremely difficult if not impossible to apply for building permits to renovate their homes or receive information regarding the building permit process during regular business hours.

"The city of Quincy must recognize that in most homes both the mother and the father are out in the workplace during the day, and it has become ever increasingly difficult for residents to receive information and apply for building permits during regular business hours," he said.

Cheney said he will meet with the building inspector to encourage him to come up with a plan that would allow residents only to apply for building permits during the hours of 4:30 and 9 p.m. one night per week.

If the program were successful, the city could expand it to two nights per week, he noted.

Antiques Evening Course At Aquinas

George Michael, one of New England's foremost experts on antiques and collectables, will teach an evening course on antiques at Aquinas Junior College, Milton, beginning on Jan. 24.

The six-week course at Aquinas will be held Tuesday from 7 to 9 p.m.

Mr. Michael is best known for his PBS television series "Antiques Americana," which began airing in 1963.

He was a cultural enrichment lecturer for Royal Viking Lines, a vacation cruise line and also travels as an expert appraisor. His background ranges from antique pocketbooks to glassware, however, specializes in furniture.

For more information on the workshop, please call 696-3100.

Martin Finnegan Sun 'Citizen Of The Year'

had a number of outstanding nominees," he said. "To be nominated is an honor in itself because the nominations come from the community."

Finnegan will be honored in March at a reception to be hosted by The Sun at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center.

Finnegan says the goal of Project Impact is:

"We must learn to communicate. We adults must learn how to tell our young people that they are precious to us. They are important to us. And most of all, that we love them.

"By doing this, we can help them get through the difficult years of growing up. If we can make the school and the community climate better for kids, they won't need to turn to drugs and alcohol. They will turn to us.

He notes that Impact, in Project Impact stands for:

Initiate. Motivate. Prepare. Activate. Communicate. Teams.

Project Impact came about as a result of Finnegan attending a National High School Athletic Coaches Association conference on Drug and Alcohol Education in 1985.

While there, he met Dr. Gerry Edwards of the Northeast Regional Center For Drug Free Schools and Communities, who was the speaker.

This particular conference was aimed at helping athletes. Why not all youngsters, Finnegan thought.

Finnegan began speaking at gatherings here and in various other communities and out of it came Project Impact in Quincy with the full blessing of School Supt. Dr. Robert Ricci.

Finnegan secured a $20,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Education that enabled 20 teachers and community representatives to participate in an eight-day conference in Newport, R.I. last October sponsored by the Northeast Regional Center For Drug Free Schools and Communities.

It was no junket. The participants spent eight days, 8 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. learning how to early recognize and how to help youngsters with drug, alochol and other problems.

Four Impact teams were then put together with five members each, at Quincy and North Quincy High Schools and at Broadmeadows and Atlantic middle schools.

This weekend, Finnegan will lead a 60-member contingent to Marlboro for a three-day conference. Among the 60 will be the original 20 members and other teachers and representatives from the community.

Finnegan hopes the program will continue to expand.

Finnegan is married to the former Norma Gay and they lived at 165 Quincy Shore Drive, North Quincy. They have five daughters and two sons, all graduates of the Quincy public schools.

Plan A Committee Celebrates Victory Over Plan E

Jan. 19-25 1956 33 Years Ago

The Citizens Committee for Plan A held a victory celebration to commemorate the defeat of Plan E in the November election.

Laurence J. Curtin, one of the prime movers behind the Plan A Committee, told celebrators:

"Plan E, promised lower taxes and better government. It produced nothing."

"Don't be carried away with the propaganda that we need an outsider to run our city," said former Public Works Commissioner Angelo P. Bizzozero.

"The task belongs in the hands of the people who love Quincy."

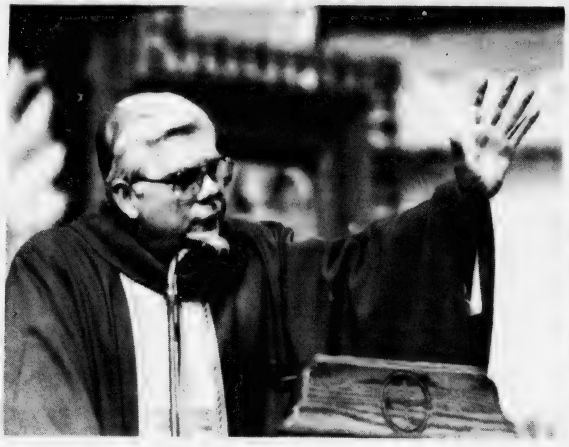
The Plan E charter, under which Quincy was governed since 1930, was voted out by a margin of 14,378 to 12,851.

HOSPITAL OVERCROWDED

Dr. Joseph P. Leone, director of Quincy City Hospital, said that "overcrowded conditions at the hospital are very bad and they are getting worse."

In the past few weeks, said Dr. Leone, it was necessary to deny admission to several acutely ill patients because the waiting list averages 25 to 35 and lengthening.

COMMUNISTS ASSAILED



Rev. Oswald A. Blumit, 45 Myopia Rd., Wollaston, told the Quincy Kiwanis Club that native communists and fellow travelers "are the most dangerous communists and enemies of our American way of life."

The way to handle the communist menace, he said, is to fight it and not practice appeasement.

Rev. Blumit advocated breaking off "every relationship with ungodly Russia. No matter how fair you are with Russians they won't be fair with you."

Human Rights Begin With Right To Life Says Cardinal Law

By JANE ARENA

During a visit to Sacred Heart Church, North Quincy, on Saturday, as part of the city's Human Rights Awareness Week, Bernard Cardinal Law said that a true understanding of human rights begins with an understanding of the issue of abortion, because human rights begin with the right to life.

After celebrating a Mass at the church, the Cardinal spoke with Sun Channel 26 and expanded on the idea:

"If you really are going to reach out and recognize the inherent dignity of every individual, of those who are poor or homeless, of new people in our midst, we must recognize the fundamental right to life. One of the tragedies is that we don't do that...so, it's a small wonder that we fail in other ways to regard to human rights...if we don't recognize and protect the right to life of the most innocent of human beings—a human being just beginning life — then I think we're just whistling Dixie if we think that we're going to be able to respect the rights of new peoples or do an effective job of dealing with homelessness and drugs, because we've already proven that we really don't care that much about the right to life and the dignity of the human person."

Cardinal Law said that he feels future generations will look on abortion as a crime against human rights, just the way today's society looks on the Holocaust or slavery.

"In times of slavery," he said, "there were great many heroes and heroines, many from this area, in the Abolitionist movement. Can you imagine that within half of our country's short history, men and women thought they had the right to keep other human beings in slavery?...It's unthinkable! How could we have done that? Yet, we did it.

"That's why I really commend so many in the City of Quincy, the churches, the religious groups, the public officials...the groups of citizens who band together in human rights commissions... these things are so important, observances like this week, to remind us all that every human being is sacred, that every human being reflects the presence of God. And the only way to relate to one another is with respect, with love, with support. We just need times like this week to remind ourselves of that."

Maryknoll Priest Will Discuss Asian Cultures

A Maryknoll priest who has spent most of his career working in Asia will speak at the regular monthly meeting of Richard Cardinal Cushing Assembly, Fourth Degree Knights of Columbus on Monday, Jan. 23 at 8 p.m. in North Quincy Knights of Columbus Hall, Hollis Ave. and Hancock St., North Quincy.

Rev. Alfred V. Keane, a Dorchester native, will discuss his experiences over there with particular emphasis on the Asian culture and how it differs from this country's, a timely subject in view of the influx of Asian people to the Quincy area.

Because the assembly believes that misunderstanding of Asian mores could be a major contribution to the problems the Asian neighbors have encountered in recent months, it will forgo its business meeting and open the session to all members of the community.

Fr. Keane was ordained a priest in the Maryknoll Order in 1958 and immediately sent to Asia where he has served ever since except for brief reassignments to the states every six years.

He is known as the Amerasian Priest because of his successful efforts in lobbying Congress to pass legislation, in 1982, allowing children left behind by American servicemen to be admitted to this country.

Fr. Keene will be returning to Asia next month.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

D. Scott Deware

Everyone of us at sometime in our lives go through the experience of temptation. Temptation is a trial. Have you ever noticed that a lot of times temptation seems to be directed at those points in our lives where we seem least able to withstand.

"Lead us not into temptation," is simply the petition that God will keep us free from the trial of temptation. God never tempts anyone. We tempt ourselves. Too many times we are not watchful enough of the company we keep or the situations we put ourselves into. We think that if we had just a few more of the good things of life we would be happy and content. Let's think upon this... Couldn't it be said that if we have to violate our conscience by gaining any apparent value, then the acquisition of this value will make us unhappy and keep us so until we decide to change the policies of our lives and the pathway we follow?

A life without temptation and trial would appear to be an ideal existence. But is this true? We don't think so... We all need to stand before the hard situations of life if we are going to get out of life the blessings it promises

Quincy Sun Car Care Guide

Automobile safety should be your first wintertime driving precaution

Motorists who prepare for cold weather driving by having an engine tune-up and the battery serviced should go one step further by checking the overall safety of the car.

This includes having the right tires on the car for any sort of weather condition that the season may bring. Contrary to the common belief that a car doesn't need snow tires if it has radials, experts in the field are saying now that snow tires (radial, bias or bias belted) provide up to 50 percent more traction in soft snow than conventional radials alone. Growing in popularity for year-round use is the all-season mud and snow tire.

Key checkpoints

Make sure that your brakes are in good shape, and check out the exhaust system to protect the driver and passengers from lethal carbon monoxide fumes during the winter season's "windows closed" driving weather.

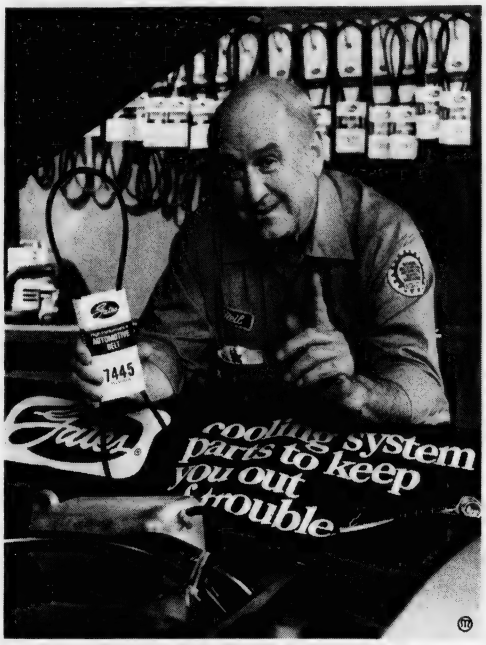
The Gates Rubber Company suggests that the entire cooling system be given a complete check. Almost nothing can stop a car faster than a broken water pump belt or a blown radiator hose.

If engine belts are cracked on the bottom or glazed on the sides, or if the car is four years old, the belts should be replaced immediately.

A coolant mixture of 50 percent water and 50 percent permanent antifreeze should be maintained for maximum protection against the elements or a rust-clogged radiator.

The system should be drained, flushed and filled with new coolant every two years. This also is a safe interval for replacing the radiator hoses.

See and be seen



Inspect the car's lights and windshield wipers to ensure that you can see and be seen. With winter's wet, snowy driving conditions, and the sand and salt splatter, chances of wiper and washer failures are greater because the demand on this equipment is at its peak.

Is your car fuel-efficient? The cold weather months are the least economical for saving gas. Warming the engine in below-freezing temperatures burns disproportionate amounts of gas.

Stop-and-go driving with long periods of idling also wastes fuel. Check fuel line hoses for cracks and aging which could cause unexpected hose failure, says Gates.

Don't overlook the emission efficiency of your vehicle. Since winter conditions confine most cars to heavily populated areas, the potential for saturating the air with pollutants is greater.

So, attention to emission control equipment is even more important in winter. A tuned engine emits far less than a neglected one.

MOST PROFESSIONAL AUTO MECHANICS will agree with The Gates Rubber Company recommendation that engine belts should be replaced every four years. Extended car warranties mean that these important drive belts often are overlooked for potential failure.

Just because it's winter, don't forget your car's air conditioner: It can help you survive the cold

As you're rolling along the highway this winter, and your car's windows fog up, don't just turn on the defroster—clear your windows with a blast from your car's air conditioner as well, says Swedish automaker Saab.

In winter, your car's windows sometimes fog because of moisture emitted from your damp clothing and other sources. It is this moisture that condenses on your windows in the same way that moisture condenses on a can of cold soda pop.

How air conditioner works

In a car's air conditioning system, the evaporator takes this moist warm air from the interior compartment and simultaneously dries it as it cools.

Inside the evaporator, low pressure refrigerant gas, called freon, evaporates and turns to vapor, absorbing heat in the same way that your hand will get cold from holding a piece of ice—your hand is giving up that heat which is absorbed by the ice. Your hand then feels colder.

As the car's warm interior air passes over the cooler air conditioner's evaporator, moisture also condenses on it, just like on that can of cold soda pop. This moisture collects on the evaporator, and is discharged outside the car after it accumulates as a liquid.

This is the manner in which the air conditioner dries the interior air as it cools, and therefore reduces the tendency for the windows to fog.

If the idea of using your air conditioner to assist in defrosting your windows sounds too offbeat, then at least take the other piece of advice being offered by Saab.

Prevent deterioration

During the winter, Saab says, your car's air conditioning system should be switched on once or twice a month, and run five or 10 minutes each time. This practice helps prevent deterioration of compressor gaskets and seals.

When you run your air conditioner, the compressor is lubricated by a special oil which circulates with the refrigerant. When you do run the air conditioner in winter, be sure the outside air temperature is above approximately 35°F.

Wedding Of Your Dreams: First Step To A Lifetime Together

Contemporary brides favor mix of traditional, modern concepts

When it comes to her wedding, the contemporary bride often mixes traditional and modern concepts that influence not only the ceremony and her gown, but also the wider arena of marriage and her relationships.

Brides today are older than they were, but that does not rule out a large, traditional ceremony and a long white gown. However, it is also chic to be married in a tailored suit.

The key to a successful wedding is deciding on one with which the bride and groom are comfortable. The new trend in weddings for the '80s must reflect the personality of the couple getting married.

The most important factor in '80s weddings is the freedom of expression to create your own unique ceremony and a reception that reflects your ideas.

Because today's bride is older, she often has an education and career experience behind her. Her tastes are more sophisticated and so are her expectations of her relationship with her spouse.

A new balance

Not only does she value her marriage, but also the career that she has worked to obtain. Chances are she will strive to create a balance between the time she spends with her husband and the time she allocates for her job. Time management is important to most young couples making the transition between single and married life.

Matrimony has experienced a resurgence in the '80s but it incorporates a new breed of togetherness. Women today enjoy more career freedom than their mothers, but also have rediscovered traditional ideas. Today's bride is likely to advocate equality, dual careers, and sharing the tasks of parenthood but have more traditional values as well.

With education and career freedom comes the fact that the bride of today has done traveling outside her hometown. She may have gone away for college and then relocated to a city with career opportunities. This means it is less likely that the bride of the '80s will marry her high school sweetheart.

Therefore, chances are that the bride and groom are from different parts of the country. This leads to innovative ideas to get the friends and relatives from both sides to mix and mingle at different weekend events such as barbecues, picnics and cocktail parties.

Behind the trend

What this translates about the new trend in weddings for the '80s is that they are an intimate interpretation of the couple to be married, reflecting their ideals, goals and lifestyle.

Much of the previous criticism of the institution of marriage revolved around the idea that, once you were married, you had to disregard the person you were before. Most of today's couples have more defined goals before marriage, so they have a clearer sense of their own identity and needs.

There is also a new trend involving the groom. He is more involved in the planning of the wedding. With couples striving toward equality, it is only natural that the groom become more of a participant than a spectator.

The wedding day is acknowledged as a day the couple can share, rather than considered to be a day reserved solely to "give away" the bride.

Today's couple has a new maturity and freedom reflected by how they choose to celebrate their marriage. Wedding choices are varied and numerous, ranging from large, formal, traditional weddings to an outdoor wedding in the country with a picnic reception.

All of this leads to the freedom of expression that characterizes the marriage —as well as the wedding—of the '80s and makes them more enjoyable experiences for all involved. BR893373

FOR THE SHINING MOMENT that is her wedding day, every bride dreams of being as beautiful as she can be. Oscar de la Renta makes this dream a reality with his elegant, classic gowns that are destined to be treasured.

Financial aid for the bride's family

It's traditional in the United States for the parents of the bride to cover the entire cost of a couple's wedding. But, according to Bride's magazine, this situation is changing.

For the first time, there's a definite trend toward the sharing of wedding expenses, says Bride's. The groom's family, as well as the bride and groom themselves, are taking on a chunk of the financial responsibility.

One reason for this may be changing attitudes toward the nature of marriage. In this era of liberation, a bride's parents are no longer considered to be "marrying off" their daughter. Rather, the wedding is seen as the joining of two people.

Pearls are a bride's best friend

Ever since history's first bride said the first "I do," pearls have been a bride's best friend. Once considered mystical gems with the power to ensure long life and prosperity, today pearls are perhaps the perfect jewel to accompany a blushing bride down the aisle.

"A fine strand of pearls is probably the best single jewelry item a bride can wear," states Linda Weichenrieder of Modern Bride magazine.

"Not only are pearls elegant, traditional and always in fashion, but they complement almost any bridal design as well. They seem to have the unique ability to pick up and enhance the glow of a woman on her wedding day."

Indeed pearls, which come in a variety of shapes from round to baroque, in colors from white to black, and in lengths from choker to opera, will surely flatter any woman and the gown she chooses to wear.

With the wide array of different bridal designs on the market today, all it takes is a little fashion savvy and good taste to select the perfect strand of pearls to suit a particular look.

For off-the-shoulder, scoop and boat necklines, shorter strands of pearls in single or multiple layers are the key. For high and "V" neck styles, long strands of pearls create a regal, yet demure feeling.

Just as a woman will consider the style of gown when selecting the right length of pearls for her, she should also take into account what color pearls go best with her skin and hair tones.

Experts say that creamy pearls with a golden overtone look best on women with dark skin and dark hair. Off white, cream colored pearls are perfect on women with olive and fair complexions and dark hair. And rose or slightly pink-hued pearls are smashing for those with fair complexions and blonde or red hair.

When shopping for pearls, keep in mind that lustre (the clarity of the reflecting surface of the pearl) and orient (the deep seated glow that seems to come from within the heart of the pearl) are two important factors that influence price.

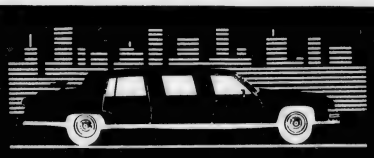
While natural pearls are the most expensive, they are also very rare. Cultured pearls, which are also fine jewelry, are considerably less expensive.

The only difference between cultured and natural pearls is that man has given the oyster a helping hand by surgically inserting an irritant into the oyster rather than leaving it to nature. Imitations are by far cheaper than cultured or natural pearls, in more ways than price alone, and are completely manmade.

According to Freddy Kohn, president of the Cultured Pearl Association of America, a marked increase in cultured pearl sales across the country over the past three years has been directly related to a growing appreciation for formal weddings in the U.S.

"I think that in this day and age when things seem to be moving faster, growing larger, and selling 'harder' than most people care to admit, traditional concepts such as marriage and family life are looked upon as a basis for stability," he said.

"American brides are wearing cultured pearls as opposed to imitation pearls, not simply because of tradition, but because cultured pearls are gems that will hold their value over time. Cultured pearls are as real and warm as brides hope their wedding day will be."



ALL AT ONCE ELEGANT, CHARMING AND DEMURE, pearls have the ability to pick up and enhance a woman's glow on her wedding day. Four strand 8mm cultured pearl collar courtesy of the Cultured Pearl Association of America. Silk and satin wedding gown with headpiece by Priscilla of Boston.

GRAND, GLORIOUS AND TRADITIONAL: It's those very special looks shared by the bride and her groom that make a wedding so memorable. Her gown by Michele Piccione for Alfred Angelo is pure sentiment in taffeta with appliques of hand-beaded lace. His proud stance is heightened by the streamlined cutaway designed by Pierre Cardin. Textured fabric in the coat and double breasted vest makes a dramatic fashion statement with distinctive striped trousers.

Bermuda is ideal for honeymooners, and may be perfect locale for the wedding, too

Already a favorite honeymoon spot for American newlyweds, Bermuda is becoming a place for American couples to get married as well.

Weddings on the Island are up 10 percent this year, according to the Registrar's office in Bermuda, and honeymooners enjoy Bermuda so much that about 40 percent of the people who revisit Bermuda first went there on their honeymoons, according to the Ministry of Tourism.

Bermuda hotels, recognizing the importance of honeymooning guests, offer more than 40 packages for newlyweds during both the spring/summer and fall/winter seasons. Couples have a wide choice of accommodations: Large hotels, small hotels, cottage colonies and guest houses.

This charming island, just 600 miles east of North Carolina, has long been a popular choice for honeymooners traveling outside the U.S. who seek its English charm, beautiful weather, shopping bargains, sports and continental cuisine as well as the opportunity to enjoy both solitude and lots of activity in the same place.

The year-round temperature of Bermuda averages a delightful 70 degrees Fahrenheit, and there are more than seven hours of sunshine during the usual day.

Outdoor activities include golf on eight courses, tennis on more than 100 courts, swimming, windsurfing, sailing, snorkeling, horseback riding, parasailing, scuba diving and reef fishing.

New attractions include a submarine and a West End village. Other favorite activities can include traveling by moped to see the Zoo and Aquarium, crystal caves, a perfume factory, a dolphin show, historical sites and museums.

Restaurants offer a variety of continental dishes and more straightforward British pub fare, and night life ranges from disco to cabaret to the Island's own Calypso rhythms.

Discovered by a Spaniard in 1503, and founded by the British in 1609, Bermuda is a paradise for history-lovers and sightseers. The main towns are Hamilton, the capital, and St. George's, known for its English relics.

The island is 21 miles long and two miles across at it widest point. Some people believe Shakespeare set The Tempest in Bermuda, where visitors will find "Prospero's Cave" and "Shakespeare's Grottos."

Shopping honeymooners in Bermuda can save 20 to 50 percent on fine European goods, such as crystal and china, clothing, linens, leather and fabrics, cosmetics and perfumes, jewelry and watches. No sales tax makes shopping even more enticing. Couples returning to the U.S. can bring back $800 worth of the goods duty free. The Bermuda dollar is on a par with the U.S. dollar, and American currency can be freely used.

For those who decide actually to get married in Bermuda, the island offers a number of charming customs, including riding a horse-drawn carriage to the ceremony.

The bride's wedding cake has a cedar tree placed in the center of the top tier that can be planted later to foster long-lasting love. It's also customary for the groom to have his own cake—a plain one topped with a gold leaf symbolizing prosperity.

Lasting happiness also is associated, in Bermuda, with newlyweds walking together through a moongate—a round, stone structure found in many gardens on the island.

Information on the new requirements for getting married in Bermuda is available from Bermuda Department of Tourism offices in New York, Chicago, Boston, Atlanta and Toronto. BR893610

Bridal lingerie for all sizes

THE ROMANTIC DREAM SET is a must in every trousseau, says lingerie designer Olga. She makes this one in sizes up to XXXL so every bride can feel and look beautiful. Nightlace combines poetic lace with a stretch top and swirling skirt, in gardenia, light aqua, peach, blush, pink puff, blue puff non-cling nylon.

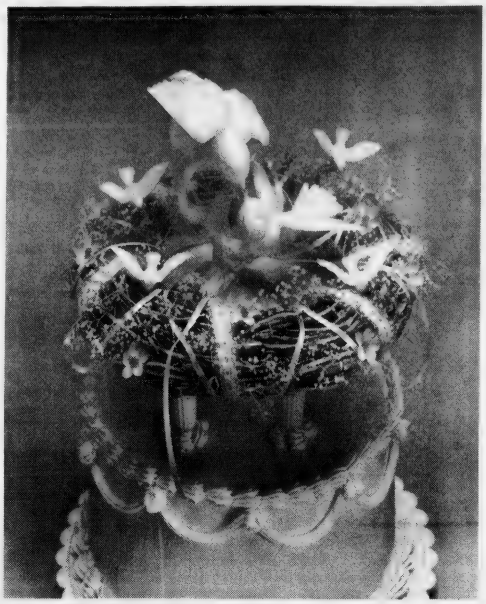
Create your very own traditions

Traditions abound at weddings, from the custom of the bride and groom slicing the first piece of wedding cake to the tossing of the bridal bouquet.

The wedding is also a time for the bride and groom to initiate some traditions of their own. The bride has an opportunity to make a personal statement when she selects the flowers, the color of her attendant's dresses and the wedding cake.

While the cake is usually prepared by a caterer, the bride can decide on the type of cake and choose the icing, colors and decorations to match the theme of the wedding party.

Today's bride also might want to start a tradition of her very own by designing and making the ornament for the top of the cake.



The romantic cake ornament pictured here is easily made with Wilton's Kissing Love Birds and Small Doves framed in a 7-inch wreath, and decorated with ribbons and dried or fresh flowers. The cake ornament's base is a Wilton separator plate (6-inch) and four spiked pillars (5-inch).

These pieces are available directly from Wilton, and at many craft and specialty shops. The wreath may be purchased in most craft shops. They are just a few of the wedding cake ornaments from Wilton that make wonderful keepsakes.

Another keepsake and reminder of the wedding day is a pair of leaded crystal toasting glasses for the bride and groom, etched with a bridal couple, and tiny flowers and ribbon accents. The glasses are trimmed with ribbons and flowers which are matched on the cake ornament; glasses cost $24 and are from the Wilton's Loving Traditions™ line of wedding accessories.

A crystal wedding bell, a handsome cake knife and server set, a ring bearer's pillows and personal accessories for the bride also are part of this new line. The bride's accessories include frilly garters and a satin and lace drawstring purse.

CREATE YOUR OWN WEDDING TRADITIONS by designing your very own wedding cake ornament and toast the day with keepsake crystal bridal toasting glasses.

Wedding preparation for the bride and groom

Choose a date, pick a place, order flowers and invitations, reserve a photographer and a caterer. Do these activities sound familiar? Any bride and groom will recognize them as the planning activities for that all-important day—the wedding.

In addition to these steps, there are many more that the two of you will need to address. To ensure that all the wedding plans go smoothly, and that you have time left over to take care of yourselves, follow this simple guide to wedding preparation strategies.

First, remember always to plan in detail. There are many things to do before your wedding day arrives, and things will fall into place if you plan out every small detail. Second, allow as much time as possible to put everything together. With these two tips in mind, your plans can be effortless.

After choosing the wedding date, the bride can shop for a gown. Plan on spending a few full days visiting several bridal boutiques. Bring your mother or maid of honor along to help you on and off with the gowns. Once you decide on a gown, the bridal shop-keeper will help you schedule intermittent fittings right up until the week before your big day.

Schedule separate days for finding your bridesmaids' dresses. Try to choose a style that will look good on most figures. Your bridesmaids will also need to schedule fitting sessions to be sure the dresses fit them and that they are all the same length.

And, grooms, choose both your tuxedo and the ushers' tuxedos. Fitting sessions must also be scheduled with the tuxedo tailor.

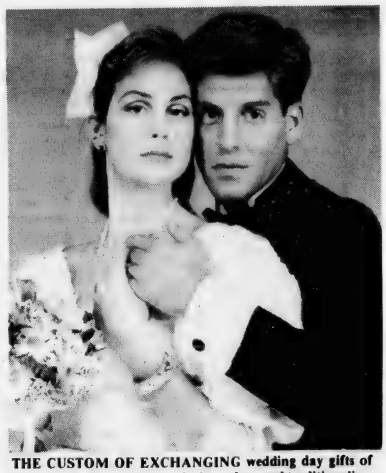
Next, with several months before the wedding, the two of you should spend time planning your beauty and grooming strategies. For example, devise an engagement exercise and diet plan. Exercise together at least three times a week to slim and tone your bodies.

Try cycling, walking or playing racquetball—these are fun activities you can do together that keep you in tip-top shape. Remember, though, to apply an effective anti-perspirant like Sure to control odor and wetness.

Men, try Sure's Desert Spice Scent and women, try the Powder Dry Scent. Regular Scent and Unscented are also available. Apply Sure every morning and again every night to ensure a maximum all-day fresh feeling.

Chart out a balanced diet from the basic food groups: Fruit and vegetables; dairy; meat, fish and poultry; and bread, cereal and grains. As you get busy, try not to skip meals; it's not healthy.

Also, try to cut out snacks whenever possible. However, if you must snack, reach for fruit or vegetables such as oranges and carrots—they are rich in vitamins A and C which can keep hair and skin healthy.



Since your hair and facial skin are your two most visible features, be sure to care for them properly. Start by shampooing daily with a good shampoo and conditioning system like Ivory. It is available in four formulations for Normal, Oily, Dry and Fine hair.

Used in tandem, Ivory Shampoo and Conditioner gently clean and condition hair, leaving it soft, manageable and full of body with no heavy buildup.

With clean and healthy hair, you can style and shape your hair into your desired wedding day look. Try styling it this way several times in the weeks before the wedding, and be sure to have it trimmed.

In addition, wash your face twice daily with a mild cleanser. Both of you should follow this with a light moisturizer for softness. Men, this procedure not only cleans your face, but softens your beard bristles for obtaining a close shave.

Once the two of you have all your wedding plans in place and have taken the proper steps to look and feel your best, you'll be able to fully enjoy that very special day.

THE CUSTOM OF EXCHANGING wedding day gifts of gold is back, thanks to a marked trend toward traditionalism among newlyweds. Many couples opt for the quality and sentimental appeal of gold, a symbol of their lifetime promise. On the bride: 14k earrings by Kurt Wayne; pearl and 14k necklace by Lisa Taubes; 14k braided bangle by Limoges Jewlers. Dress by Angela Cakiades. On the groom: 14k oval cufflinks by Larter and Sons; 14k ring by Christie Frantz.

North Defeats Quincy, 58-50

JIM SUGRUE of Quincy scores in last week's game at North Quincy as North's Erik DeBoer moves in. North won, 58-50.

BILL MacDOUGALL of North Quincy is airborne as he scores in victory over Quincy. Quincy's Joe Russell looks for a possible rebound.

The North Quincy and Quincy boys' basketball teams met for the second time, the first in Suburban League competition, last Friday and the Raiders, racing out to a 21-6 first-quarter lead, topped the Presidents, 58-50, to avenge a Quincy win in the consolation round of the annual Christmas Tournament at Weymouth South.

Weymouth South

Ted Stevenson's North team improved to 2-7 while John Franceschini's Quincy team fell to 3-7.

Quincy met Newton North Tuesday, will be idle Friday and will host Waltham next Tuesday night at 7:30.

North faced Waltham Tuesday, will be home to Brookline Friday at 7:30 and will be at Brockton next Tuesday night at 7:30.

"We've had trouble scoring and I was real happy with our production at the start," said Stevenson. "It was by far our best quarter of the season and our defensive intensity picked up when they started to get untracked offensively. I figured we'd beat them if we held them under 55 points."

Quincy had a terrible night at the foul line, missing 17 free throws, including the front ends of seven one-and-ones.

"No question about it, the difference for us was poor foul shooting," said Franceschini. "We threw away 26 potential points. North really wanted the game and we had difficulty with their pressure down the stretch."

Quincy came back after the disastrous first quarter and trailing, 35-22, at the half, the Presidents cut the lead to 44-42 after three and tied it at 44 at the start of the final quarter.

A key factor at the end for North was the clutch shooting of sophomore Pat O'Donahue, who made all four of his free throws in the final minute when Quincy was forced to foul when trailing by six points twice.

Erik DeBoer paced North with 14 points, including three three-pointers. Derek Goodman had 13 points and Matt Sumner 11, including two three-pointers.

For Quincy Mike Perkins scored 18 points and Jody Beauchamp 16.

Earlier in the week Quincy found Cambridge Rindge and Latin (10-1) too strong and the Presidents dropped a 69-30 decision.

Joe Russell and Perkins had 12 points apiece and Perkins took down 10 rebounds.

Raiders On Roll

By TOM SULLIVAN

The North Quincy hockey team is on a roll and playing its best hockey of the season.

Kevin Jago's Raiders, after defeating Quincy, 5-2, defeated Newton North by the same score Saturday night to improve to 6-3-1 overall and 3-0 in the Suburban League.

North was idle last night (Wednesday) and will host Waltham Saturday night at 7:50 at the Youth Arena.

"The Newton game was our most disciplined of the season and everyone did an excellent job," said Jago. "Right now we are playing our best hockey and I am pleased with the way everyone is digging in.

"Jeff McCory has done an excellent job in goal and has made the big saves when needed and the defense of Paul McGrath, Joe and Duane Keegan, Amando Mancici and Jimmy McCarthy has been tremendous. We have had a lot of penalties and the other teams have had few power goals."

Joe Fasano had two goals against Newton and Sal Manganaro, one of the top scorers in the league, McGrath and Brian Zimmerman had one each.

Manganaro also had three assists.

In the win over Quincy Fasano scored two goals and an assist and Manganaro, Joe Hajjar and Kane had one each.

North took a 2-0 lead after a period but Quincy closed to within one, 3-2. The North defense, led by McGrath, Joe Keegan and Mancini, closed the door and Fasano and Kane added third period goals to clinch the win.

McClory had another good game in goal and made several fine stops late in the game.

"Fasano has come a long way and is playing outstanding two-way hockey," Jago said.

Quincy Has Scoring Problems

Things aren't getting any better for the Quincy hockey team and a 7-2 loss Monday to Everett in a game postponed earlier dropped its record to 1-8.

Bob Sylvia's Presidents, who are battling hard in every game but to no avail, played Cambridge Rindge and Latin yesterday (Wednesday) and will play Brookline Saturday at 5:30 at the Watertown rink.

"We played a pretty good game at Everett and were in the game until the third period when they scored three goals," said Sylvia. "The boys are playing hard all the time but we just haven't been able to put the puck in the net and have had a hard time holding down the other teams."

Steve McGinnis scored the first goal against Everett with Tim Mann assisting.

Eric Seamans scored the second with assists for Nick Cafano and Mike Noonan.

Last Saturday Quincy lost to Brockton, 8-1, with Seamans scoring the only goal and Noonan assisting.

Earlier in the week the Presidents turned in a strong effort but were defeated by North Quincy, 5-2.

North took a 2-0 lead but Quincy came back to trail by only 3-2 going into the final period on goals by Noonan and Mann. The Raiders clinched the win with two goals in the last session.

Quincy goalie Craig Galligan had an outstanding night as he made 35 saves.

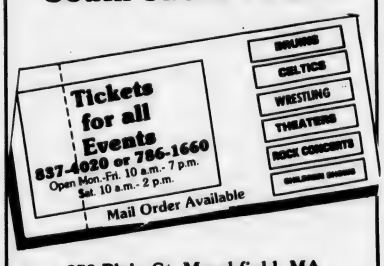
Quincy Wrestlers Pin Newton North

Quincy's wrestling team continued its outstanding season with a 36-32 victory over Newton North to improve to 7-1 overall and 3-0 in the Suburban League.

Todd Kimmell, Brian Burgess and Robert Connolly remained undefeated as Kimmell won by forfeit at 145 pounds, Burgess won a 7-1 decision at 160 and Connolly won by pin at 140.

Jr. Jerry Stavrakopoulos, a first-year wrestler, nailed down the deciding points with a pin at 189 pounds. Connolly, leading 4-3 into the final period, pinned his opponent with 30 seconds left.



Also winning for Quincy were Greg Souza by pin at 119 and Scott O'Brien by pin at 135.

Bantam Bs Win

Quincy's Bantam B hockey team defeated Somerville, 6-1, in a Greater Boston League game.

Ellis Leads North Over Cambridge

With all swimmers recording personal bests and diver Tom Ellis leading a sweep, the North Quincy swim team defeated Cambridge Rindge and Latin, 104-65, last Friday to improve to 5-3.

Bill Walker's Raiders faced Dedham yesterday (Wednesday), will host Brookline Friday at 4 o'clock at the Lincoln-Hancock School pool and will face Brockton Tuesday at 4 at the same site.

North's winners against Cambridge were David MacKay in the 200 individual medley (2:52.35), Jim Peers, 100 backstroke (1:22.34); Don Howie, 100 breaststroke (1:12.74); Ellis, diving (189.05 points) and the 200 medley relay team of MacKay, Howie, Dan Reilly and Alex Smith (2:07.9).

Taking second places were George Gavros, 50 freestyle and 500 freestyle; Brian Ramos, 100 freestyle and 200 freestyle; Peers, 200 individual medley; Reilly, 100 butterfly and Kevin Heffernan, 100 breaststroke and diving.

Placing third were Andy Oglivie, 50 freestyle and 100 butterfly; Smith, 100 freestyle; Mark Nitschke, 500 freestyle, and Pat Noonan, diving.

Earlier in the week North defeated Westwood, 105.5-60.5 as Ramos won the 100 and 200 freestyles and swam the lead leg of the winning 400 freestyle relay team.

Winning for the Raiders were Ramos, 100 freestyle (58.97) and 200 freestyle (2:19.39); Howie, 100 breaststroke (1:16.33); Ellis, diving (179.10 points), the 200 medley relay team of Peers, Howie, Reilly and Erik Schwendenman (2:15.97), and the 400 relay team of Ramos, Nitschke, Gavros and MacKay (4:12.90).

Placing second were Erik Gustafson, 200 freestyle; Gavros, 500 freestyle; Reilly, 100 butterfly; MacKay, 100 backstroke and 200 individual medley; and Heffernan, diving.

Taking third places were Oglivie, 50 freestyle and 100 butterfly; Smith, 100 freestyle; Nitschke, 200 freestyle; Peers, 100 backstroke; Heffernan, 100 breaststroke, and Noonan, diving.

Squirt As Win Tourney Crown

Quincy's Squirt A hockey team won the championship of the recent Santa Claus Tournament at the Pilgrim Arena in Hingham by rolling undefeated through a strong 12-team field and defeating Brockton, 6-1, in the championship game.

Quincy walloped Hingham, 8-1; tied Westwood, 3-3, and ousted Braintree, 7-0, to move into the championship final.

Brendan O'Brien had a hat trick in the opener against Hingham, John Healey had two goals and Ron McGann, A.J. Carthas and Tom Sullivan one each. O'Brien and Steve Barrett had two assists apiece and McGann, Sullivan and Healy one each.

Westwood scored with just 19 seconds left to play to tie Quincy. O'Brien, Carthas and Callow had the goals and O'Brien had two assists and Brian Bartkus, Dan Stone and Dan Hughes one each.

Goalie Mark Smith recorded his first shutout of the year in the win over Braintree and eight of his teammates figured in the scoring. McGann scored twice and Hughes, Healey, Bartkus, Barrett and O'Brien each once. McGann and Jenna Nolan had two assists apiece and Jamie Murphy one.

The title game was a defensive struggled most of the way despite the deceptive 6-1 score, as Quincy scored three goals in the final two minutes of the game. Smith again was outstanding in goal and was helped greatly by the defense of Dan Donahue, Eric Griffin and Jason Fennelly. O'Brien ahd McGann each had two goals, O'Brien scoring on two breakaways after being stopped by Brockton goalie Andrew Manning on a penalty shot. Carthas and Murphy had the other goals. McGann, O'Brien, Barrett and Hughes had assists.

The team, sponsored by South Boston Savings Bank, improved its record to 9-1-2.

Squirt Bs Win 16th

Quincy's Squirt B hockey team, sponsored by Continental Cablevision, defeated Charlestown, 5-3, in a Greater Boston League game to improve to 16-7-0.

Quincy took control early as Shawn McTomney and Chris Grant scored two goals each to set the pace.

Jimmy Gallagher, Tom Moriarty and John Manning assisted on the goals.

The play of the game came when Joshua Wingate dumped the puck deep in the Charlestown end to Robbie Pirelli, who saw Billy Barron in front all alone. Pirelli made a nice flip pass over both sticks of the Charlestown defensemen on the stick of Barron, who scored the insurance goal.

The key to the win was the backchecking of Wingate, Moriarty, Manning and Gallagher, as they kept the puck off the sticks of the Charlestown players.

The defense did an outstanding job, keeping the play in the Charlestown end.

Goalie Timmy Sheehan was awarded the game puck as he came up big late in the game with Charlestown going all-out to tie the game. He stopped a breakaway as he slid across the crease and buried the puck in his pads.

Matt Jarnis was named the player of the month of December.

Pee Wee As Breeze

Quincy's Pee Wee A hockey team defeated Somerville, 6-1, in a Greater Boston League game played at Boston University's Walter Brown Arena.

Jeff Craig and Kevin Boylen scored two goals apiece and Brian Wood and Steve Miller one each.

Michael DesRoche and Dan Morrell had two assists each and Doug Nolan, Brian Sullivan, Scott Joyce, Kevin Barrett and Miller one apiece.

Tim Wassiege was outstanding in goal and Jamie Schatzl, Matt McGowan and Rob Guarnerie played strong games.

North Girls Explode To Take Quincy, 51-29

The North Quincy girls' basketball team broke a close game open in the second half and defeated Quincy, 51-29, last week at the Vo-Tech gym.

After Quincy's Jennifer Richmond gave the First Ladies an early 2-0 lead, the Raiderettes went on a 10-2 run and took a 14-6 first quarter lead. Keyes in the run were four points each by Kellene Duffy and Deirdre Murphy and two by Kerry Tolson.

North took an 18-7 lead early in the second quarter behind Paula Tolson and Debbie Panaro. However, Quincy battled back behind sophomore Melanie Sullivan's five points and baskets by Kim Robertson and Amy Baker. A Tolson jump shot just before the half gave the Raiderettes a shaky 23-17 lead.

North came out red hot in the third quarter, outscoring Quincy, 15-2. Panaro hit for three straight baskets and Murphy added four points. Quincy again bounced back as Maureen Shea, Julie McCloskey and Baker combined to close the gap to 40-25 going into the fourth quarter.

North put the game away early in the last session with an 11-0 run. Murphy had five points and Kara Sullivan, Panaro and Duffy had two each. Quincy's Christine Barrett scored the games final four points.

"Our pressure defense seemed to be the difference," said North coach Paul Bregoli. "We had 17 steals and numerous deflections and seemed to disrupt their offensive patterns. Panaro played a great game and Murphy scored a 'quiet' 16. Also, our bench played a fine game."

Earlier in the week Quincy defeated Cambridge Rindge and Latin, 40-25, for its second win of the season.

(Cont'd from Page 1)

Convention in Louisville, Ky.

He also had the privilege of introducing President Ronald Reagan and Gov. Michael Dukakis, who then was the Democratic nominee for president.

The convention was attended by 6,000 Legionnaires.

According to Comer, all Congressional Medal of Honor winners are invited to attend the American Legion Ball to be held at the Capital Hilton in Washington.

About 2,500 people are expected to attend the ball Friday night, including a group from Massachusetts.

Included in the group are Charles MacGillvary of Braintree, a Medal of Honor recipient, and Tom Hedner, the deputy commander of Massachusetts who will lead the Pledge of Allegiance at the start of the ball.

Besides the Comers, some other well-known Quincy residents plan to attend the American Legion ball. They are: Mayor Francis X. McCauley, Councillors Patricia Toland, Stephen McGrath, James Sheets and Thomas Nutley; Planning Director Richard Meade and the mayor's administrative assistant Arthur Folev.

The Quincy officials will be in Washington attending the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

After the Comers arrive in Washington Thursday, they will attend the Indiana Society's Inaugural Dinner and Dance at the Sheraton Washington Ballroom.

Vice President Dan Quayle, a former senator from Indiana will be present.

Comer said he is especially interested in attending this ball because the American Legion headquarters is in Indianapolis, Indiana.

A black tie affair which will be attended by many dignitaries, Comer said this ball should be "exceptional."

On Friday, the Comers will witness the inauguration from the reviewing stand on the Capitol.

After the inauguration, they will watch the parade in a first class section. Tickets for the seats were secured by Congressman Brian Donnelly.

Comer, who was frequently honored during his term as American Legion national commander from 1987 to 1988, will have his "colors" honored in the inauguration parade.

His national commander flag and colors will be carried by the Edward P. Clark American Legion Post of Natick along the 2.5 mile parade route.

The Clark Post Color Guard is the only color guard that will march in the parade, Comer said.

Before returning home Sunday, Comer said he will do some Legion business in Arlington, Virginia on Saturday.

Like Comer's term as national commander, this weekend should be time that he and his wife won't soon forget.

Cheney Wants Chemical Treatment Of Sludge

any type at any location," he said.

The MWRA is currently looking at three locations to site its permanent sludge treatment plant as part of the Boston Harbor clean up effort. They are: the Fore River shipyard, an area in Stoughton, and Spectacle Island in Boston Harbor.

The final decision on a permanent site is expected soon.

Cheney, who opposes incineration at all three sites, is advocating the Chemfix process at Spectacle Island as the best means and place for the authority's permanent treatment plant.

The MWRA is currently looking at only one alternative to incineration and that is pelletizing and composting.

Quincy Public Works Superintendent Paul Anderson was scheduled to propose Chemfixing to the MWRA Board of Directors Wednesday. Anderson is Quincy's representative on the board.

Cheney, as acting mayor, said he would attend the board meeting and make himself available to the members for any questions.

At the Jan. 9th City Council meeting, councillors unanimously approved a resolution in support of the Chemfix process. Cheney introduced the resolution.

According to Cheney, Chemfixing has a number of benefits including the elimination of odors and problems with transporting sludge.

First, by choosing Chemfixing at Spectacle Island, the General Dynamics shipyard would most likely be freed up as a MWRA transfer station.

If Spectacle Island is used, Cheney said, "you might not need a transfer station."

"This is my biggest reason for advocating Chemfixing at Spectacle Island.

"Those who advocate Stoughton or General Dynamics for composting or pelletizing would be tying up the General Dynamics facility," he said.

The transfer station would be used to transport sludge by truck or train to Quincy or Stoughton for treatment.

According to Cheney, if the shipyard land were freed up, "there would be a distinct possibility" that it could be available for use by private industry, thus creating local jobs.

Second, communities across the states are "over inundated" with fertilizer. "The market is shrinking rapidly" Cheney said in voicing his opposition with pelletizing and composting of sludge.

As a landfill cover, hundreds of communities could cap their landfills at half the cost with Chemfix, he pointed out.

"The (Chemfix) product is almost indistinguishable with the present clay-like product (used now) but at only half the price," Cheney said, pointing out that the MWRA could perhaps make a profit some day by selling the Chemfix product as a landfill capper.

Several communities have already inquired as to when the product could be available, he noted.

"The end product would be marketed up and down the East Coast," Cheney added.

He also pointed out that as a fertilizer, Chemfix presently is not allowed as a soilbuilder in Massachusettts. "Chemfix has not received approval as of date," he said.

"However, there is a distinct possibility that Chemfix could be transported to a state with approval such as Florida," he added.

Third, since the Chemfix process is odorless, the process could easily be set up and operate at Spectacle Island and have no impact on residents of Quincy and Boston.

Also, the transportation of sludge would be by pipe, not by barge if Spectacle Island were chosen. "It would not interfere with any commercial or recreational boating traffic," Cheney said.

As to whether Spectacle Island could handle the operation, Cheney pointed out that the 97-acre island, located about a mile and a half from Squantum, is expected to double in size with excavation material from the Third Harbor Tunnel and depression of the Central Artery projects.

The Quincy License Board Tuesday continued for one week a request from Mary Melgard, manager of Bradlees, One Bradlees Circle, for a license for one video amusement game and a Skill Crane game for the store.

Melgard told the board that the Bradlees corporate headquarters had placed games in several stores, including hers, for a trial period of 90 days before Christmas and that it has been found to be "profitable."

The board noted that no license was issued for the games to be in place at the store for a trial period.

Mark Warren, representing Woburn Vending, Inc. who leases the machines to the store, told the Board that he was under the impression that the games were there under a corporate license.

Melgard told the Board that she was unaware of the need for a license for the trial period.

The Board noted that video games often attract many young people and can block exits and aisles if not placed properly. Fire Chief Tom Gorman said that he would want to see exactly where the machines are to be placed.

The Board continued the hearing so that someone from the corporate headquarters would be able to speak to the Board.

Cheney To Announce For Councillor At-Large Feb. 25

Ward 1 Councillor Michael Cheney will announce his candidacy for councillor-at-large at a fundraiser Saturday, Feb. 25 at 7:30 p.m. at the Sons of Italy Hall, Quarry St., West Quincy.

Tickets, which are $15 per person, can be obtained by calling the Committee to Elect Michael Cheney at 471-1493.

During his four years as councillor, Cheney has served as chairman of the Environmental Task Force for the City Council, chairman of the Public Safety Committee and is currently chairman of the Ordinance Committee. He has also served on the Finance Committee the past four years.

Cheney noted that one of his proudest accomplishments was serving on the Zoning Task Force established by then Council President Stephen McGrath. The Zoning Task Force recommended 64 separate zoning changes that prevented high rise condos from being built within our neighborhoods.

Among Cheney's accomplishments has been the closing of the Palmer Pub in Adams Shore and the opening of a laundromat at the same location; the establishment of the Snug Harbor Community

School and the rezoning of more than 100 acres of land to open space; as well as the establishment of the Veterans Memorial Park in Houghs Neck.

Cheney also serves on the Nut Island Citizen's Advisory Committee which has advocated for Nut Island to become a passive recreation area and is currently involved in the facility's planning stage of developing Nut Island into what could become the most beautiful coastal park on the East Coast.

According to Cheney, there have been a number of success stories regarding Nut Island.

The construction of a pier will alleviate traffic problems for the residents of Houghs Neck as well as the rest of Quincy. Nut Island will not only become a park but "we will also be able to preserve the history of the Quincy Bay pollution story within the Community Room which will be constructed along with the headworks facility."

"Nut Island Park will become one of the most beautiful coastal parks on the East Coast offering a panoramic view of Quincy Bay complete with a pier facility which will be turned over for recreational purposes after the sewer treatment plant has been dismantled," Cheney said.

He also noted that "many residents of the city of Quincy never thought they would live to see the day that the treatment plant would be dismantled and turned back over to the people.

"None of my accomplishments would have been possible without the cooperation and hard work of many of the residents in our neighborhood," he said.

"I look forward to expanding the area which I represent so that together we may work toward improving the quality of life in all of our neighborhoods," Cheney added.

Fund Established For House Fire Victims

Denis Tardo, representing the Quincy Tenant Organization, in cooperation with the Quincy Savings Bank, has established a fund to aid the victims of last week's Monroe Road boarding house fire.

The 15 residents of the boarding house sustained an estimated $25,000 in damage, losing all of their personal belongings.

"Most of everything in there, I was told, was their own," Tardo said. "These people lost everything."

Jane Reikard of the Rent Grievance Board is helping the residents to get their security deposits back and they are also eligible for up to $750 in a relocation deposit, Tardo explained.

Donations to the Fire Victims Fund may be made through the Quincy Savings Bank Main office at 1200 Hancock St. or through any other branch.

To donate material items, contact Denis Tardo at 471-7254 or 727-6346.

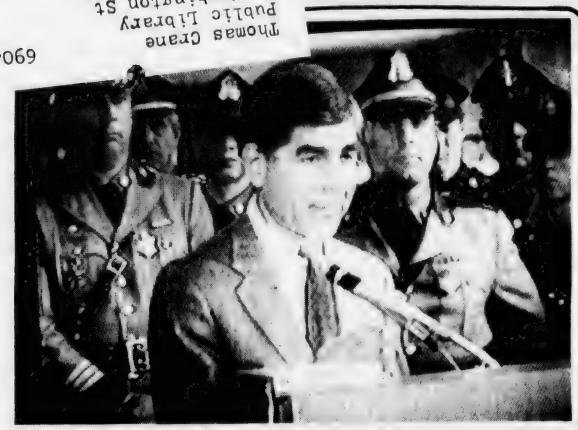
Dukakis Signs Design Contract For New State Police Barracks

By JANE ARENA

Governor Michael S. Dukakis announced Tuesday he has signed the design contract for a new State Police barracks at the former Howard Johnson's site on the Southeast Expressway, West Quincy.



"This new barracks will allow State Police south of Boston to operate more efficiently because it is located adjacent to the highway. It will also make it easier for motorists to get help." Dukakis said at a ceremony at the National Fire Protection Association.

The $3 million "state-of-the-art" barracks will be up for a construction bid in the fall, Dukakis said, and should be completed within one year. It will replace the old facility in Norwell, which is five miles from the highway.

Dukakis credited the Massachusetts State Police for the fact that the state's roads were recently named the safest in the nation by the Chicago-based National Safety Council.

O'Connell In Mayoral Race

With a colorful old fashioned campaign touch, Quincy businessman Peter F. O'Connell Tuesday officially entered this year's mayoral race.

"I want a better Quincy for our children, a better Quincy for our parents, a better Quincy for the disadvantaged and a better Quincy for you and me.

"Together," he said, "we must have the courage and the commitment to make Quincy the greatest City in America."

He said he has a "high regard" for the other mayoral candidates.

"And ... I intend to run my campaign as I have my personal and professional life — by the highest of ethical standards."

The other official candidate is former Mayor Joseph LaRaia. Councillors Stephen McGrath and James Sheets will be announcing shortly.

"In the days ahead I will share with you specifics about my visions for Quincy. I will accentuate what I consider to be positive about our great city and address the things we should correct."

Although O'Connell did not go into specifics in his announcement, he later indicated his campaign will focus on crime and drugs, education, traffic in congested areas and affordable housing alternatives for those in need.

O'Connell also said:

"I don't seek the office because I think it will be an easy job in good times, but rather I choose to serve in a difficult job in changing and complex times."

O'Connell, who is 45 and a lifelong resident of Quincy, now living in Wollaston, made his announcement near the same spot where he sold newspapers as a youngster 30 years ago.

(Photo Quincy Photo)

The crowd attending the City Hall ceremony was a mixture of men, women, young and senior citizens, those in business suits and in working clothes, many of them wearing O'Connell for Mayor campaign buttons.

It was the first stop on a day-long five-stop whirlwind campaign tour.

The other stops:

Granite Place where O'Connell addressed senior citizens.

Walsh's Restaurant, North Quincy where he joined members of the Wollaston and North Quincy Business Associations for lunch.

1000 Southern Artery where he and his family served coffee at a senior citizen dinner.

The National Fire Protection Association headquarters in West Quincy where he hosted a reception for supporters.

With him throughout the day were his wife, Marcia, and their four children: Tom, 22, Robert, 19, Laurie, 15 and Jill, 9. Tom introduced him at the City Hall ceremony.

Following that ceremony, O'Connell walked through City Hall to say hello to employees and visited with Mayor Francis McCauley. A coffee reception followed at First Parish Church.

O'Connell has opened his campaign headquarters at 1620 Hancock St., in Quincy Center.

Court Action Considered

McCauley: Levy 'Betrayed Us'

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Charging that the executive director of the MWRA "flip-flopped" on his final recommendation for a permanent sludge processing facility, Mayor Francis McCauley said Tuesday the city has several options, including legal action, to try to stop it from coming to the Quincy shipyard.

In outlining his "course of action," McCauley said he wants Public Works Commissioner Paul Anderson, who is the city's MWRA representative, to "strongly urge" his colleagues to vote against a recommendation to site the permanent facility in Quincy.

According to McCauley, Executive Director Paul Levy, who recommended the Quincy location over a site in Stoughton and Spectacle Island, "betrayed" him and other city officials by changing his recommendation in a 48-hour period.

The mayor said that Anderson received word from Levy on Wednesday, Jan. 18 that he favored a "split decision "meaning that he would recommend composting at the Stoughton site and pelletizing at the Quincy shipyard. Then, on Friday, Jan. 20, Levy informed Anderson that he would instead recommend the Quincy shipyard for both pelletizing and composting.

The MWRA Board of Directors is scheduled to vote on Wednesday, Feb. 1. If the director's recommendation is endorsed, McCauley said he would turn to legislative and legal means to try to block the facility from coming to Quincy.

"We feel very betrayed. (Levy) told us this would not be the solution, that composting would be done in Stoughton. What really concerns us is the complete turnaround," McCauley said, adding that no new technical information surfaced during that 48-hour period to merit the reversal.

McCauley and Anderson charged that this was an issue of fairness and not one of "NIMBY — Not In My Backyard."

"I see it as an issue of equity, pure and simple. We have suffered enough for many years because of other people's pollution," McCauley said.

"We took in the interim sludge facility. It's time for Stoughton and the other communities to help out," the mayor added.

In December of 1987, the city and MWRA signed an agreement allowing the Authority to process sludge on an interim basis from 1991 to 1996. For hosting the interim facility, the city will receive about $3 million per year of operation.

McCauley, who pointed out he has supported Spectacle Island as the permanent site for sludge processing, said Tuesday he will continue to push for that site.

Furthermore, even if Levy had recommended both Quincy and Stoughton for sludge processing, McCauley said he would have continued to advocate Spectacle Island because of the issue of regional responsibility.

Angered by the NIMBY charge, Anderson lashed out that the fact Quincy is hosting the interim sludge plant proves Quincy is doing its share in the clean up of Boston Harbor.

"The mayor has stuck his neck out to clean up Boston Harbor by taking the interim site," Anderson said.

"This is not a NIMBY issue. No one opposed the staging area and transfer facilities at the shipyard. Where is the inland contribution," Anderson asked, adding that Quincy has been "biased" by the MWRA since it is a coastal community.

On Monday, MWRA Executive Director Paul Levy recommended that the former Chinese Takeout Restaurant Runs Into Heavy Opposition

By RUTH WAINWRIGHT

Some 40 Lakin Square residents with Ward 4 Councillor James Sheets and Ward 3 Councillor Larry Chretian appeared Tuesday before the Quincy License Board to oppose the request of Shi Ming Ho for a common victualer license.

Ho proposed to open Young-Dynasty Restaurant, Inc. for takeout only of Chinese food, in a store at 640 Adams St. formerly occupied by Grahn's Bakery. His establishment would occupy a store between Montilio's Bakery, which will sell pastry and coffee when opened, and a drugstore.

Sheets pointed out that other similar requests had met with the same opposition. The traffic at Lakin Square is very busy and a Chinese food restaurant would increase this traffic, he said. He added that other protests regarding food odors and trash has been received from persons unable to attend.

Chretian said, "There are a lot of constituents in Ward 3 as well as Ward 4 opposed because the establishment would generate more traffic."

The license Board voted to continue for two weeks until Feb. 7 the proposal, advising Ho to consult with counsel. Building owners will be asked to appear also.

Sheets and Chretian will meet with interested residents Wednesday, Feb. 1, at City Hall, to discuss the use of the whole building, and to work with the building inspector.

Through Legislation

City Council Would Reduce MWRA's Power

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Upset by the news that the Quincy shipyard is the preferred site by the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority for a permanent sludge processing facility, city councillors rallied around a resolve Monday night which calls for legislation that would reduce, alter or change the Authority's power so that area residents are "protected."

Introduced by Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro and Ward 4 Councillor James Sheets, the resolve states that City Solicitor Joseph "Jay" MacRitchie "meet with Quincy's legislative delegation and draft the appropriate amendatory legislation to reduce, alter or change as is necessary, the power of the MWRA."

Quincy's delegation consists of Sen. Paul Harold, and three representatives: Robert Cerasoli, Michael Morrissey and Arthur Stephen Tobin.

"The people of Quincy Point have endured more than their share of heartache and hardship over this issue, and the people of Quincy Point have added so much to the history and success of Quincy," a portion of the resolve states.

By changing, altering or reducing the MWRA's structure, councillors said the Authority could become more accountable for their actions. Presently, the MWRA is comprised of several appointed officials.

In creating the MWRA, the state "has created a monster," said Sheets. "No one checks on the MWRA, they have been allowed to act on their own," adding that the resolve's intent is to reduce the power of the MWRA "so that the people of Ward 2 have protection."

On Monday, MWRA Executive Director Paul Levy announced the Quincy shipyard is his recommendation to be the permanent site for a sludge processing plant. The other sites considered were Stoughton and Spectacle Island but Levy opted for Quincy because it was the least expensive option.

He also recommended composting and pelletizing at the shipyard instead of incineration which the EPA favors.

Quincy officials, including the mayor and city council, have opposed incineration from the beginning. Instead, officials have supported different processes, including chemical treatment.

Also, leaders have advocated other sites, such as Spectacle Island and Stoughton as well as other communities since they believe other communities serviced by the MWRA should do their share for the Boston Harbor cleanup.

The shipyard has already been chosen to host the interim sludge processing plant from 1991 to 1996.

The council's criticism ranged from charges of MWRA unfairness to attacks on Levy's comment that Quincy was chosen over Stoughton and Spectacle Island because it was the least expensive option.

Councillor Stephen McGrath, who called the MWRA's decision "environmentally tragic" for the city of Quincy, said "I must say, once again, that the MWRA wasn't playing it safe with us. They really mislead us."

Ward 1 Councillor Michael Cheney said he was insulted with the decision. "This isn't bellyaching. This is an issue of fairness."

Cheney, who advocated Spectacle Island as the permanent site, also called the MWRA's decision process flawed.

Levy Asked To Discuss Decision At Public Hearing Jan. 31

Ward 1 Councillor Michael Cheney, the chairman of the council's Environmental Affairs Committee, has called for a public hearing on Tuesday, Jan. 31 at 7 p.m. at Quincy Vocational Technical School for the purpose of discussing the MWRA's permanent sludge processing proposal.

On Tuesday, Jan. 24, Cheney hand delivered invitations to MWRA Executive Director Paul Levy and John DeVillars, Secretary of Environmental Affairs. He said he would mail invitations to the Authority's Board of Directors.

The public is invited to attend.

"The purpose of this meeting is to allow citizens of the City of Quincy to ask questions regarding the recent decision by the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority to place the residuals management facility for composting and pelletizing the sludge from Boston Harbor and Quincy Bay at the General Dynamics shipyard facility," Cheney said.

"The courtesy of such meetings has been extended in the past to a number of communities including Quincy.

"I hope that you will attend and I look forward to your response," he said.

Enjoyed Quincy Centennial' Issue

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I would like to congratulate you on that excellent Special Commemorative Supplement of January 5th, covering 100 years of Quincy as a city.

As I read it through, it brought back many fond memories of my boyhood days. I recognized the photos, most of the names mentioned, and the events described. It never occurred to me before, but Quincy, as a city, was only 22 years old when I became a "resident" in 1910. I was born in Dorchester in 1908 and was only 2 years old when we moved, so I don't remember much about Quincy then, but I sure remember plenty of the later years. I was a part of the era of Howard Johnson, street cars and horse-drawn fire engines.

Having lived in the Wollaston section of the city, my memories during those early years are very vivid of that area. From 1910 to 1912, I lived on Sewall St., then moved to Randlett St. where I resided until 1924, when we moved to Glendale Rd. I was living there when I graduated from Quincy High in 1926.

Back in those early days, Quincy was a quiet, family place, where serious crimes were extremely rare, and we never locked our doors. Neighbors looked after each other and problems were few. It was a great place for growing up, with farms, open fields, and plenty of places to play. I have seen Quincy change from a rural area to a thriving metropolis, but my fondest memories are, and always will be, of those halcyon days of my youth when life was simple, carefree and peaceful. People didn't have much then compared to present day standards, but their wants were fewer, and they were happy with what they had.

I live in Florida now, but my subscription to The Quincy Sun keeps me up-to-date with the present day activities of my old home town, its progress, people and problems. I was a living witness to the many changes that have taken place over the year, but my heart is still with the "old" Quincy I knew in days gone by. As one grows older, there is more tendency to reminisce, as you can see.

Many times I have been tempted to write about my memories of those days, covering a span of over 70 years. Maybe I will some day, then a bit of the history of the city could be told from a personal viewpoint. I never actually contributed to its history, but I certainly was a part of it. Would you be interested in such an article? I'm sure many of the "old timers" would be.

I enjoy The Sun very much and look forward to it each week. I especially like the "Sunbeams" and "Quincy's Yesterdays" The latter is very nostalgic.

Sincerely yours,
C. Everett Lister

PLANNING AND RETIREMENT

(PART 2)

In planning for ages 20-40, we must consider new careers, new families and young executives. This group is prime because age, time and good health are on their side. Their planning has the advantage of, "the magic of compounding interest." Without having to invest large sums they can accumulate vast amounts by age 65. Monies should generally be invested in vehicles that have potentials of growth (risk), with a portion also going into a moderate growth program (low risk). With the element of time, I can almost guarantee financial security.

Due to their youth and health status, they can purchase insurance protection for their families and guarantee tuitions for education in the event of a premature death. They should also have a disability program to offset loss of income due to illness or accident. Because there is no guarantee that company benefits will be there when needed, everyone should consider owning their own programs. Major medical coverage should also be obtained.

For professional advice on all of your insurance needs please contact the experts at Riley & Rielly Insurance Agency, Inc. Call us at 471-6200 or stop by our office at 1050 Hancock Street in Quincy.

Decision Time For Appointees

It's decision-making and maybe seat-squirming time for at least 16 members of Mayor Francis McCauley's official family.

The mayor will re-appoint the 16 for another one-year term Feb. 6 and two others to three-year terms.

The big question is how many of them will still be in City Hall when the next mayor makes the annual appointments the first Monday in February, 1990.

No incoming mayor has ever kept his predecessor's official family intact. Not for more than a few days, anyway.

The 16 annual appointees have one of two choices to make regarding their futures in City Hall:

Decide to back one of the four mayoral contenders and be ready to politically live or die by that decision.

Or, stay neutral and hope to tell the new mayor: "Mr. Mayor, I stand on my record. I have done a good job in the past and I will do a good job for you."

A few key people might survive -- for awhile at least -- but no one is indispensible as a walk through Mount Wollaston Cemetery will attest.

Tom Koch, executive director of the Quincy Council on Aging, has already bitten the bullet and has gone public that he will head up the mayoral campaign of Councillor James Sheets.

KOCH

If Sheets doesn't make it, Koch could be on the outside looking in when the permanent appointment for executive director is made by the next mayor.

He's willing to roll the political dice. Others may follow his suit and line up with a candidate. And then again, there could be some closet support -- behind the scenes.

A new mayor wants his own team and those with him throughout the campaign have a better chance of making that team than retreads from the previous administration.

Anyway, the annual appointees must be doing some thinking about their futures right now.

There are some major jobs among them:

Public Works Commissioner Paul Anderson, Treasurer-Collector Dana Childs, City Solicitor Joseph (Jay) MacRitchie, Robert Denvir, Purchasing and Parking Agent; Planning Director Richie Meade; Recreation Director Barry Welch, Forestry Supt. John Koegler, David Spillane, legal counsel to the Quincy Police Department; Deputy Public Works Commr. David Colton, Assistant City Solicitors Robert Quinn and Donald Hansen, Traffic Engineer David Kinnecom, Data Processing Director Robert Brennan, Jane Reikard, executive secretary Rent Grievance Board, Heather Sargent, Conservation Enforcement Officer.

Assessor Marion Fantucchio and Public Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue won't have to worry until 1991. They are being reappointed to three-year terms.

Of course, there are others who will be saying goodbye within the year. Among them are Administrative Aide Arthur Foley and mayoral executive secretary Peter Kenney. Unless, of course, they decide to back one of the mayoral contenders and pick the right one. Both, however, appear to be heading back to the private sector.

One thing is certain, though. There are going to be some new faces around City Hall come 1990.

And, maybe, a few leftovers.

COUNCILLOR Stephen McGrath will announce his candidacy for mayor at a fundraiser Thursday, Feb. 2 from 6 to 8 p.m. at the Morrisette Legion Post.

Tickets are $5 each and may be obtained by calling 773-3877 or 472-2974.

A BELATED HONOR is in the planning stage for the late Percy N. Lane, the all-time elective champ in Quincy.

LANE

Percy was elected to 32 one-year consecutive terms from 1938 to 1970 as clerk of City Council committees. He died Oct. 30, 1971.

A committee headed by City Clerk John Gillis is planning a memorial plaque to be placed in City Hall -- probably in the City Council chamber.

Percy, though he was a shoo-in for election every year, insisted he always ran "scared."

A reporter for the old Quincy News and then the Ledger, he was also a notorious punster and/or wit.

Samples:

"Marriage is an institution but who wants to live in an institution."

"You don't have to be crazy to be a newspaperman, but it certainly helps."

MIKE PREBLE, candidate for School Committee, believes in an early start. He not only is the lone official candidate for that office, but he already is sporting campaign buttons. They say he has the equipment to make them himself.

Speaking of Preble, did you know that his father, Robert, once ran against James McIntyre for mayor?

PREBLE

That was back in 1969 when McIntyre was the political power in Quincy.

Preble found that out.

McIntyre won that year by a margin of 18,317 votes to 4,480.

Comer's Impressions

A Quincy Look At Bush's Inaugural

By JOHN P. COMER
American Legion Post
National Commander

President George Herbert Walker Bush, 64, born in Milton, took the oath of office as the nation's 41st President Jan. 20, administered by Supreme Court Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist, on a very windy but beautiful day, as he continued to remind us all to "make kinder the face of the nation and gentler the face of the world,"

On April 30, 1789, George Washington stood before throngs of constituents at Federal hall on Wall St. New York, to take the presidential oath of office. Two hundred years later we celebrate the inauguration of George Bush. This bicentennial anniversary is a landmark tribute to the leadership that has continued to guide our nation to the threshold of a new century.

Vice President James Danforth Quayle, 41, of Huntington, Ind. took the oath of office as the nation's 44th vice president, administered by Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor. He took the oath with the determination to prove to the nation he will do what is right to make us proud eight years from now. Yes, with optimism, he said eight years from now.

Excitement was all around my wife, Eileen, and me as we arrived in the nation's capitol to witness so many outstanding and living memorials to our nation's history and the transfer with ease, of the power of a free nation.

The Capital Hilton would be our home for the next four days, and upon arriving I was pleased to greet Mayor Frank and Sandra McCauley hurrying to make the open elevator while we were ascending to our room.

Throughout the days to follow, we would meet City Councillors (attending the U.S. Conference of Mayors) Steve McGrath, Patricia Toland, Tom Nutley and James and Joanne Sheets; other City Hall figures Art Foley and Richie Meade. We also met Ron and Rick Iacobucci, here for still another conference of the Adam Walsh Foundation; Milton Selectman and Mrs. James Mullen; and former State Rep. Mark Fitzsimmons of Weymouth, Lorraine Hickey of Quincy.

Quotes to be heard in speeches throughout the capitol would be "The People's House" as described by President Bush when speaking of the White House and "President of all the people" and that is so true as we pray for the next four years to work together for a free and healthy nation.

Pat Toland, was extremely pleased to be in such close proximity during the President's address at the Lincoln Memorial, and then later shook hands with him at the Medal of Honor Ball at the Capital Hilton. While wishing her candidate, Governor Michael Dukakis, had been the winner, she said she realized that President Bush is now President of all the people.

Thursday, we were honored to be invited to the first black tie dinner ball at the Washington Sheraton, known every four years as the Indiana Society Ball. This year it was a special occasion with their own Dan Quayle to honor.

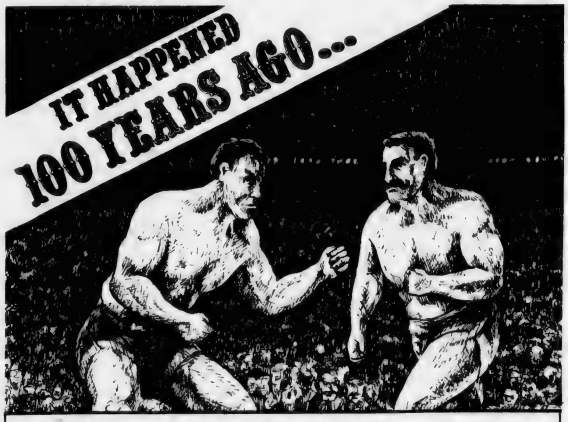
Our invitations resulted from my serving as National Commander of the American Legion and our National Headquarters,' for the past 70 years, being situated in Indianapolis, Ind. We were among 3,000 in attendance.

Quayle's remarks as the fifth vice president from Indiana (the last being Tom Marshall, who coined the phrase "Nothing better than a good 5 cent cigar") were strong words, due to his harrowing campaign. In quoting Mark Twain, he said he would "gratify some and astonish others," and hoped to astonish many who plagued him throughout the past year.

Inauguration Day was one that we will remember for some time to come. We awoke early and headed to the Capitol to locate our seats, which could have been scalped for $500 or more. They were located in an area very close to the inaugural swearing in rotunda (thanks to Congressman Brian Donnelly, who reserved tickets for my party and Mayor McCauley, the City Councillors and their party.)

President Bush stressed freedom throughout his outstanding 20 minute address, declaring he will "use power to help people" and that "a new breeze is blowing" in the nation and the world. He vowed to seek a "new engagement" with Congress and to continue "the new closeness" with the Soviet Union, which made me think of my own words during my years as National Commander that "Freedom is not free."

My hope for the future four years was his advocacy, in a very strong way, in wanting to work with Congress, to reach out to the homeless, poor children, and "those who cannot free themselves of enslavement to whatever addiction--drugs, welfare, demoralization that rules the slums."



It was very moving to watch the crowd waving goodbye to President and Nancy Reagan and there was hardly a dry eye, Eileen and I included, as they bid him farewell. As the helicopter made its way skyward, thousands screamed an enthusiastic thank you for a job well done.

Following the address, it was then on to the Inaugural Parade, where people stood 25 deep in many places, along a parade route that would

Strong Support For Biennial Elections

Jan. 26-Feb. 1
51 Years Ago

Quincy residents were out in force at a State House hearing in support of a bill that would permit biennial instead of yearly elections for mayor, city council and school committee.

The bill was sponsored by the Quincy Taxpayers Association and filed by Rep. Charles W. Hedges (R-Quincy), who estimated that it would save the city some $6,000 a year.

Previously, six wards councillors and two school committeemen were elected in odd years and the mayor, the councillors at large and two school committeemen were chosen in even years.

Hedges and the QTA were split on how to set up the new election, however, with Hedges suggesting an election for three years next fall and the QTA backing a year's extension for current terms.

John L. Blinn, leader of the opposition that was outnumbered 50 to 3 at the hearing, charged it was "a camouflage to give the present gentlemen another year in office without an election campaign."

SCHOOL BUDGET UP

The School Committee approved a 1938 school budget of $1,274,772, an increase of $27,000 over 1937 and $3,100 more than that proposed by School Supt. James N. Muir.

Some items in the budget included $868,514 for teachers' salaries; $47,321.60 for fuel, light, power and telephones; and $12,000 for a complete renovation of the boys' showers and lockers at North.

City Council Would Reduce MWRA's Power Through Legislation

Regarding Levy's comment that the Quincy shipyard was chosen because it was the least expensive option, Cheney said "If you're serious about money, then the plant should go in Winthrop."

Continuing, he said, "The process certainly isn't over. I feel we have been treated unfairly. We have been discriminated against. The city of Quincy should have been eliminated in the first round," he said, referring to the decision process which examined approximately 160 sites over the past two years.

Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien said "it's a fairness issue as well as a cost issue.

"They bought the yard cheap out of the misfortune of the former shipyard workers," adding that the MWRA had a role in the shipyard closing.

"Instead of having a shipyard, we're going to have a sludge facility — that's absurd," he said.

Councillor Timothy Cahill, who lives about a half mile from the shipyard site, said "I think it frightens everybody in Ward 2 because of the way the decision was made.

"I am most disgusted with the process. What we've learned is that communities that cooperate get stepped on," he said, referring to the interim sludge agreement.

Council President Patricia Toland said, "We should have stonewalled instead of cooperating" while Ward 6 Councillor Thomas Nutley added, "when you cooperate, you're doomed."

Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan called the decision "ludicrous" and charged this wasn't a case of Quincy officials and residents stating "NIMBY — Not In My Back Yard."

Pointing out that Quincy has had the Nut Island Treatment plant for a number of years, Phelan said, "Quincy has done its part to work with the state to help solve regional problems.

"We've done our share. We want the other communities to help," he added.

The Council also voted to place a resolution concerning mitigation money into the Council's Oversight Committee.

Introduced by Nutley, it reads:

"Be it resolved, pending court action by the City of Quincy to prevent the placement of such facilities in the City of Quincy, that MWRA and City of Quincy representatives meet to discuss and restructre annual financial payments to Quincy; and, that the MWRA guarantee annual mitigation monies to Quincy in an amount equal to the combined, and total, sewer and water charges levied upon the City of Quincy.

"These annual payments shall be in effect over the entire life of the MWRA "occupation" of City of Quincy territories until all such territories are abandoned by the MWRA and turned back to the City and placed back upon its tax rolls."

A Quincy Look At Bush's Inaugural

delight anyone with the weather blusterous but sunny and exciting with a throng of 300,000.

Massachusetts had favorable contingents marching, as any other state, with the exception of massive contingents from Texas and Indiana.

Pres. Bush, along with his wife, Barbara affectionately called "Bar," enthralled the throng, in many areas of the route, by walking versus riding in his new $600,000 limousine--with bullet proof tires as well as glass-- and also moving into the parade crowd, at the leery eyes of a nervous Secret Service contingent.

My wife Eileen, who personally escorted Barbara Bush during the recent American Legion Convention in Louisville, believes she will go down in history as the most sincere of first ladies and one who has certainly earned the title of a perfect lady.

Vice president Quayle and his wife, Marilyn, followed suit in walking the parade route. Honorary Parade Chairman Bob Hope and Brig. General Chuck Yeagar, USAF (Ret) rode a flag float.

The first Massachusetts group to appear was the E.P. Clark Legion Post, of Natick, the only Veterans' Color Guard in the nation in attendance led by Department Commander Leo Berneir of Swansea.

Following some time later were members of Boston Police Patrolman's Association, Springfield Police Department marching unit, Massachusetts State Seal, U.S.S. Constitution Pikemen of Charlestown, 1797 Marine Detachment of Harvard, and finally, the Ancient & Honorable Artillery Co. of Mass.

It was truly a very outstanding representation from the state where our new President was born.

To add a bit of trivia, Norfolk County now proudly claims the birthplace of four presidents (the largest number of any county in the nation): John Adams and John Quincy Adams of Quincy, John Kennedy of Brookline, and now George Bush of Milton. Had Michael Dukakis prevailed, we would still have maintained the title, as he was born in Brookline.

George Montillio and Hugo Fabrizio were in attendance with the Ancient & Honorable Society, and Montillio was there also to help his crew put the finishing touches to a beautiful cake, on display at the nation's capitol.

Friday evening found the Quincy contingent, Mayor McCauley and other city officials, at the Veterans' Inaugural Ball at the Capital Hilton Hotel. The President and Vice President, and their wives, attended all 13 balls that evening.

The Veterans' Ball has as its special guests all medal of honor recipients in the nation. This year approximately 200 of the 225 living medal of honor winners attended. Locally, former Quincy resident Charles McGillvary and Everett Pope of Braintree were there. Also, Tom Hudner, the Deputy Commissioner of Veterans' Affairs for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, who was honored to lead the dinner guests in the pledge of allegiance.

The President and Mrs. Bush made this ball the first on their agenda for the evening. Thanking the Medal of Honor Winners for their commitment to the nation and the freedom that we all enjoy again gave him the opportunity to use the word "freedom," as he did extensively throughout the weekend.

We danced until 12:45 a.m., when vice president Quayle and Mrs. Quayle arrived. He commented that he was working his way into the second day as vice president, with no sleep in sight, as he left for the Kennedy Center for the final ball of the evening.

Master of ceremonies for the Veterans' Ball was Kevin Dobson, a Hollywood personality, who plays "Mack" on "Knott's Landing," to the enjoyment of the 1,000 veterans and their families in attendance.

Saturday found most people leaving, heading their separate ways back home, certainly with a tremendous feeling of pride and honor in having been present for this outstanding inaugural event.

Eileen and I stayed on to attend the Alexandria American Legion Post, which houses Gadsby's Tavern, the favorite watering hole of George Washington. The Post hosted a dinner for us, which brought home the final theme that was stressed so often throughout the weekend of "George to George"--to 200th anniversary from George Washington to George Bush.

Sunday morning, the final day, we attended church services and listened to the choir of a young high school group from Pennsylvania, which brought a lump in the throat response to the culmination of an outstanding trip, as we headed to the airport and our flight home to the City of Presidents.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

TODAY

Mend a quarrel. Search out a forgotten friend. Dismiss suspicion and replace it with trust. Give a soft answer. Encourage youth. Manifest your loyalty in a word or deed.

Keep a promise. Find the time. Forego a grudge. Forgive an enemy. Listen. Apologize if you were wrong. Try to understand. Flount envy. Examine your demands on others. Think first of someone else. Appreciate; be kind; be gentle. Laugh a little more.

Deserve confidence. Take up arms against malice. Decry complacency. Express your gratitude. Worship your God. Gladden the heart of a child. Take pleasure in the beauty and wonder of the earth. Speak your love. Speak it again. Speak it still again. Speak it still once again ...*

Improvement Program At Quincy Hospital

Quincy City Hospital will present today (Thursday) from 1 to 4 p.m. in the Conference Rooms a resume of its new Quality Improvement Program.

Presentations and poster sessions will detail the work of seven "quality improvement teams" currently working on a wide array of management and patient-care issues at the hospital. Physicians, healthcare administrators, hospital employees, community leaders, and invited guests will have an opportunity to learn first hand what is happening at Quincy City Hospital.

Hospital Corporation of America (HCA), the international healthcare company managing Quincy City Hospital, is one of the first to implement the QIP program developed by W. Edwards Deming, management consultant and quality improvement expert.

"The hospital's participation in the QIP program reflects the growing understanding that attention to quality is essential in a healthcare marketplace that is growing more competitive every day," stated Mark J. Mundy, Hospital Director.

The seven Quincy Hospital quality-improvement teams will make presentations on several ongoing QIP efforts: means of increasing efficiency in serving patient's meals; enhancing employee recognition programs; streamlining monitoring of employee holiday time; decreasing the incidence of lost patient belongings; facilitating the pre-operation preparation of patients; improving efficiency in the use of intravenous (IV) medications; and assuring the availability of inpatient beds for critical need patients.

Ellen Zane, Hospital Associate Director, an HCA-trained QIP "coach," with Jody Fleit, Associate Administrator for Nursing, and Mary Sweeney, Director of Marketing and Planning, have headed implementation of the program at the hospital.

In addition to Quincy City Hospital officials, representatives of other HCA facilities in New England, will attend. Massachusetts hospitals will be represented by Mass. Respiratory Hospital, Braintree; Glover Memorial Hospital, Needham; Jordan Hospital, Plymouth; Milford-Whitinsville Regional Hospital; and Hubbard Regional Hospital, Webster.

Weddings today feature traditions updated for the '80s

Big weddings are back in style, and are more lavish than ever!

After years of being scoffed at by those swinging singles, marriage is making a comeback. Suddenly it's chic to say "I do." And, as matrimony becomes more popular, so do big weddings. More and more couples are choosing to throw lavish weddings with all the traditional trimmings.

But just what are those traditions and where did they come from? Many of the customs we practice today were established during the Victorian era. For instance, it was then that wedding attendants were first called bridesmaids, maids of honor and best men.

Elizabeth Laverack takes a look at these and many more Victorian and Edwardian nuptial practices in her book With This Ring (Elm Tree Books), which gives us ideas on how to add old-fashioned touches to today's ceremonies, and helps us appreciate how far we've come since the turn of the century.

Many contemporary brides want to get married in gowns styled after those worn nearly 100 years ago. The feminine detail of these dresses—lace, tiny buttons, fitted waist and elaborate train—make for some of the most romantic looks available today.

Today's bride can wear such a gown and feel beautiful—and comfortable. Her predecessors were not as lucky, however.

According to Laverack, Edwardian and Victorian brides "had an armoury of clothing" under their wedding dresses which included crinolines, bustles, petticoats and, of course, the tightly laced corset.

Some of the dresses were so 'well-fitted' at the top, that the bride was unable to lift her arms over her shoulders. She needed a lady's maid to help her do her hair and button up the dress.

On her head, the 19th century bride most commonly wore a wreath or a veil. Most of the wreaths were made of artificial orange blossom or jasmine. In fact, orange blossom, or other white flowers, customarily adorned the waist, neck, shoulder and/or the train of wedding gowns up until the First World War, Laverack writes.

Just as they are today, flowers were an important part of 19th century weddings. One popular Victorian custom (which could be adapted today) was the building of a large floral arch to stand in the reception room.

The arch was made of white wicker entwined with sprays of white roses and vines, and the bride and groom stood under it while receiving guests.

As for bouquets, Victorian brides preferred to carry small, round arrangements; posies were quite popular. Edwardian brides often chose to carry large, elaborate bouquets with pieces of greenery that trailed to the floor.

Since most Victorian weddings were held before noon, the reception was held in the form of a large wedding breakfast.

The menu at such an affair for a bride and groom from well-to-do families might include, among many other things, oysters, lobster salad, roast turkey stuffed with truffles, tongue, roast pheasant and eggs in aspic, Laverack writes.

The Victorian bride was also very concerned with her trousseau, and might spend years working on it, as much of it was made by hand, according to Laverack.

"Certainly no girl would care to go to her husband with an insufficient supply of clothes, or to have to ask him for money to buy more at the end of the first year of married life," she writes.

As for the honeymoon, a six-to-eight-week European tour was just about de rigueur for fashionable Victorian couples.

While Edwardian and Victorian couples were forced to follow tradition, contemporary couples can, of course, take it or leave it.

Just about anything goes today; the only thing that dictates the style of the ceremony and the reception is the personality of the couple. And that's the way it should be. After all, whose day is it anyway?

Your wedding flowers: An expression of "you" which helps to set the mood for your special day

The variety of wedding celebrations today has sparked a renewed interest in using flowers to create an individualized image and to enhance the romantic mood of the entire wedding day.

From the bride and her attendants, to the church or temple, to the reception, flowers play an important role in shaping the beauty of wedding day activities.

Florists' Transworld Delivery Association (FTD®), the nation's largest cooperative of member florists, recommends that you consult with a floral professional well in advance of your wedding day. Your florist can help you select flowers that will best express the style, colors and theme of your wedding.

For convenience, FTD President Bob McNamara suggests grouping wedding styles into three main categories: Traditional, which can also be called old-fashioned or classic; contemporary, which is a sophisticated, dramatic look; and natural, which is a casual, country or garden style.

Many different floral combinations can be used to interpret each of these styles. A contemporary bouquet, for example, will use angular, sculptured-looking flowers.

A natural bouquet's flower content, on the other hand, will depend more on a garden or wildflower look.

According to McNamara, himself a florist for over 30 years, there are basically three different wedding bouquet shapes, which also may be adapted to fit many floral combinations to match wedding style.

The first, and probably best known, is the "shower or cascade bouquet" which falls gracefully from the point where it is held.

Round bouquets, or "poseys," feature rosettes of flowers grouped closely together around a central bloom.

And lastly, there are tied bunches of flowers with the stems left intact, called "loose" or "tied" bouquets.

Flowers for people

Besides your bouquet, you'll want to consider those of the wedding party. Traditionally, bridesmaids and other attendants carry the same shape bouquet as the bride, with similar floral content. The attendants' dresses, however, will influence your color scheme.

"It's important to select flowers that complement or contrast, not match, your attendants' colors," says McNamara.

McNamara suggests bringing to your consultation a photograph of your dress and a swatch of your attendants' dress material to check color and texture.

A rose or carnation, accented with a touch of baby's breath, is a customary choice when selecting groom and usher boutonnieres.

The groom's should be slightly different—give him a white rose, for example, if the rest of the men are wearing white carnations. You may also consider selecting a flower from your bouquet as the groom's boutonniere.

Mothers of the bride and groom usually prefer the traditional wrist and shoulder corsages and flowers on the purse.

Flowers for the ceremony

Applying the style and colors you've chosen to the ceremonial flowers is simple if you visit your florist prepared.

First, find out if your ceremony location has any restrictions regarding arrangements. Your florist will make decisions accordingly.

At the ceremony, flowers are appropriate for the altar, canopy, pews or rows of chairs, as well as the entranceways. For a special touch, have a flower girl hand out loose flowers to guests as they go into the ceremony.

Flowers for the reception

Regardless of the type of reception you're planning, flowers make a dramatic impact and help set the mood for the event. Flowers can add elegance to a sit-down dinner or romance to a summer garden party.

The head table and guest tables can be decorated with single flowers, loose greens, floral centerpieces or even with blooming plants. Punch bowls and even the cake also can be decorated with flowers in the color scheme you select.

Let your florist know the number of tables at which your guests will be seated, as well as the size and shape of each table. These are important considerations for the selection of floral decorations.

Planning a wedding is a major undertaking that takes a great deal of time and thought. That's why you're smart to ask an FTD florist to assist you.

Your FTD florist is a wedding professional who can offer you expert advice and suggestions to help you select the flowers that best fit your own personal wedding style.

INVITE HER OVER for a romantic dinner that you've prepared with an extra tablespoon of TLC. For dessert, offer her your hand in marriage instead of that chocolate mousse and, after you've popped the question, pop the cork on Great Western Blanc de Blancs champagne. It's sure to hit the spot.

ADVICE FOR OLDER BRIDES

Anyone who believes that all brides are young and blushing should consider these facts: Today, one fifth of all women getting married for the first time are over 25. Of these, one third are in their thirties, forties, or older.

Bride's Magazine has some advice for this group of brides:

- Many older brides prefer small ceremonies with only family and close friends attending, but it's perfectly okay to choose any size ceremony you like.
- Whatever size your ceremony, your reception may be as large and lavish as you wish. Invite friends, relatives, business associates. If certain reception customs such as throwing the bouquet or tossing rice seem a little "young" to you, leave them out.
- Feel perfectly free to wear a long, lacy white wedding dress if this is what you've always imagined you'd do.

Beauty and the bride: How to choose a hairstyle as radiant as your smile

At a time when more and more brides have full-time careers, it's easy for a woman to overlook a simple detail like her hair. With lunchtime and after-work hours spent rushing from dress fittings to showers to meetings with caterers and florists, it almost takes a superwoman to do it all.

"There are so many details involved in planning a wedding that even the most organized bride might overlook her hair, particularly if she's trying to keep her career on track while planning the event of a lifetime," says Xenon, international creative director for the Helene Curtis Professional Division.

According to Xenon, it's easy to have a wedding hairstyle that is as radiant as your smile and flattering as your dress—if you count on the skills of a professional hairstylist.

"Today's working woman, more often that not, counts on a professional hairstylist to give her a look that is polished and professional," he says. "It only makes sense to leave the worry over your wedding hairstyle to the person who keeps you looking great every other day of the year."

Xenon offers these suggestions to help you look your beautiful best on the big day:

• Consult with your stylist soon after you've set the date. You will want to discuss hairstyle options, including whether or not you want to grow your hair out.

• Your stylist may be at the church, or wherever you plan to dress for the wedding, to style your hair. Ask well in advance, so that he or she can arrange his or her schedule. And, see about having your stylist do your bridesmaids' hair as well. There may be a fee, but the finished results will be well worth it.

• Consider a perm, three to four weeks in advance, to give your hair the body and support it needs to look its best throughout all of the wedding festivities.

Today's new perm formulations leave hair in top condition, so there's no need to worry about frizz or too-tight curl, and nothing makes hair easier to style that a good professional perm.

• Begin using a moisturizing hair care line, such as Attractions Collagenic Moisturizing System, which is available through professional salons. A moisturizing hair care system, like Attractions, will help to strengthen and revitalize the hair. The added shine you'll have will really show in your wedding portraits.

• If your stylist will not be assisting you on the day of the wedding, take time to rehearse your bridal style with your stylist the week before so you'll know exactly how to do it on the day of the wedding.

Practicing your bridal style will give you added confidence. After all, you shouldn't have a care in the world on such a special day, especially not how your hair's going to look. BR893403

Today's newlyweds exchange traditional gifts of gold jewelry

The word for weddings today is "traditional," when referring to the popularity of elegant clothes, age-old ritual and a general spirit of nostalgia.

What's new is the way meaningful ceremony is combined with modern nuances to give today's couple room for imagination.

A perfect example of this trend is the custom of exchanging wedding day gifts of gold between bride and groom.

A symbol of their lifelong commitment, gold jewelry is the sentimental choice among couples who want a remembrance long after the wedding day is over.

A gift of gold the bride can wear on her special day is a treasured memento. Earrings are the most popular choice because they enhance her bridal headdress, whether she wears an elaborate veil or a simple bow in her hair.

Oversized designs like giant brushstrokes or waves sweep upwards and contour the face with strong fluid lines. Similarly, faceted gold dangles in teardrop or disc shapes catch the light and shimmer as she cascades down the aisle.

Depending on her bridal dress, a gold necklace or bracelet may add the right amount of romance. Gold jewelry with the look and feel of embroidery appears dazzling against her lacy gown.

Consider a braided or tapestry etched floral bangle bracelet. Or, draw attention to an off-the-shoulder or sweetheart neckline by presenting her with a row of gold petals dangling from a strand of dainty seed pearls.

The groom also wants to look his best. A gift of gold cufflinks and matching studs will add dash to his formal tux or wedding day suit and make him feel dressed "to the nines."

Look for clean, simple shapes—either shiny ovals or textured ribbed cubes to express his classic style.

ADVANTAGES OF BRIDAL CONSULTANTS

If you had the money, time and expertise, you would have no trouble at all planning your wedding.

But, if you are like most brides today, you are on a budget, are working (which really puts a crimp in your free time), and you're not too sure about all the technical details that go into organizing a wedding.

That's where the professional bridal consultant comes into play, according to Gerard J. Monaghan, President of the Association of Bridal Consultants.

"Working with the bride and bridegroom, the consultant provides the experience, has the time and—perhaps most importantly—helps keep the bride within her budget," Monaghan said.

Consultants can save money through their contacts in the wedding business, Monaghan said, and are not an added expense.

Engagement rings feature dramatic new looks

Tradition...solid values, commitment, family. Linda Friberg, fashion consultant to the Jewelry Industry Council, notes that modern couples are embracing them anew.

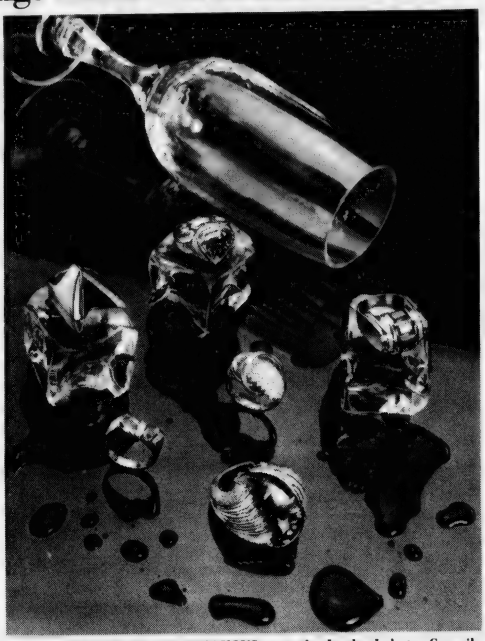
More and more, their lives together begin in the classic tradition of a reverent ceremony followed by a lavish reception.

And, the engagement ring remains the first of a contemporary couple's intent. But, Friberg notes, there's a decidedly new twist to this ages-old symbol.

It all began when Lady Diana and Sarah Ferguson each marked their historic pairings with colored stone engagement rings accented with diamonds. Couples all over the world followed suit.

This blending of old-fashioned ritual and contemporary treasures has not gone unnoticed by jewelry designers.

In fact, the derring-do exhibited in new engagement rings has inspired a mini-revolution in ring design in general. New shapes, cuts, colors and settings create a glorious array of rings for any occasion.



Fancy or fantasy cut gems are giving an ultra-contemporary look to classic diamonds, amethysts and blue topaz, as well as newly popular stones like pink kunzite and tourmaline.

Fantasy cut stones are often tunneled out, dispersing light and creating reflective patterns. Engraving or texturing the stones diffuses light and creates a patina of softened color. For added eye appeal, designers forsake highly polished settings, and experiment with texturing.

One designer has created a horn of plenty, using coils of gold to simulate the horn, from the inside of which diamonds spill forth.

The diamonds are held in place with cleverly placed prongs, artfully concealed to make the diamonds appear loose.

In the more affordable price ranges, designers are using simpler shapes like pentagons and asymmetrical motifs for the much-in-demand "new rings."

NEW RINGS ARE FOR ALL OCCASIONS—says the Jewelry Industry Council. Trend setting styles shown here (clockwise from bottom left): Pentagon cut amethyst and blue topaz by Spectrum Ltd.; triangular shaped onyx with diamond accents by Cornelis Hollander; Michael Bondanza's 18k gold ring design set with blue topaz; a diamond horn of plenty by Jose Hess; channel set amethysts and diamonds by Stephen Lagos; and a fantasy cut rhodolite with pave diamonds by Henry Dunay.

Radiant, glowing complexion reflects inner happiness

Your wedding day, the one you've dreamed of since you were a little girl, is just a few weeks away. You've bought your wedding gown, the most beautiful dress you've ever owned, and a romantic veil that frames your face. Everything should be perfect!

But, comes the actual day of your wedding, and...horrors! Your skin looks drawn and gray, the result of months of stress and strain that have gone into planning the wedding event.

How can you make sure this doesn't happen to you?

The time to start is right now, weeks or even months before the wedding day, advise the skin care experts at the E.E. Dickinson Witch Hazel Company.

To turn your skin into a radiant, glowing reflection of your inner happiness, you must find time every day to pamper your face and body with a good skin care regimen that nourishes and cleanses both inside and out. Here's how:

1. Diet: Be sure to include lots of vegetables, fish and whole grains in your diet. Drink at least six to eight glasses of water a day to cleanse your system and to help clarify your skin.

3. Minimize Stress: Try to relax as much as possible by giving yourself time alone to listen to music, read, exercise or simply unwind.

3. Cleansing (Daily): Cleanse your face at least twice a day by washing with a mild soap and water, then use Dickinson's® Concentrated Witch Hazel Pads to remove remaining traces of makeup and soap residue.

After your bath or shower, a splash of witch hazel liquid helps tone your skin all over. Witch hazel is a mild, non-drying astringent that can be used as often as you like without fear of irritation.

4. Cleansing (Once a Week): Once a week, use an exfoliator such as cleansing grains or a mild, herbal mask to remove deep down dirt. Follow with an application of witch hazel to soothe and smooth the skin.

5. Moisturize: Use a moisturizer every time you cleanse your face. For daytime cleansing, follow up with a light moisturizer. Before going to bed, use a richer variety.

When using a body moisturizer, try smoothing it on after you bathe or shower so that the warmth of your skin and steam from the shower can help the lotion to penetrate.

6. Stay Out of the Sun: If you must sunbathe, remember to apply a lotion that contains a SPF of at least 15. If you plan on spending a lot of time outdoors in sunny areas, wear a hat with a large brim to keep your face in the shade.

By devoting just a few minutes each day to "romancing" your skin, you can be sure you'll present the perfect picture of a happy, glowing bride that looks as beautiful as she feels.

Pocono honeymoon: A happy tradition

Whatever the season...whatever the weather...it's always fair sailing and blue skies for the honeymooners who make their way each year to the Pocono Mountains of Northeastern Pennsylvania.

A honeymoon "mecca" for over 40 years, the Pocono honeymoon resorts offer a unique honeymoon experience. Here couples are surrounded by their peers—other couples of varying ages beginning their lives together.

The companionship of other couples is available for those who want it, and complete seclusion is another alternative, depending upon the tastes of the couples.

The Pocono honeymoon resorts are known especially for their luxurious and elegant rooms—the in-room swimming pools, heart-shaped and champagne glass tubs and whirlpools, the three-tiered suites with round and king-sized and canopied beds. Whatever your decor preference, it can be found here.

And the resorts are known for the pampering care they take of their couples; after all, over 40 years of catering to newlyweds makes them rather expert at what they do.

They are known for their outstanding cuisine, and the variety offered throughout the week and on weekends in entertainment featured nightly—bands for dancing, comedians, belly dancers, newlywed games, singers, duos, trios...you name it.

One of the most important things the Pocono honeymoon resorts are known for is their one-price-pays-all package. Rates vary according to type of accommodation chosen, but everything is included—all of the food, the entertainment, the myriad of sports that are offered on premises.

In the winter months, there is skiing (nearby), as well as sledding, tobogganing, snowmobiling, horseback riding, archery and more.

During the spring, summer and fall, there is an emphasis on water sports: Boating, waterskiing, swimming, parasailing, fishing.

The resorts are equipped with so many indoor facilities that the couple never runs out of diversions—racquetball, indoor tennis, shooting ranges, bowling, indoor mini golf, archery and game rooms.

For serious-minded golfers, there are some of the finest golf courses in the East located minutes away.

It's best to make reservations for the Pocono honeymoon resorts well ahead of time in order to reserve the accommodation of your choice.

"The top of the line goes fast," according to one resort spokesperson. But there is something for every budget and for every taste.

For information on the unique Pocono honeymoon resorts of the Pocono Mountains, write to the Pocono Mountains Vacation Bureau, Box K., 1004 Main Street, Stroudsburg, PA 18360, or call 1-800-POCONOS.

A COUPLE visiting one of the Pocono honeymoon resorts opts for a quiet and romantic picnic supper by the side of a picturesque mountain lake. What could be a better setting in which to begin to get to know one another better?

Picking the perfect wedding gift

It's not easy to choose the perfect wedding gift. Some couples are busy with two careers...others are just always on the go.

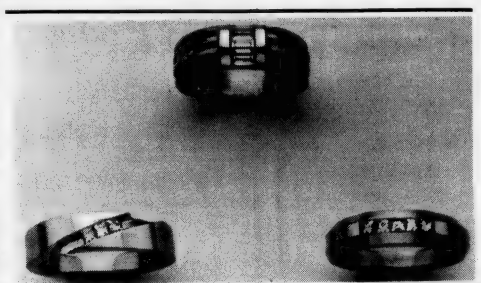
No matter who the special couple is, the wedding gifts that will be most appreciated are those that have been given thought...and chosen with care by the giver.

With a little detective work, any gift-giver can choose the perfect gift in no time. Find out about a special interest that the couple shares...or think about their lifestyles.

Does the couple love to throw a party? How about giving them a complete set of glassware (beer mugs, wine glasses, low ball and high ball glasses)? Throw in other barware such as corkscrews, a drink shaker and strainer and coasters.

If the entire office is pitching in, add of the basic bar liquors and a blender...there's a gift any party-giver will love!

Couples on the go might enjoy a household timesaver like a compact microwave oven. Or, how about a gift certificate to their favorite restaurant? Tickets to a play or concert are a hit with many newlyweds.



Another great gift for cooking couples is an all-purpose appliance such as the Oster "Kitchen Center" appliance.

One spacesaving motor base provides the power for a stand mixer, a powerful doughmaker, a slicer/shredder/salad-maker, an Osterizer blender and a mini food processor. Busy working cooks love its versatility.

If you know a couple that prefers to give intimate dinner parties (sometimes just for two), the key is elegance. Look for pretty linen placemats with matching napkins and rings. Add coordinating candles, two classic candlesticks and a silk flower centerpiece, for a gift that will be used and appreciated often.

When choosing gifts for the special couple, remember to consider the tastes of the couple, not the tastes of the giver. If they have registered at the Gift Registry at a local department store, check their registry checklist to see what they would like.

So, choosing the perfect wedding gift can be easy. If it reflects the thoughtfulness of the gift-giver and the tastes of the couple, it's the right choice.

Today's bridal gowns, contemporary or classic, reflect personal preferences

Lavish formal dinner—or intimate brunch?

Mendelsohn's "Wedding March"—or John Denver's "Perhaps Love?"

Traditional gown—or trendy attire?

When it comes to weddings, it's the personal choices that make the day a memorable one.

According to Michele Piccione, Design Director for Alfred Angelo Bridals, "The options are endless, especially in bridal attire. A bride may choose to wear anything that makes her feel special. Styles today reflect the wide age span of brides and the diversity of their taste."

The bride may be 18 or 38, into ruffles or ultra-sophisticated, attended by one relative or surrounded by an entourage of friends.

She may wear traditional white, flattering ivory—or be just as beautiful in soft pink. The gown may be any length, from calf-grazing to trailing a train that goes to all lengths to impress.

"The wide variety of looks for fall '88 ensures that each bride will be unique," says Piccione.

For understated elegance, she may choose to be married in a gown of luxurious silk satin, simply embellished with pearls on the bodice and sleeves, and grandly bowed in back above the train.

For all-out glamour, she may choose a gown with extravagant dolman sleeves and a slim, slithery skirt with a high-low hemline.

The ingenue bride—or one who wants to look the part—can select a gown with puffed sleeves, tiny waist and swirling skirt with elaborate train.

"But gowns for fall '88 do share a few key fashion elements: Bareness, billowy sleeves, bustles, bows and beading," says Piccione, "all designed to flatter the bride and enhance her own personal charm."

• Shoulder-baring necklines and deep plunging backs are testimony to the new awareness of bareness. Demure brides can choose gowns that cover the decolletage with filmy illusion netting.

• Sleeves are the fashion focus—whether shirred, pleated, ruffled or sparkled with elaborate beaded detail.

• Bows—often oversized and embroidered—show off a shoulder, hug a waist, perch above a train or define a flirtatious butterfly bustle.

• Beads cascade from high collars, are etched onto bodices, twinkle along a hem, even extend the length of the train.

"While the fabric choice is as varied as the styling," says Piccione, "satin is a favorite for fall. Rich and luminous, it comes in all weights, including opulent Italian and French satin, delicate silk satin and fluid satin charmeuse."

Taffeta, all-over lace, and satin and lace combinations are other popular options.

"Whatever style gown the bride chooses," says Piccione, "she can be sure she will make a personal statement and cherish the uniqueness of her special day."

North Defeats Waltham, Loses To Brookline

The North Quincy boys' basketball team, following a thrilling 53-51 victory over Waltham, lost to Brookline 61-51 last Friday.

Ted Stevenson's Raiders played at Brockton Tuesday, will be at Newton North Friday night at 7:30 and will host Cambridge Rindge and Latin Tuesday night at 7:30.

In Friday's game against Brookline North Quincy overcame a 10-point deficit to tie the game at 44-44, but the Raiders shot only 38 percent from the floor to hurt their cause.

Kip Caldwell had 12 points, Billy MacDougall 11 and Mike Ainsley nine for North Quincy.

Earlier in the week MacDougall hit two free throws with seven seconds left in the game to give North its third victory of the season over Waltham.

Caldwell paced the Raiders with 14 points and 11 rebounds and Erik DeBoer had 13 points and 10 rebounds.

Quincy Bows To Newton North

The Quincy boys' basketball team turned in one of its best efforts of the season last week but lost a 49-46 decision to Newton North, dropping its record to 3-8.

John Franceschini's Presidents played Waltham Tuesday, will be home to Brookline Friday night at 7:30 and will be at Brockton next Tuesday night at 7:30.

The game was nip and tuck all the way and Newton North's Joe Engler clinched the victory for Newton with four free throws in the final three minutes.

Jody Beauchamp, who is having an outstanding season in his first and only year with Quincy, had another big night as he scored 13 points and took down 21 rebounds.

Newton North Too Much For Quincy Girls

The young and inexperienced Quincy girls' basketball team continues to find rough going and last week lost to Newton North, 47-23, dropping its record to 2-9.

Doug MacFarlane's First Ladies played at Waltham Tuesday, will be at Brookline Friday night at 7:30 and will be home to Brockton next Tuesday at 5 o'clock.

Newton North, undefeated (11-0), had too much experience and size for the Quincy girls and never trailed.

Sophomore Amy Baker had 10 points for the First Ladies and Maureen Shea played a strong floor game and took down 10 rebounds.

Newton North's Jody Rogers had 19 points and Lisa Jonsson had 18.

North Girls Lose Pair

The North Quincy girls' basketball team lost Suburban League games to Waltham and Brookline last week, dropping its record to 5-6 (2-3 in the league).

Paul Bregoli's Raiderettes will be home to Newton North Friday at 5 o'clock and will play at Cambridge Rindge and Latin Tuesday at 5.

North bowed to Brookline, 49-34, last Friday, falling behind, 14-2, after a quarter. The Raiderettes were plagued by turnovers, losing the ball 10 times in the quarter.

The second quarter was not much better as North trailed, 23-8, with 1:48 left. Bright spots were the play of senior center Karin Reister, who had three points, and Paula Tolson, who hit a three-pointer at the buzzer.

North entered the final quarter trailing, 36-22. With 5:10 to play the Raiderettes cut the lead to 11 and had the ball. However, two missed shots and four turnovers in a row killed any change North had to come back. Tricia Mitton had four points in the quarter and sophomore Kara Sullivan played well.

Tolson paced North with nine points, Deirdre Murphy had six and Reister five.

Earlier in the week North lost to Waltham, 53-49, the Raiderettes turning the ball over early and often to fall behind, 12-7, after a quarter. Murphy had four points and Debbie Panara three.

North continued to suffer with turnovers and had 16 in the first half. Poor foul shooting in the second quarter also hurt North as it missed seven and trailed, 30-18, at halftime.

North narrowed the gap to 38-30 after three quarters as Murphy hit for seven points and North's defense, behind Kellene Duffy and Mitton, stiffened and held Waltham to two field goals.

Tri-Capt. Paula Tolson heated up in the last quarter and scored nine of her 11 points in the quarter. North twice closed the gap to four but ran out of time.

Murphy had 21 points and had a career high 18 rebounds (two short of the school record) and two blocked shots. Tolson had 11 points and Duffy and Panaro six apiece.

"We played in spurts in both games," said Bregoli. "Poor foul shooting and turnovers really hurt us badly."

Quincy Girls Blank R.I.

The Quincy Youth girls' ice hockey team continues its fine play and last week blanked the Rhode Island Panthers Midget team, 6-0.

Lisa Bent scored twice and Margaret McSharry, Sheila Graham, Tricia Hughes and Heidi Maguire once each.

Graham had three assists, Stephanie O'Sullivan two and Bent and Janet Fennelly one each.

Sally Curley turned in an outstanding performance on defense.

UNH Bound

QUINCY quarterback Chris Noble, who passed for 22 touchdowns, tops in Division 1, last fall, has decided to enter the University of New Hampshire in the fall. He had narrowed his choices to UNH, U. of Maine and UMass. Noble was named to the Boston Globe all-scholastic team. He passed for 1845 yards in 1988 and in two seasons passed for 3295 yards and 34 touchdowns and rushed for seven more.

BU To Honor Timberlake

Boston University will honor seven New England basketball players with a "Made in New England" night when the Terriers host Canisius Feb. 4.

Among those to be honored is senior co-captain Jeff Timberlake of Quincy, who is going for the school's all-time assist record this year and also is the team's leading scorer.

North Boys, Girls Fall To Brookline

By TOM SULLIVAN

The North Quincy boys' and girls' track teams, hit hard by illness and injuries, continue to improve but lost to Brookline last week.

Nine North girls were unable to complete due to illness which left several of North's teams at reduced strength.

The boys, who lost five to illnesses, lost, 55-31.

Senior captain Jim Chou paced the Raiders with a victory in the hurdles. Senior Dave Joyce was North's other winner in the shot put.

Taking second places were Hiep Ngo in the 50, Steve Ziolkowski in the hurdles, Andy Wohlrab in the two-mile, Mike Doherty in the 1000, Kevin MacDougall in the 300 and Dan Hobin in the high jump.

Placing third were MacDougall in the 50, Chris Lineman in the shot put, and Brian Mahoney in the high jump.

Many of the junior varsity performers are making great strides including Wayne McCully, Marc Larson, Mark Jolly and Brian Toland.

"I was disappointed, but pleased with our younger competitors," said coach Peter Chrisom. "We have many freshmen and sophomores who will play a major role for us very soon. We thought we could win this meet, but a lot of our kids are sick and Brookline was nearly at full strength."

The decimated North girls were defeated, 48-33.

The highlight of the meet was a fine battle in the two-mile between North's Sherrin Quintiliani and Brookline's Karen Sternfield. Quintiliani maintained almost lock-step contact with Sternfield until the final half-mile when the lead changed hands several times. A powerful last-lap sprint won the race for Quintiliani in 12:20.6, the best performance in the league this year and well below the 12:50 needed to qualify for the state championships.

North's other winners were Robin Guilfoy in the dash and Karen Cashman in the high jump.

Taking seconds were Tristen Mastrogiacomo in the hurdles, freshman Cheryl Kelly in the 300, freshman Cindy Walsh in the 1000, Joanne Moriarty in the mile and Guilfoy in the shot put.

Third places were taken by Heather Larkin in the 300, Cashman in the 600 and Bridget Toland in the mile.

"Our kids are coming along nicely," said coach Jeff Hennessy. "Walsh and Kelly will eventually be our major contributors and are gaining valuable experience. We can't control the opposition. The Suburban League is tough, but we can improve individually and that we are doing. Our losses (0-3) haven't dampened our spirit."

Quincy Wrestlers Pin North Quincy

The Quincy wrestling team improved its record to 9-2 with a 40-24 victory over North Quincy last Saturday. The Presidents are unbeaten (4-0) in the Suburban League.

The Quincy grapplers will face Cambridge Rindge and Latin and Stoughton Saturday at Stoughton and will host Marshfield next Wednesday night at 7 o'clock.

A fine crowd saw North Quincy jump out to a 24-12 lead over Quincy after eight matches but Quincy stormed back, winning the last five bouts, the last four by pin.

Pacing the Presidents were their three unbeaten wrestlers, senior Robert Connolly, at 140 pounds, improving to 9-0-1 with a 4-0 blanking of North's Mike Tufts, senior co-captain Todd Kimmell improving to 11-0 with a 15-4 decision over the Raiders' Bill Lee at 152 pounds and junior Brian Burgess improving to 10-0 with an important pin with just one second left over North's David Goon at 160.

Senior sparkplug Tim Schultz opened the meet with a 16-7 decision over North's impressive freshman, Derek Colontonio at 103.

Quincy forfeited at 112 and the Presidents' 119-pound freshman Greg Souza, overpowered Aaron Silverman 16-0.

North senior co-captain Terry Palmer pinned Brian Gannon in the second period as North went back on top and at 130 North's Peter Wildes outpointed Ennio Eleuteri, 8-5.

North's other senior co-captain, Glen Morales, continued his outstanding season (10-1) with a first period pin of Quincy co-captain Scott O'Brien.

The 145-pound bout came down to the final seconds as North's Tom Maher defeated Bob Stanton, 6-4. Maher's reversal at the buzzer. This marked the turning point of the meet as Kimmell and Burgess followed with their wins.

Even bigger was the win by Quincy's Sean Gannon at 171. Named Quincy's outstanding wrestler of the meet, Gannon recorded a pin just 1:16 into the match.

Quincy junior Jerry Stavrakopoulos followed a pin at 189 and senior Tony Madden wrapped it up with a pin in the heavyweight bout.

Earlier this week Quincy easily defeated Braintree, 53-17, as it won five bouts by forfeit. Matt Fratolillo won by pin at 103, Tim Schultz tied Braintree's Mark Genovich at 112, Rob Grant won by pin at 140, Todd Kimmell won, 8-2, over previously undefeated Chris Aiello and Madden won by pin in the heavyweight bout.

Quincy Finds Power, But Not Enough

Quincy's hockey team had its best offensive week of the season with nine goals in two games last week, but things didn't change for the Presidents, who lost decisions to Cambridge Rindge and Latin and Brookline to drop its record to 1-9.

Bob Sylvia's Presidents were idle last night (Wednesday), will host Waltham Saturday night at 6:40 at the Youth Arena and will be at Newton North Wednesday at 6 o'clock.

The Presidents scored two goals in each of the second and third periods Saturday but Brookline, the top team in the Suburban League, had little trouble winning, 11-4.

In the second period Mike Noonan scored for Quincy with Mark Cafano assisting and Tim Mann scored with assists for Cafano and Noonan.

In the third period Mike Ryan scored with Steve McGinnis assisting and Mann scored his second goal with Noonan getting the assist.

Earlier in the week Quincy lost to Cambridge Rindge and Latin, 8-5, as Cambridge broke open a 5-5 game with three late goals.

Noonan had two goals and two assists for the Presidents, scoring both goals in three minutes to tie the game at 2-2, but Cambridge took a 4-3 lead after a period.

Eric Seamans, Cafano and freshman Scott MacPherson scored the other Quincy goals.

North Edged By Waltham, 4-3

The North Quincy hockey team lost a squeaker to Waltham, 4-3, Saturday night to drop its record to 6-4-1 (3-1 in the Suburban League).

Kevin Jago's Raiders played at Brookline last night (Wednesday), will be home to Brockton Saturday night at 8:15 and will host Cambridge Rindge and Latin next Wednesday at 6:40, both games at the Youth Arena.

The loss to Waltham snapped a three-game winning streak for North and coach Kevin Jago felt a night off earlier in the week hurt the Raiders.

"I didn't think the night off would hurt us, but I think it hurt more than I figured," Jago said. "We were rusty in the first period and played much better in the next two periods."

Joe Fasano scored to give North an early 1-0 lead, but Waltham came back with three unanswered goals.

Paul McGrath scored North's second goal and Bob Kane had the third.

"We had some players out sick, including Jimmy McCarthy, one of our best defensemen," said Jago. "We had 33 shots and had plenty of scoring chances, especially in the third period.

"Our green line of Fasano, Kane and Mark Kelleher has been playing very well and had a hand in two of our goals against Waltham and three goals in our win over Newton North."

—TOM SULLIVAN

Squirt Bs Tie Norwood, 1-1

Quincy's Squirt B hockey team, sponsored by Continental Cablevision, tied Norwood, 1-1, making its record 18-7-1.

Joshua Wingate scored the goal late in the third period to gain the tie. Timmy Shehan had a good night in goal.

Quincy defeated Canton, which had been unbeaten in the Greater Boston League, 4-1, with Sheehan again sparkling in goal. Jimmy Kelley had two goals and Shawn McTomney and Jimmy Gallagher one each. John Manning, Gallagher, Kelley, Eric Oliva, Wingate and Billy Barron had assists.

Quincy also defeated Somerville, 6-1, paced by Kelley's hat trick. Barron had two goals and Tommy Moriarty one. Chris Grant had three assists, Wingate and Gallagher two each and Oliva, Robbie Pirelli and McTomney one each.

Sheehan has been outstanding in goal and the defense of Joe Bracken, Oliva, John Ryan, Mike O'Brien, Bruce Stenberg and Matt Jarnis have played strong defense all season.

The Squirt B's will play Hingham tonight (Thursday) at 6:10 at Hingham's Pilgrim Arena.

Forming Baseball Team

The men's senior baseball league of Boston is forming a team from the Quincy area and the team is looking for players for the upcoming season as well as sponsorship.

The team will play a 22-game schedule starting in May and anyone 30 years old and over is welcome to join.

Those interested are asked to call 479-4985 and leave a message.

In the semifinals Doran & Horrigan edged Burgin Platner, 2-1, on goals by Damien Lotterhand and Danny Stone. Murphy had an assist. Mike Ryan scored for Burgin with assists for Shawn McTomney and Robbie Pirelli.

Cottage Ave. License Opposed

By RUTH WAINWRIGHT

Opposition was made at Tuesday's License Board Hearing by Central Baptist Church and City Councillor Timothy Cahill to the request for a common victualers and all alcoholic license by Ocean Grilles, Inc., dba Atlantic Bar, at 33 Cottage Ave.

Judith E. Rodgerson, manager, was represented by Atty. Daniel Raymondi. He described her as a business woman with restaurant experience who was investing thirty to fifty thousand dollars to "make everything new throughout the building," which would open at 11 a.m., with open kitchen for fast foods.

Opposition to the liquor license was registered by Earl Eales, Deacon of Central Baptist Church, who protested granting of the all-alcoholic license. There are already seven in the area, he said. "Don't we have enough?" he asked.

Raymondi challenged the church's objections as "philosophical," and stated the emphasis would be geared more toward food than liquor.

Cahill, chairman of the Downtown Improvement Area, stated that he was not opposed to the restaurant, but stated there are already three liquor establishments on the street.

"The congestion on the street is awful," he said. They should take care of liquor demands. "We don't need another one there."

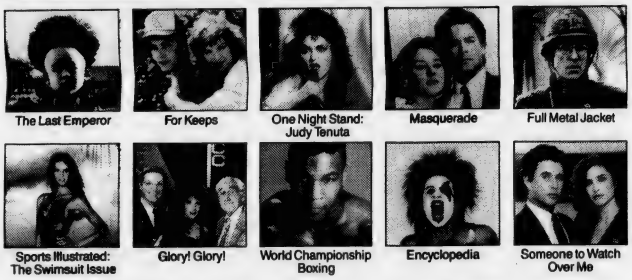
Atty. Ann Berknett, representing several nearby business firms, also felt liquor needs were filled adequately. "Too many of the same type destroys the area."

The License Board continued the hearing for one week.

License Board Briefs

The Quincy License Board took the following action at Tuesday's meeting at City Hall:

• Took under advisement until Jan. 31 a request from Masonic Temple of Quincy, Inc., 1170 Hancock St., represented by Herbert H. Holmes, manager, for a Club alcoholic license. This is to enable the management to keep control over the liquor sold in the hall.



• Granted a request from 536 Bar and Grill at 536 Washington St. for a change of name from T.A.B., Inc. to "Point Pub," with no change in the corporate structure or management. Elizabeth W. Taylor, the owner, wishes to change the sign.

• Denied a request by Michael T. Condon of New England Livery, 2 Victory Rd., for a license to purchase at auction used taxicabs, rental vehicles, etc. The area is now zoned Business C which does not permit this.

• Continued until Feb. 14 a request from Varsity Club Restaurant, Inc. of 33 Independence Ave. regarding parking conditions. Owners Jon A. Perette and Tom Bogetti will meet with Ward 4 Councillor Sheets and neighbors to iron out difficulties arising from the need for more parking spaces than the 40 provided because of this success of the club (formerly the Alpine). Police detail stationed within the Restaurant are also to monitor parking.

The text of O'Connell's announcement:

"Thank you for joining with us here at McIntyre Mall on this cold January morning.

"May I now introduce to you to my wife and friend Marcia, our youngest daughter Jill, our daughter Laurie, and our sons Robert and Thomas.

"This is a special day for us—full of excitement and expectations.

"This is a special place for me, and the reason you are here this morning is that old City Hall had a profound influence on my life. I had the good fortune to work for my brother, Bill, selling newspapers outside City Hall for many years as a young boy. I don't think I was paid that much but the experience was great. I still remember the cold weather and the storms.

"But more important than that, I met the kind employees at City Hall and had the opportunity to talk to and observe distinguished leaders of our community like Mayor Amelio Della Chiese and Mayor Thomas Burgin. I also remember City Historian Bill Edwards who would buy a Quincy Patriot Ledger every day. The paper was five cents then. Bill Edwards would give me a little lecture every day on the rich history of this City. I think if he were here today he would be surprised-but I think he would be pleased.

"I also remember a young Jim McIntyre, who would later become a trusted friend and Mayor of this City. This City Hall is dedicated to him for his leadership of this City. From early colonial times to the present Quincy has had a history of dedicated leaders.

"President Reagan, in his farewell address, said, "If we forget what we did, we forget what we are." Standing here almost in the shadows of the stone temple, let us not forget we are the City of the Adamses and the Hancocks and so many other patriots. We should reflect that pride in our neighborhoods, in our schools, in our businesses, and in the way we maintain our City. We must be full of hope for the future and willing to demand a better quality of life for all of us. We must have pride without prejudice. We are after all a city of immigrants. The Finns and the Swedes, the Irish and the Italians, and more recently the Orientals, have all added to the rich diversity and greatness of this City.

"Together we must have the courage and the commitment to make Quincy the greatest City in America.

"I have always harbored a deep sense of pride and love for this historic City of Presidents, and I have so much to be thankful for: I had loving parents, wonderful sisters and brothers, and a special wife and family. I have truly been blessed.

"It has been said that to whom much is given, much is expected. I can think of no better way of saying 'Thank you' than to share this feeling of pride and love for this community and to offer my time and talent for the betterment of my fellow citizens.

"I want a better Quincy for our children, a better Quincy for our parents, a better Quincy for the disadvantaged, and a better Quincy for you and me.

"I am committed to an administration that excludes no one and cares for its citizens.

"I am honored to announce to you today that I am a candidate for the office of the Mayor of the City of Quincy.

"I don't seek the office because I think it will be an easy job in good times, but rather I choose to serve in a difficult job in changing and complex times.

"In the days ahead I will share with you specifics about my visions for Quincy. I will accentuate what I consider to be positive about our great City and address the things we should correct.

"In closing, I would like you to know that I have a high regard for all the candidates who seek this high office. And that I intend to run my campaign as I have my personal and professional life—by the highest of ethical standards.

"I believe together we can keep faith with our forefathers and have a better Quincy in the 90's.

"Thank you."

O'Connell is the second oldest of five children of the late William and Phelma O'Connell. His father was a milkman in Quincy for White Brothers and later Whiting Milk Company for over 40 years.

O'Connell attended St. John's Elementary School, Sterling Junior High School and graduated from Quincy High School. He earned a B.S. degree in Industrial Engineering at Northeastern University.

In 1968, O'Connell co-founded O'Connell Brothers Construction Company. As President and Chief Executive Officer of the O'Connell Companies.

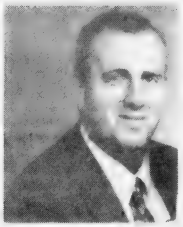
O'Connell's Board memberships include the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, Carney Hospital Foundation, and the New England Aquarium. In addition, he serves as a Trustee at Northeastern University, Stonehill College and Boston College High School.

Peter Kolson Candidate For Ward 1 Council Seat

Peter Kolson of 215 Palmer St., announces his candidacy for the Ward 1 City Council seat.

He said he will walk all the streets of the ward to meet residents and hear what they believe are the greatest concerns.

In his announcement he said:



"I am fully aware of, and have been involved in, all the issues that have faced and are facing the citizens of Ward One. I feel it now my opportunity as a community activist to seek the office where I can be an official voice of our Ward. I believe that I can work well with all the residents and we all can become active participants in our future and the future of our neighborhoods.

"If elected, I will bring everyone's ideas and concerns to the city council chambers as we go forward to achieve the goals of Ward One. This, not only for the voters, but for the children who have given us their trust to insure for them the best quality of life.

"I am married to the former Judith Butler who grew up in Merrymount. Both my wife's family and my family are lifelong residents of Ward 1. I am the father of five children ages ranging from two years to 17. It is because of my committment to my children and to all the children of the people who have chosen Ward 1 to rear their families, that I have entered the campaign today.

"I have seen the issues and concerns of Ward 1 change over the past years, but one theme always remains true, we are spirited community and one that works well together.

"As I reflect on the issues of Ward One today, we must realize that most of the problems facing us are those that are being thrust upon us from outside our community. The possibility of a sledge treatment incinerator at Fore River, the watchdog approach we must take with the MWRA with regards to the future of Nut Island, the emissions and air-water pollution from Proctor & Gamble, the pipeline interceptor bringing more and more sewerage into the Merrymount, Adams Shore, Germantown and Houghs Neck beaches, and the possibility of a toxic waste incinerator being built across from our Ward 1 waterway.

From within our Ward, we must address the ever increasing traffic flowing through the side streets of our quiet neighborhoods and to carefully monitor any type of development being introduced. And last but not least, our marshes must be preserved and our recreation areas kept up.

"My involvement and leadership roles in my community goes back many years to Quincy High School, where in 1966, I was chosen as student government representative. I was co-captain of the QHS football team in my sophomore, junior, and senior years. I was also captain of the QHS track team in my senior year. I was awarded a full scholarship to Arizona Western College.

"Leadership roles continued when I served in the U.S. Army as a platoon leader and mess sargent for two years during the Vietnam era. I am currently chairman of citizens advocating proper planning CAPP and lead the initiative petition drive of the citizens to change the zoning regulations of the city of Quincy pertaining to the height and density of development. I am vice-president of the Quincy Citizens Association, past president of Adams Shore Community Association and past vice chairman of the Germantown Neighborhood Association.

"Some of my commitees include the city of Quincy Recycling Committee, the MWRA-City of Quincy, Braintree Weymouth Task Force on the use of Fore River Shipyard, the city of Quincy Health Department Procter & Gamble Task Force pertaining to emissions and pollution and the MWRA Task Force for the Weymouth-Braintree interceptor. I have organized the first tri-town rally opposing incineration by MWRA and Clean Harbors and assisted in the organization of the "Rally on the Bridge" for the same purpose. These are a few of the issues that I am currently involved in and will continue to be involved in to protect our quality of life as we know it should be.

"I am willing and eager to meet and talk to all the voters of Ward One. I look forward to walking all the streets of Ward One and meeting our spirited and caring community on a one to one basis and hearing what they believe are our greatest concerns.

"I appreciate all the support I have been given in my decision and anticipate a busy and enjoyable campaign."

Dukakis Signs Contract and bringing the crime rate down while it's going up in the nation," he said.

"And we couldn't possibly have done it without the help of some community organizations," he said. "Mothers Against Drunk Driving, Students Against Drunk Driving, and citizens generally who heard our message and have been careful about driving after drinking."

Dukakis also spoke about the 140 new troopers who graduated last November from the State Police Academy, 25 of which will be assigned to D Troop south of Boston.

With the addition of these troopers, the State Police force now totals 1,352, the highest number in state history.

Assignment of the new troopers will allow more experienced troopers to be transferred to drug enforcement and other critical duties, Dukakis said.

"The addition of some 140 troopers is a tremendous aspect to our drug enforcement," he said, "it makes it possible for some experienced troopers to add to drug enforcement so that we can have drug free schools, and drug free communities. It requires tough enforcement and community involvement."

Joining the new troopers are six new German Shepherd police dogs who have been specially trained in drug detection and have recently completed several months of police training.

The dog's training was entirely paid for with money confiscated by the state in drug related arrests, Dukakis said.

The West Quincy State Police barracks will be based on prototype barracks recently built in Springfield and Chesire, MA.

Quincy officials will hold a meeting to discuss other issues of the barracks Thursday, Feb. 2 at 7:30 p.m. in City Hall.

Cerasoli Featured Guest On 'The Flood Report'

Rep. Robert Cerasoli (D-Quincy) will be the featured guest on "The Flood Report" to air Tuesday, Jan. 31 at 7 p.m. on Continental Cablevision's Channel 3 in Quincy, Randolph and Milton.

The show is hosted by Rep. John Flood (D-Canton-Randolph).

Cerasoli has served in the Massachusetts House of Representatives since 1975. In 1985, he was appointed chairman of the House Committee on Post Audit and Oversight.

Flood and Cerasoli will discuss the Committee on Post Audit and Oversight's recent report on state "03 consultant" expenditures. The Post Audit Committee report details the $391 million paid to 28,000 individuals and corporations for consultant services for the 1987 fiscal year.

The alarming growth of the "03" accounts has drawn criticism from many watchdog groups as well as elected officials.

Flood and Cerasoli will review possibilities for trimming "03" expenditures as well as ways to prevent further expansion of "03" accounts.

McCauley: Levy Betrayed Quincy

(Cont'd from Page 1)

General Dynamics shipyard in Quincy be the site for a permanent sludge processing facility as part of the Boston Harbor cleanup project. Levy also announced he will recommend fertilizing and composting at the site instead of incineration.

The Authority's Board of Directors will vote on Levy's recommendatons Feb. 1.

According to Levy, Quincy was selected over a site in Stoughton and Spectacle Island in Boston Harbor because Quincy "is the least expensive choice by far."

"The Stoughton site would be another $15 million and the Spectacle Island site would be another $65 million. I just can't justify spending the extra money for no environmental gain," Levy said.

"The sites were all fine in terms of environmental standards so we went with the low cost option," he added.

The cost to construct and operate the permanent facility is estimated at $193 million over 25 years. According to Levy, the facility will be ready for operation in 1995 and by 1999, 190 million gallons of dry sludge will be treated daily.

Besides the permanent facility, the shipyard is also the site for the interim sludge processing facility which is expected to be underway in 1991.

As for the permanent facility's impact on area residents, Levy said it will be a "much, much smaller operation" compared to the shipyard's heyday when thousands of workers were employed at the site.

"The operation will be barely noticeable. We will work with city and town officials on traffic and mitigation and so on to make it as unobtrusive as possible," he added.

Asked whether the EPA could block the oepration since the agency prefers incineration over composting, Levy said, "I think it would be ironic if the EPA ended up slowing things down because we want to recycle a valuable material.

"My hope is that we can convince them that incineration just doesn't make a lot of sense," he added.

News of the executive director's recommendation angered many state and city officials who aimed their criticism at Levy and the MWRA. The officials pointed out that the final decision is supposed to be based on environmental criteria but instead, Levy is recommending Quincy for economic reasons.

A $10 million study was done by the MWRA to determine which of the three sites was environmentally the best suited for longterm sludge processing. According to Quincy officials, the study shows that the former shipyard is not the best site when environmental factors are considered.

Several officials called the recommendation "prejudiced," the environmental review process a "sham" and agreed the fate for permanent sludge processing at the shipyard was sealed when the MWRA bought the yard from General Dynamics in the summer of 1987.

Paul Anderson, Quincy's Public Works Commissioner and the city's representative on the MWRA Board of Directors, said the authority's purchase of the Quincy shipyard was a "prejudiced action."

"They took a lot more acreage than they ever needed for a staging area and certainly the city has felt all along that in doing so, we would ultimately be the site of the permanent plant.

"Yet, at the same time, we participated in the environmental review process and I think we all know by now that a big sham it is," Anderson said.

"The Authority has spent over $10 million studying different options. Yet at the same time, I think all along we've known the Quincy shipyard was the prime location," he added.

Ward 1 Councillor Michael Cheney, a member of the Residual Facilities Planning Citizens Advisory Committee and a long-time advocate of Spectacle Island as a permanent site, said, "I think the city of Quincy shouldn't stand by. We've been sited for other regional facilities and as far as I'm concerned, we should start fighting back.

"This is ridiculous. We were told when the shipyard was purchased that the site would not be prejudiced. We were told when the mayor signed on in an interim agreement, in good faith, that this shipyard would not be used and now it's being used," he said.

Ron Mariano, a member of the Ward 2 Civic Association, said "I think the deal was cut from the very beginning. I think once they purchased the shipyard, I think it was a foregone conclusion that we were going to end up with the permanent sludge site."

State Rep. Michael Morrissey added, "we've tried to work with the Authority and everytime we've worked with them, we've come out on the short end of the stick."

Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro, who is away on vacation, was unavailable for comment.

As for the MWRA's study, both Anderson and Cheney were critical.

"It's interesting in the $10 million worth of studies that the Authority has done, it's clear that the Quincy shipyard is not the best location for such a facility and in fact, Spectacle Island is a very good site but the only reason Spectacle Island is not being chosen is the opposition of one very powerful state politician," Anderson said, alluding to Senate President William Bulger.

Continuing, Anderson said, "This is unfortunate that, in fact, the entire Authority and the rate payers of 43 communities have spent all this money only to have one person block it."

Asked if he had influenced the final decision, Bulger denied it, stating he never advocated Quincy but rather opposed the Spectacle Island site.

"If you look at the studies and how they're conducted," Anderson continued, "these dollar figures are bandied about and are all plus or minus 10 or 15 percent because they're estimates," adding "they could be 10 percent or 15 percent higher or lower.

"To make the argument based on cost is really not what the Mass. Environmental Protection Act is all about. What it's about is to look at a site and determine what is the safest site to do things environmentally and there's no question that Spectacle Island and Stoughton are much more environmentally safe sites to do this sludge processing at than is the Quincy shipyard," he said.

Agreeing with Anderson, Cheney said, "We found out the $10 million study turned out to be a sham. We've been lead to believe that the equitable distribution of regional responsibility, that means that everybody would share in the decision and everybody would share in the responsibility.

"It's been nother but words," he added.

In expressing his criticism, Anderson pointed out that the Stoughton location was environmentally a "much safer site to do all of the processing facilities.

Anderson agreed with a published newspaper story that stated the Quincy shipyard is viewed as "politically the most expedient site."

"It's a nice to know the state's environmental process, after spending millions of dollars in study and the facts of case before us, that they are totally ignored at the end."

A Special Dog

Kasha Gave Love Now Needs It

By JANE ARENA

There are times when Kasha seems almost human.

The nine year old Cockapoo-cross leads a busier, happier life than many human beings.

Kasha holds down a full time "job" at Flowers by Helen, (367 Billings Rd.) goes home every night to be a loyal pet to a loving family, and still finds time for charitable duties, visiting patients at the Long Island Hospital one day a month. She also delivers baked goods to patients during the holidays--complete with a scaled down Santa Claus hat and beard!

Kasha is an extraordinary dog.

Her story really began when, in 1985, two weeks before Mother's Day, she suddenly appeared on the door step of the flower shop owned by Rita McKeeman and operated by she and her sister, Helen.

The sisters are avid dog lovers, and a canine visit wasn't out of the ordinary for a shop which keeps a five pound box of milk bones on hand for unexpected guests. But Kasha was a new face, and Kasha didn't leave after her treat.

"She was so adorable that I tried to locate her owner," Rita says.

Two hours later an embarrased John Lukasik of Beach St. came to the shop to retrieve his dog. He explained to Rita that Kasha had never run away before, that she was a well-loved pet by-he, his wife Kryss, and their young sons, Derek and Mark. He apologized and took the dog home.

Kasha would have none of it. Before too long, she was back at the flower shop.

For days afterward she would appear at the door, scratching to come in to the shop, every morning. Rita and Helen would walk her home, but Kasha kept coming back. Sometimes she would run back to the shop, arriving before Rita and Helen could get back themselves.

Finally, an arrangement was made with the Lukasiks to let Kasha stay at the shop during the day. That suited her fine.

"Every morning she'd be waiting on the doorstep," Rita says, "Snow, sleet, rain or ice, she'd be there

KASHA TAKES TIME from her busy day to pose for 2 photos. The dog, who is dying of cancer, "works" at Flowers by Helen every day and visits patients at the Long Island Hospital once a month.

Officially Announces Thursday

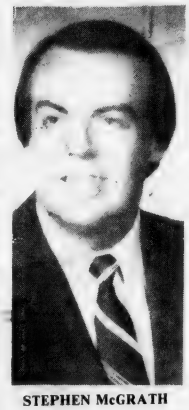
McGrath Says He Would Be An 'Aggressive Mayor'

City Councillor Stephen McGrath says he will conduct an aggressive campaign for mayor and will be an aggressive mayor in office.

On the eve of officially entering this year's mayoral race, McGrath told The Quincy Sun:

"I don't think the city of Quincy is getting a fair hearing from the state, or the state just isn't listening."

He cited the sludge facility now earmarked for the former General Dynamics shipyard and an example of the state being tuned off to Quincy.



And as another, planned restoration of the Old Colony railroad that would send trains through Quincy but not stop here "with no benefit to Quincy."

"We need an aggressive person in the mayor's office," McGrath said. "One who is going to defend the city against impositions and encroachment on the part of the state.

"I am that aggressive person."

McGrath will make his formal candidacy announcement tonight (Thursday) at a $5 per head fundraiser from 6 to 8 p.m. at Morrisette Legion Post.

McGrath goes into the campaign with $35,000 in his warchest not counting what is raised tonight. So far, he has the largest sum to campaign on.

STEPHEN McGRATH

In his formal announcement tonight, McGrath will talk about "his vision for the future of Quincy" and touch upon several specific areas including:

- Downtown development.
- Education.
- The city's relationship with the state and federal governments.
- Improvement of city services.

McGrath says he plans an aggressive door-to-door campaign into every neighborhood in the city.

He said he is running for mayor because:

"I have a certain vision for the future for the city. My background, my education and experience in government will enable me to fulfill my vision and bring the city into the 1990's."

McGrath becomes the third mayoral candidate.

Former Mayor Joseph LaRaia and Quincy businessman Peter O'Connell have already officially announced.

Ward 4 Councillor James Sheets is expected to announce his candidacy next week.

McGrath served five terms as Ward 5 councillor, first elected in 1977 at age 24. He served as Finance Committee chairman in his fourth term and City Council president in his fifth.

In 1987 he was elected councillor-at-large topping the field with an impressive vote.

McGrath is an attorney in the law office of Card & McGrath. The former is Andrew Card, father of former state Rep. Andy Card now Deputy Chief of Staff for President George Bush.

- Six miscellaneous items amounting to $70,000.

City Makes Last Ditch Stand Against Sludge

By JANE ARENA

Quincy officials and residents rallied together in a last ditch stand Tuesday night to try to keep the MWRA permanent sludge treatment facility out of Quincy.

But, it appeared to be a vociferous exercise in futility. For all the strong opposition, the facility apparently is earmarked for the former General Dynamics shipyard regardless.

The MWRA Board of Directors was scheduled to meet Wednesday and expected to give its blessing to the shipyard site over the strenous objection of Quincy Public Works Commr. Paul Anderson who will vote against it.

MWRA Executive Director Paul Levy, who recommended the permanent sludge plant at the shipyard, was not expected to attend Tuesday nights "last opportunity" public hearing at the Quincy Vocational Technical High School gymnasium.

The hearing was called by the Quincy City Council.

The City is considering one more step in its battle: a court action.

Several councillors and others aired their opposition to the shipyard site in comments to The Quincy Sun prior to Tuesday night's meeting.

Ward 1 Councillor Michael Cheney said the meeting was intended as "a show of unity against the MWRA's decision."

Levy, along with MWRA Board members, was invited to attend the meeting, but had issued a letter stating he would not attend.

Cheney said the letter stated that Levy had already been to several public hearings on the matter.

Cheney says he feels Levy would not attend "because he

McCauley Appoints Nicastro, Dunn To Boards

Mayor Francis McCauley has appointed two Quincy residents to fill vacancies on two city unpaid boards.

Dean Nicastro of 138 Quincy Shore Dr., North Quincy, was appointed to a five-year term on the Planning Board while Daniel B. Dunn of 79 Monroe Rd., Quincy, was appointed to a five-year term on the Quincy City Hospital Board of Managers.

Nicastro, an attorney, is presently the General Counsel of the Massachusetts Medical Society. He served in the McCauley Administration as an assistant city solicitor in 1982 and as city solicitor from 1983 until 1985 when he accepted a legal position with the Massachusetts Medical Society.

Nicastro's term is effective Feb. 6 and will continue to the first Monday in February, 1994.

A graduate of Boston College High School, Harvard University and Harvard Law School, he succeeds Attorney Gregory Galvin of Squantum whose term expires Feb. 5.

Dunn, a registered nurse, is a member of the staff of the West Roxbury V.A. Medical Center. He holds degrees in history and nursing from Wichita State University, Wichita, Kansas.

Dunn, who served as a U.S. Army captain from 1969 to 1971, is married to the former Margaret Foley. They have one daughter.

His appointment is effective immediately and will expire the first Monday in January, 1994.

He succeeds Stanley Dennis who served on the Board from 1984 to 1989. Dennis declined reappointment to a second five-year term.

Cottage Ave. Liquor License Request Withdrawn

By JANE ARENA

The Quincy License Board Tuesday withdrew without prejudice a request from Judy Rodgerson of Ocean Grilles, Inc., doing business as Atlantic Bar, 33A Cottage Ave., for a common victualer-all alcoholic license.

Atty. Daniel J. Raymondi, representing Rodgerson, told the board that his client had invested a "substantial amount of time and a substantial amount of money" into the project.

George Riley, representing the Quincy Center Business and Profesional Association, stated the association's opposition to the license. He told the board it would be the fourth alcoholic license on Cottage Ave.

Atty. Jason Ribak, representing the owners of the building at the corner of Cottage Ave. and Chestnut St., David Ribak, Inc., told the board that they were also opposed to the license due to problems involving other licensed establishments in the area. He told the board that patrons of the licensed sites created parking problems in the afternoons as well as other problems which interfere with the operation of his legal business.

Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro, while not going on record himself in opposition, told the board that Councillor Timothy Cahill was in opposition to the license.

The board withdrew the request without prejudice in view of the opposition to the license.

Ward 6 Democrats Caucus

A caucus of all Ward 6 Democrats will be held at the Atlantic Neighborhood Center (Saturday) at 2 p.m.

Delegates will be selected for the Massachusetts State Democratic Convention, to be held in the spring.

O'Connell Says City Deceived, Calls For Retributions

Mayoral candidate Peter O'Connell this week blasted the MWRA for "deceiving" Quincy as the site for the sludge treatment plant and demanded heavy retribution.

O'Connell, in a letter to Paul Levy, executive director of the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority, called the process for selecting the former General Dynamics shipyard "political and financial charade."

O'Connell said the MWRA pre-determined the decision by purchasing the shipyard for almost $50 million which made it financially impossible for any other site to be considered.

He called for the following retribution to Quincy from the MWRA:

- A sewer and water rate freeze.
- Ownership or control of the remainder of the shipyard for productive uses.
- Buffer zones to insulate the neighborhoods.
- Grants and monies in lieu of taxes.
- Job priority for Quincy residents.

The text of O'Connell's letter to Levy:

Dear Mr. Levy:

The citizens of Quincy have been deceived by the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority.

The process for selecting the final site for the sludge treatment plant was a political and financial charade.

The MWRA pre-determined the decision by purchasing the General Dynamics Shipyard and paying almost 50 million dollars for it. The events of two years ago made it financially impossible for any other site to be selected. Quincy was too kind to permit the purchase of the shipyard and agreeing to the temporary sludge treatment plant. Our city is now being repaid for its cooperation and desire to have clean beaches, by being selected as the site for the permanent sludge treatment plant.

The people of Quincy are carrying an unfair burden to clean up the harbor. Retribution is demanded from the MWRA. Quincy deserves and must be given a sewer and water rate freeze, must be given ownership or control of the balance of the shipyard for productive uses and buffer zones to insulate the neighborhoods, must be paid grants and monies in lieu of taxes, and must have job priority for Quincy residents. Our citizens deserve nothing less.

The time has come for some straight talk from the MWRA.

Liquor License Granted To Masonic Temple Assn.

The Quincy License Board Tuesday granted a request from Herbert Holmes of the Masonic Temple Association of Quincy, Inc., for a club-all alcoholic license for 1170 Hancock St., known as the "1170 Club."

The board noted that the club had had an all alcoholic license in the past, but had let it lapse due to lack of interest from the association membership.

Holmes told the board that there is now more interest in the license.

Holmes also told the board that the association is seeking the permanent license as opposed to requesting one day licenses as they have in the past, because there is not always enough time to apply for the one day license before a schedule event.

Case Continued To Feb . 7

4 Plead Innocent In Homeless Beating Case

Four young men, including three from Quincy, pleaded innocent in Quincy District Court Monday that they kicked and beat a homeless man and then threatened two advocates for the homeless in the Hancock parking lot in Quincy Center.

James Magrath, 20, and his brothers, Richard, 19, and Kenneth, 17, all of Kendrick Ave., South Quincy, and a friend, Santiago Rezendes, 17, of Bowdoin St., Dorchester, were charged in two separate attacks in downtown Quincy.

Each pleaded innocent to assault charges in connection with the Jan. 23 beating on a homeless man near Finian's Restaurant and Pub on Hancock St.

The four youths were also charged with threatening two advocates for the homeless with pickets allegedly taken from a fence on Jan. 24. The early morning incident occurred near a public comfort station in the Hancock parking area.

In an unusual and emotional turn, Elizabeth Magrath LeClair, the Magraths' mother, and her daughter, Kathleen Magrath, were arrested outside the courtroom Monday and charged with intimidating an eyewitness.

Tito Miranda told police he was entering the courtroom lobby when one of the women struck him. A few minutes later, a friend of Magraths, identified as Lesalle Johnson of Quincy, was arrested and charged after he allegedly threatened to get even with Miranda.

Johnson was to appear before a judge Tuesday.

Elizabeth LeClair and her daughter were ordered to stay away from Miranda or risk being jailed without bail. According to a clerk, warrants had been lodged against LeClair at the court for failing to appear on assault and battery, threatening and larceny by check charges.

The Magraths and Rezendes were ordered back to Court Feb. 7.

James Magrath was ordered held until his trial after a prosecuting attorney told Judge Albert Kramer that the 20 year-old is a "one-man crime wave" with a history of arrests for violent offenses.

According to police, Magrath was involved in a fight last Chrismas with a neighbor in which the neighbor's forearms were broken with a baseball bat. Cross complaints were filed by Magrath. He is also named in two other assault cases.

Rezendes was ordered held in lieu of $500 cash bail.

Richard and Kenneth Magrath were released on $20,000 personal recognizance bail and ordered to return for a pretrial conference Feb. 7.

McCauley Vs. Golden?

Anything is possible in politics so try this one on for size.

How about Mayor Francis McCauley and his former City Solicitor, William Golden, opposing one another for lieutenant governor?

Could be.

McCauley said an earlier report he might run for governor was "blown out of proportion" but lieutenant governor is a political horse of a different color.

McCAULEY

"Running for lieutenant governor would be more practical" he says.

GOLDEN

Golden, now a state senator and living in Weymouth, has already said he will seek the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor.

If Golden got the Democratic nod and McCauley the Republican they would square off in next year's state election.

Golden, incidentally, while Quincy solicitor, filed the suit -- with McCauley's blessing -- against the state that brought about the court ordered big cleanup of Boston Harbor that is now in the preliminary stages.

And unfortunately, as an offshoot, Quincy is "winning" a sludge facility which has to rank as one of the biggest booby prizes in many years.

The way McCauley's name got into the Republican statewide picture coincided with a visit to Quincy by Republican State Committee Chairman Ray Shamie.

SHAMIE

Shamie was here to appear on WJDA's "Party Line" program shortly after McCauley announced during his mid-term address he would not seek a fifth term.

After the program, Shamie made a courtesy telephone call to McCauley and said, half-jokingly: "I hear you'd like to run for governor."

"Well," said McCauley, "the Republicans could do a lot worse than me as a candidate. I've got a lot of experience."

"Okay," said Shamie, getting more serious, "do you mind if I throw your name around?"

"No, go ahead," said McCauley.

"All right," said Shamie. "Why don't you send me a resume."

"I will," said McCauley.

McCauley frankly concedes he would probably have a better shot at lieutenant governor.

CARD

But whatever he does probably will hinge on Andy Card, the former state representative from Holbrook and long-time George Bush aide.

Card, who is now Deputy Chief of Staff in Bush's White House -- second only to former New Hampshire Gov. John Sununu -- is considering a run for governor in 1990.

If he decides to go for it, he would probably be the GOP's best bet.

But that could leave McCauley out of the picture as a lieutenant governor possibility.

It is highly doubtful the Republicans would come up with a governor-lieutenant ticket with the two candidates from the same area. They would be looking for more geographical balance.

But, maybe Card will be happy in the White House and decide to stay there.

Anything is possible.

Anyway, what about that resume Shamie asked McCauley to send him?

"I'm updating it right now," says McCauley. "And I'll be sending it to him shortly."

PLANNING AND RETIREMENT

(PART 3)

When dealing with ages 41-55, we encounter many different situations. In this group we meet many who have delayed planning until a future date. Although it's never too late, many obstacles come into the picture that make it more difficult.

Speaking with people in this group who agree with the concepts of planning and protection, I often find that they cannot afford the high costs necessary to purchase coverages they want. They usually have to settle for less.

This group has only 10-24 years to accumulate an income to supplement social security benefits. Nonetheless, it's not too late to acquire adequate protection for the later years of life if their incomes can afford higher deposits into their accumulation programs.

Caution should be exercised in investments, however. Losses at this time could take a long time to recoup. The older a person, the less risk they should consider

If you are considering protection get in touch with the insurance professionals at Riley & Rielly Insurance Agency, Inc. Please visit our office at 1050 Hancock Street in Quincy or give us a call at 471-6200.

Kasha A Remarkable Dog

every morning. She just took over the place. That's all there is to it."

Since then Kasha has led a double life. She spends her days with Rita and Helen and her nights with her family. And she's never once missed a day of work. She does, of course have a great benefits package: All the milk bones she wants, her own bed in the back room, and all of her grooming and veterinary bills are paid for by her "employers."

Sadly though, those veterinary bills have piled up. Kasha is dying of cancer.

In June, Rita says, Kasha began to show signs of illness.

"Everytime I'd ask her how she was, she'd roll over and show me her belly...she was demanding that I look at her belly," she says.

The veterinarian operated to remove a lump from her stomach and some time later found a tumor in Kasha's chest which is inoperable. She was given a matter of months to live. Rita and Helen expected that she'd be gone by August.

But she's hanging on.

Rita told the Lukasiks the news. "When I was telling Kryss," she recalls, "Kasha kept looking at her face, staring at her as if to say 'Do you understand?' "

Even after this she didn't miss a day of "work."

Too ill to walk to the flower shop now, Rita and Helen pick her up at home every morning and drive her back home at the end of the day.

"She waits outside the house," Rita says.

"If we're a little late, she's on the driveway, and then on the corner, as if to say 'where have you been?' "

Today, Kasha is taking heart medication three times a day due to complications from the tumor. She is weak and has lost some weight, Rita says, but her spirits are high and she isn't in pain.

Rita comes to the shop seven days a week now to give Kasha her medicine and "just to be with her." She's even there on Sundays, doing paper work when the shop is closed.

And Kasha is there every day too, doing what she does best, being a loving companion and offering her friendship to anyone who needs it.

Helen insists that Kasha has a way of sensing when customers need her. Whenever a customer comes to the shop to discuss floral arrangements for a funeral, Kasha comes out of the back room and sits by them, looking at them, until they leave.

"She doesn't do that with all the customers," Helen says, "she seems to know when people are grieving."

Perhaps it was this trait in Kasha which first attracted June Sutcliffe, Activities Director of the Long Island Hospital. She came to the flower shop and, as soon as she saw the dog, "she just fell in love with her," Rita says.

Kasha was signed up to be one of the dogs in the pet therapy program there.

"One day a month she goes to the hospital and gives all her love." Helen says, "and then she comes back the next day and sleeps all day long."

Long term patients and employees at the hospital look forward to Kasha's visits, Rita says. One patient dilligently collects the ribbons and bows Kasha wears in her hair when she comes.

There are a lot of people who benefit from Kasha, and a lot of people who hate to say goodbye to her. But, Rita says, preparations must be made.

Rita has purchased a pine box for Kasha's burial in the Pineridge Pet Cemetery in Dedham. The Lukasiks are finishing the box, applying brass handles and an antique glaze.

And Kasha, in her own way, seems at ease with her situation, spending her time with the people most important in her life and spreading her love as evenly as possible. Though Rita has offered to let Kasha stay with her overnight when she seems more ill than usual, she says Kasha "wants to go home every night." She has no desire to change her daily routine.

"She just needs a lot of love right now," Rita says as she lifts the dog into her lap. "She needs to be held and you have to let her know that you love her."

As if she truly understands what Rita has said, Kasha wags her tail slightly as she climbs down to go to her bed in the back room.

"Kasha has given so much to others. The love that she's given will help everyone through," Rita says. "This should not be a sad time, this should be a happy time."

Somehow, that's exactly what it is.

We Are Proud Of Quincy High School

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The representatives of the Student Council at Quincy High School believe it is our duty to reassure not only our own students but also the general citizenry and taxpayers of Quincy that the academics, athletics and school spirit of Quincy High School remain strong. QHS is a school of which we are proud.

Earlier this school year, Quincy High received much unfavorable publicity because of the unfortunate behavior of a small minority of our students. The administration and students have moved forcefully to address the issues raised by those incidents. As student leaders, our problem is that the general public may now believe that such incidents are normal at QHS. That is simply not true.

Academically, Quincy High remains strong. A few examples: Nine Quincy High students were recently named Centennial Scholars in conjunction with Quincy's 100th Anniversary as a city, an achievement which required the students to meet, and research and write, during the summer months. Quincy High has one of the 10 state-wide finalists for the Century III Scholarship. Quincy High further boasts of a National Merit Semi-Finalist, and four National Merit Commendations, among our students. Furthermore, the future looks solid. Our 9th grade team in the Continental Math League, Euclidean Division, received the top score in Massachusetts, ranking sixth in New England and ninth in the nation, in the first "meet" of the year. Obviously, we're proud of the academics at Quincy High.

Athletically, we also have much to cheer about. The Presidents football team placed 9 players on the Suburban League All Stars; and our quarterback was named a Globe, Herald, and Patriot Ledger All Scholastic, our first player so honored in 10 years. The Swim Team placed two girls on the Suburban League All Stars. The Boys and Girls Soccer Teams featured a total of three league All Stars. The Girls Volleyball Team won the State Championship, a source of pride for all at QHS, with three girls placed on Globe, Herald and Patriot Ledger All Scholastic Lists; and one of our co-captains was named Massachusetts Player of the Year. We also brag of All Stars during the past year in Softball, Wrestling, Boys Basketball, Girls Tennis, and Spring and Winter Track. The proud athletic tradition continues at Quincy High.

School spirit thrives at QHS. Our cheerleaders placed fourth at the State Cheerleading Championships. We've just organized an International Club, as one aspect of the program to improve Asian-American/Caucasian-American relations. The Club will sponsor, in conjunction with the Student Council, a Valentines Dance with a well-known DJ this February. The national organization of SADD (Students Against Driving Drunk) awarded our school a certificate of Merit. 1988 Goldenrod yearbook placed second in the national Columbia Scholastic Press Association contest. Furthermore, the recent well-attended assembly on Student Voluntarism demonstrated the public spirit of our students.

The above are merely a sampling of the many fine education, extra-curricular, and public service activities happening at Quincy High School every day. Add to our achievements the long-overdue remodeling of the QHS Lobby, the construction of a Pride Room to display our achievements, and the emotional uplift that the newly-painted corridors give the school, and it's obvious why we, the Student Council, are proud of our school. We want the public, taxpayers, elected officials, and your readers to be proud of us, too. We're worth it.

Labor Troubles At Shipyard, EMass. Railway

Feb. 2-8
37 Years Ago

Labor troubles loomed in the near future for the Easterm Massachusetts Street Railway Co. and the Bethlehem Steel Co.'s Fore River Shipyard.

Some 1,600 AFL bus drivers, including 223 in the Quincy division, voted to strike Eastern Mass in support of their request for a 30-cent an hour wage hike. The company offered 13 cents an hour.

Local 5 of the Shipbuilders was authorized by the International to take a strike vote at Fore River to back up demands for a 20-cent an hour increase and a union shop. Average wage at the Yard was $1.80 an hour.

Andrew Pettis, national vice president of the International Union of Marine and Ship Workers of America, CIO, told Local 5 that the company had been stalling since the contract expired Dec. 31.

TAX RATE SEEN $52.40

City Manager William J. Deegan Jr. submitted a $12,220,206.41 budget for 1952 to the City Council and, in an unprecedented action, he also told the Council it would mean a $52.34 tax rate, up $5.54.

Deegan, who noted that the budget did not contain general raises for city employees, recommended that the Council declare a moratorium on all but the most necessary capital improvements.

Finnish Oven Pancakes
Light And Delicious

Since my accident last October, friends, neighbors and relatives have all brought me some food from time to time. Last week, my neighbor Helen called and said she wanted to make a brunch for us. It was to be a favorite recipe of hers called "Finnish Oven Pancakes." So Thursday she brought the pancakes over and we had them with bacon and strawberries. They were truly delicious and so light I just had to share her recipe with all of you.

HELEN'S

2 eggs
2-2½ cups milk
1 tsp salt
1 cup flour
2 Tbsps sugar
¼ cup melted butter (or margerine)

Beat the eggs slightly in a bowl. Add the milk alternately with the flour, sugar and salt. Add the melted butter and beat the batter slightly.

Pour into a slightly greased baking pan (9 x 13) and bake for 40 minutes in a 400 degree oven. Sprinkle with a bit of sugar when finished. Serve with whatever is your favorite from maple syrup, strawberries or blueberries to jams or jellies.

It turned out to be a great brunch as she also made an apple crisp. Needless to say, my calories were all used up by dinner time!

Marie D'Olimpio is the author of "Simply Italian-And Then Some," a collection of her own recipes. Copies of the book are available at That's Italian, Franklin St., South Quincy; Previte's Market, Sumner St., Quincy Point , Samoset Pharmacy, Samoset Ave., Merrymount and Winfield Gift Emporium, Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Benefit Fashion Show Planned for Quincy Hospital

The Capital Campaign Ad Hoc Committee of Quincy City Hospital will sponsor a fashion show, "A Stroll Through the Market Place," on Thursday evening, April 13 at Lombardo's in Randolph.

Proceeds will be used to purchase a piece of equipment for the new hospital building.

This is the first time, in many years, such an event has been held for the benefit of the hospital.

Organist 25 Years

Arden Schofield Honored At Houghs Neck Congregational

By RUTH WAINWRIGHT

Arden T. Schofield, organist and choir director, once an 80-pound prisoner of war, received tributes from the City of Quincy, State House of Representatives and the Veterans Administration at Houghs Neck Congregational.

More than 150 church members and friends attended a "surprise" party honoring Schofield for his 25 years as organist and choir director at the Houghs Neck Church, believed a record.

He first played at the church for six months at age 18, then a student. More than 30 years later in 1963, he came to "help out" temporarily and has remained for 25 years.

Schofield was described by Harold Sparks, church deacon and emcee, as "a truly great musician, a truly humble down-to-earth person dedicated to the things in life that make this world and community a better place to live in."

Mayor Francis McCauley presented Schofield with a certificate of appreciation from Quincy, his home for many years before moving to Braintree. He gave him also a certificate making him an "Honorary Citizen of Quincy," reminding him that this entitled him to pay an excise tax.

State Rep. Suzanne Bump from Braintree presented him with a citation of congratulations from the Mass. House of Representatives.

William Lewis, in charge of ex-POW activities in Boston, where Schofield is a volunteer, listed his war experiences, and gave him a "Certificate of Appreciation" from the Veterans Administration signed by Smith Jenkins, Jr. Director at the Jamaica Plains VA Hospital.

The Rev. Dr. Richard Malmquist, former president of Quincy Kiwanis, where Schofield is pianist and music director, lauded his work with the club.

Others speaking were Bob McLain of Merry-mount, a former teacher and now traffic inspection head for the Quincy Police Department; Mrs. Myrtle Whittredge, widow of the well-known Ted Whittredge of Christ Episcopal Church, Schofield's piano and organ teacher.

Rev. Dr. Peter V. Corea and Rev. M. Alicia Corea, pastors of the Houghs Neck Congregational Church; Martha Chase, Ruth Gordon, Gayle Mackay and Chris Prendergast, all of the Church music committee, also spoke.

Born in Nova Scotia, the Schofield family moved to Quincy when Arden was ten years old and he lived here much of his life. He graduated from Thayer Academy. His studies at Boston University were interrupted by enlistment in the U.S. Army in World War II. He was captured by the Germans and held prisoner for six months, freed by General Patten's Army.

After recovering from his imprisonment, he completed in three years his work for Bachelor's and Master's degrees in music at B.U. (although he taught English). He was married in 1946 to Louise Vock, then a North Quincy High School math teacher. Both taught in schools near Washington.

Four years later, he returned to Quincy where he began an almost 30-year teaching career in Braintree. Their daughter Frances (now Mrs. Paul Berry) was born in 1953. She also studied with Mr. Whittredge from 1960 to his retirement in 1971.

Schofield himself was for 10 years organist and choir director at Christ Church, and also played in many South Shore churches.

An antique auto horn, an original caricature of Schofield by Ben Neill, former Quincy resident; and a miniature Liberace grand piano with plaque, were gifts presented to him.

A musical program of old-time songs was given by the choir, with Schofield at the piano. This was followed by a further program of original Schofield-inspired songs written by choir members, with Peter Johnston, accompanist.

Choir members taking part were Chris Prendergast, Gayle Mackay, Joan Kirby, Harold Little, Suzanne Dennis, Carol Williams, Lois Bassett, Eleanor McDonald, Alpha Story, Carole Johnston and Dorothy Sparks.

SHEETS FOR MAYOR

Projected City Budget $118.5 Million

With a projected budget of $118.5 million for fiscal 1990, Mayor Francis McCauley announced that all budget requests from city department heads have been received and the first round of budget sessions will begin next week.

According to McCauley, budget requests from the department heads have been received by Auditor Robert Foy's office. The figures are currently being compiled by a computer and totals should be known soon, the mayor said.

Once compiled, the figures will be analyzed by the mayor, his administrative secretary, Peter Kinney, and Foy as well as the department heads.

Budget sessions have been scheduled for Thursday and Friday, Feb. 9 and 10. In addition to these, one or two more sessions will also be held.

The mayor said once he knows how much each department has requested, he'll review the entire budget while waiting for the Cherry Sheets. The Cherry Sheets indicate how much state funding the city will receive.

Once the Cherry Sheet total is known, McCauley will prepare to submit his final budget. The deadline to submit the budget is Monday, May 1 but the mayor said he plans to have it completed by April 3.

After it is completed, the budget will be submitted to the City Council. Usually, the budget is referred to the Finance Committee, chaired by Councillor Stephen McGrath, prior to the vote.

Upon receiving it, the Council has 45 days to approve it.

Unlike the mayor who can increase or decrease budget items, the council can only cut the budget, McCauley noted.

The fiscal 1990 budget goes into effect July 1, 1989.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

D. Scott Deware,

"The Second Mile!" Matt. 5:41. This one innocent sentence taken from the Sermon on the Mount is sufficient to change the whole world. The secret is in giving more than is actually required; doing more than is expected. It is appealing to the best in human nature, rather than the worst.

First, going the second mile leaves a deposit of happiness in the heart of the one who travels it. We know we have measured up to and even beyond that one which was demanded of us. It makes us feel good about ourselves and it is so important to like yourself. Second, it brings out the best in others. When we see other people being loving, kind and good, it makes us want to be better. Thus, we set in motion a chain reaction ... good people make us want to be better. Third, going the second mile makes the burdens of life lighter. Doing more than our part makes the home and family a better and happier place to live. Going the second mile, or going beyond the call of duty, makes for a better way of life ...

If you want your life to be rich and full see how many good things you can do rather than how many good things you can get by without doing. In other words, when you have to go one mile, just throw in another for good measure. You will be the WINNER!

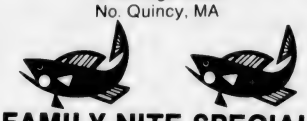
The Quincy License Board Tuesday continued until Feb. 13 a hearing on a request from Jeanne M. MacNeil, of City Auto Rental and Sales, Inc., doing business as City Auto Rental-Sales, for a Motor II license to sell used cars.



MacNeil told the Board that, at the present there are cars available for rental only at the establishment.

The Board noted that there has long been a parking problem at the location and that other nearby business may suffer further parking problems if the license is granted.

MacNeil told the Board that the cars for sale would be stored indoors off the street.

The Board continued the hearing to give Ward Four Councillor James A. Sheets a chance to call a neighborhood meeting on the matter.

Robert Mardo To Be Honored By Stop & Shop

Robert Mardo, buyer-merchandiser for the Stop and Shop Co. Inc., of Quincy, will be honored as "Candy Man of the Year" on Saturday, Feb. 18 at the annual Boston Confectionery Salesmen's Club Valentine Ball.

Durkin Disappointed At Central Repair Delays

School Committeeman Stephen Durkin stated his "personal disappointment with the repeated delays in the repairing of the Central Middle School," in a letter to School Supt. Dr. Robert Ricci.

"The entire process has been beset with unexplained delays and indecision, causing understandable frustration among parents, school staff and Central students, who have been displaced now for three and one-half months," Durkin said.

"The most recent problem, of course, was the apparent inability of the engineering firm to come up with an appropriate design for the truss. This, in turn, has resulted in delaying by several weeks the fabrication and delivery process."

"In November, I forwarded a letter to the Mayor emphasizing that the contract for the work should include critical completion dates, with penalty clauses attached. This apparently was not done.

"While we are all primarily concerned with safety and understand that contractors must exercise a great deal of caution in performing the work, we also have a right to expect that the work be done efficiently and expeditiously. Without penalty clauses, we are at the mercy of the contractors," he said.

Durkin also requested that a representative of the contracting firms and the city building inspector be present at the Feb. 1 School Committee meeting to respond to questions from the committee.

He also proposed that "we plan on having all students back at Central prior to beginning cosmetic work on the building.

"I feel that it is important that students be able to get back to their regular schedules at least for a couple of months before the close of school for the year. If this could be done without the repair work producing unacceptable noise or disruption, I strongly feel we should move in that direction."

Ward 2 Democrats To Caucus

Registered Democrats in Ward 2 will hold a caucus on Saturday, Feb. 4 at 2 p.m. at the Fore River Clubhouse to elect delegates to the 1989 Massachusetts Democratic Convention.

Ward 2 will elect 12 delegates and 2 alternates equally divided between men and women, to send to the Convention.

The apportioned number of delegates has been allocated on the basis of a formula giving equal weight to the Democratic Party registration and the average vote for Democratic candidates in the last general elections for governor and president for which figures were available to the time delegate tabulations were prepared.

Ronald Mariano, chairman of the Ward 2 Democratic Committee, will call the caucus.

The caucus is open to all registered Democrats, persons ineligible to register and media representatives.

The only persons eligible to participate in any portion of the caucus are those who are registered Democrats in the ward as of Dec. 30, 1988. There will be no absentee or proxy voting.

Candidates for delegate and alternate must also be present, voting and give his or her written consent to be nominated and that nominations must be seconded by two persons present at the local caucus.

License Board Briefs

The City License Board Tuesday took the following action at City Hall:

- Granted a request from Louis Gangi of Peter's Grille, Inc., 540 South St., for two additional pool tables. Ward Two Councillor Ted DeCristofaro called the establishment "very, very well run," and said he'd never had a problem with it. The Board granted the license with the stipulation that Gangi show them plans for where the tables will be located.
- Continued for two weeks a request from Thomas J. Whippen, Sr., of Marine & Generator Service, Inc., 121 Fayette St., for a Motor II license to sell used cars to dealers. Atty. Neil M. Kerstein, representing Mr. Whippen, told the Board that only one or two vehicles would be stored at the location for a few days at a time. The Board continued the hearing to clarify a zoning problem brought up by Building Inspector Mulvey.
- Continue for one week a request from J.E. Lauzon Inc., doing business as Quincy Collision & Frame Center, 310 Washington St., for a repair shop license as held by ACE K's. The hearing was continued because the party failed to appear before the Board.
- Denied a request from Dan Shine of Delaney's Pub, 35 Franklin St., for one Electronic Dart Machine with plastic tips. The request was denied because the party failed to appear before the Board.

The Writing Connection: A Unique Program

A unique writing connection began in the Quincy Public Schools in the fall of 1986.

At that time through the efforts of Dr. Janet DiTullio, now Director of Curriculum and instruction, the City of Quincy was awarded a Chapter 188 Essential Skills Grant by the Massachusetts Dept. of Education. The purpose of this grant is to foster and promote writing skills.

The Essential Skills Grant has been implemented in three schools: Snug Harbor Elementary School, Broad Meadows Middle School, and Quincy High School.

Additional teaching professionals augmented the Language Arts staff in these three schools. Funds were also provided to hire "artists in residence" who could bring their special skills in poetry and writing directly to the students.

The increased emphasis on writing will benefit the students in numerous ways. Individuals will be able to function more successfully in high school if they are able to answer essay questions and to write reports with greater proficiency. These same skills will be important in many job related experiences and in conducting personal business.

Included in this supplement to The Quincy Sun are works by student authors from Broad Meadows Middle School.

On a different level writing provides a marvelous way for individuals to examine the world, their experiences, their feelings, and their creative imaginations.

As students write more, they will realize what a powerful force writing is.

One hundred Broad Meadows Middle School grade eight students, under the directions of their teachers Mrs. Eileen Sadof and Ms. Diana Weiner, were involved in a creative writing project made possible by a Chapter 188 Essential Skills Grant in writing.

The grant is in its second year and is being implemented at Snug Harbor Elementary School, Broad Meadows Middle School, and Quincy High School. The grant is supervised by the Director of Curriculum and Instruction for the Quincy Public Schools, Dr. Janet DiTullio.

As part of this project, Broad Meadows grade eight teachers invited Ms. Deborah Gould, a popular author and illustrator of children's books, to work in residence with their eighth grade language arts students for a period of six weeks. During this time, the students wrote and illustrated their own children's books.

Teachers Eileen Sadof and Diana Weiner worked together with their students on this exciting process of writing, illustrating and sharing. The process began with Ms. Gould sharing a variety of published children's books with the students. Next, Ms. Gould shared her own books with the students, so that they could come to appreciate the many steps that an author and illustrator must work through before a book is ready for publication.

Then, students participated in a pre-writing process in which they discussed and brain-stormed possible characters, settings, plots, and resolutions for their children's books. Teachers held writing conferences with each student, and students shared their work in small response groups. The students then proceeded to write first drafts of their stories. These drafts were shared with classmates, teachers,

JULIA THACKER

Julia Thacker: An Exceptional Poet-Writer-Teacher

As part of the Essential Skills Grant, Julia Thacker, author and teacher of creative writing, came to Broad Meadows.

All of the 7th grade students and selected 6th grade students were fortunate to have Ms. Thacker work with them during part of April and May. This exceptional poet-writer-teacher was brought to the school to help and encourage students in their writing. While working with Ms. Thacker, the students wrote both short stories and poems, many of which were published in booklets entitled Stormy Meadows.

Ms. Thacker is currently on the faculty of Tufts University. She also devotes part of her time to teaching elementary and middle school students in the Boston area.

Ms. Thacker has an MA from Brown University in creative writing. She was also a Fellow at the Fine Arts Work Center at Provincetown and at the Bunting Institute at Radcliff/Harvard.

Ms. Thacker is currently working on her first novel, Glory Land. Her poems and short stories have been published in the Boston Globe Magazine, MS. Mademoiselle, The Pushcart Prize Anthology, and New Directions.

The students were encouraged to be "dreamy and imaginative" in their writing. It was a bonus to have this exceptional writer working with the students at Broad Meadows.

The Fury Of Commercials

Oh Commercials, you interrupt interesting parts of everything.
You repeat the same things over and over.
Your volume is too high.
Sometimes you make no sense at all.
You lie.
You give false pictures of life.
When you sell beer,
You make people look healthy
When they're not.
You try to push people into buying things they don't need.
Commercials, you bore me.
I don't need you at all.

—STACY MEDEIROS

Embarrassment

I turn red when I get embarrassed.
I hate it when that happens.
I hate it when somebody plays a prank on me
Especially when it's double embarrassing.
Like when you say something stupid
That you didn't even mean to say.
Or when you trip over something
That's noticeable or out in the open.
I especially hate it when people rag on you
Weeks after it happened.
Oh, I hate getting embarrassed.

—ROBERT PROUDE

MRS. WILLOUGHBY with her Language Arts class.

Silent Sadness In The Air

I remember the last moment
With my best friend.
I said, "Goodbye, Michael."
He didn't say anything back.
I got into the plane, and
We started to move.
I could see his face
Through the airport window.
Tears were coming down his face.
My eyes started to water.
Silence and sadness filled the air.
I still remember my best friend.

—ERIC BUCKLEY

The Fury of Lying

I hate it when people lie.
I feel in my soul
Like crying out
"Don't lie"
I feel as though I will explode
If I don't say it.

BUT

Because of social pressure
I don't say it.
Then I get mad at myself.
I am torn.
I hate liars.

and author Deborah Gould, for possible suggestions for revision. Final Drafts were completed.

Illustrations for each page of the stories were depicted on story boards. Next, students illustrated separate pages for their stories, matching the story text to each illustration. A variety of artistic media and techniques were used to create the illustrations. These included: markers, crayons, colored pencils, pen and ink, and collage.

Each student bound his or her own book after the final draft was typed on a computer. Students designed individual book covers, story title pages, dedications and about the author pages complete with a recent photograph of the author.

Six weeks of writing and illustrating culminated in a Publication Picnic on the tree-lined front lawn of Broad Meadows Middle School.

Eighth grade students invited first graders from the Snug Harbor Elementary School and their teachers:

Ms. Susan Egan
Ms. Ellen Johnston
Ms. Mary O'Connor
Ms. Claire Willis
Mr. Thomas Natola

Other guests included: Broad Meadows Principal Thomas Hall, Assistant Principal Ann Zukauskas, grade eight teachers: Ms. Cynthia Wilson, Ms. Madelyn Jackman, Ms. Kathryn Lapsley, Mr. Allan Goldfarb, and Mr. Daniel Punchard.

Distinguished guests included: Ms. Margaret Nigro, Mr. Francis Aselmo, Dr. Janet DiTullio and Superintendent Dr. Robert Ricci.

As Broad Meadows Middle School students read their children's books first graders listened with enthusiasm and excitement. Following the readings of the books, eighth grade authors served refreshments to their young guests. All of the students and their teachers enjoyed this elementary/middle school writing/reading connection. The teachers and other adults showed great pride in the participation of all their students in this publication event. Many letters of commendation and congratulations were received by the young Broad Meadows authors.

Highlights of some of these letters included the following observations:

Dr. Robert Ricci: "The writings of the upper grade students, replete with illustrations, is reflective of the outstanding writing program offered at Broad Meadows. Obviously, the upper grade students enjoyed reading their stories to the younger students, and the younger students were very receptive."

Dr. Janet DiTullio: "Certainly the students at Broad Meadows have internalized the writing process and have a clear understanding of writing for a specific audience."

Finally, children's author Deborah Gould commented: "I have rarely seen so many colorful, exciting, funny, and generally appealing books in one morning, even in the library! Keep writing and drawing!"

A Million Miles

A million miles away
From where they were born,
Across the blue ocean water
And long sandy beaches
Bunk houses are set next to Each other in a long line.
People who live in these Bunk houses are
People who have nothing but hope.
Hope for a new life,
A life away from the poverty
And the unfairness of the people
Who had once controlled them.
Now with that comforting feeling
They always wanted,
They wait.
They have joy knowing
They are safe
And someday they will have control
Of their own lives.
But to have all this,
They must wait.
Sometimes it takes months, even years,
But just knowing that they can Someday be free,
They will wait forever
If that is necessary.

If I Was Snow

I asked myself over and over
If I was snow.
But it seemed kind of strange
To be asking myself this question.
But then I heard a small voice
From the fields down below.
"Go ask the roses,"
It screamed with the wind.
"But what roses?" I replied.
"The ones in the garden near by."
So I did and know that
It is spring.
I am melting quickly,
I will die.

—DARLENE MAGEE

Holes

I hate holes.
I have holes in my socks and sneakers,
And holes in my walls.
I hate holes.
They're like a broken door bell.
Holes let frigid air come in and freeze your toes
To give you goose bumps
The size of your big toe.
I hate holes.

CARL WINDERL

Carl Winderl: Poet At Large

Carl Winderl, an Associate Professor of English at Eastern Nazarene College, recently completed his third year as Poet-in-Residence at the Broad Meadows Middle School. He has been working with eighth grade students in the language arts classes of Ms. Eileen Sadof and Ms. Diana Weiner. Professor Winderl has shared his original poetry with the Broad Meadows students. The students have also studied the poetry of a variety of famous poets. A highlight of the program has been the writing of poems by students at Broad Meadows. Our students have proven themselves to be very talented and creative poets. Many eighth grade student writings will soon by published in the Middle School Literary Magazine known as S.C.A. M.P. Eighth grade students presented Carl Winderl with an embossed T-shirt, and a personalized copy of their published poetry. They thanked him for his inspiration, and wished him well, as they know that he plans to spend next year teaching at a University in Japan. The students are grateful to Professor Winderl for the time he spent with them this term.

You are always there
Sneaking about your house
Just like an old grey mouse

Hiding behind curtains
Peeking out windows
Watching every move I make

Noting down all my mistakes
Spreading rumors all around town
And you are always there
Watching me when I turn around

Waiting to write something Down.

Ode To The Sun

The sun is a symbol of life.
It shines like a gleaming jewel, looking over me, guiding my every step, like a mother looks over her child.
The sun is warmth and happiness. I reach out and take hold of its rays.
I feel warm and happy.
At night,
like people, it rests, fading away into a dream, to rise again the next day, warm, loving,
giving life.

—SUSAN BYRNE

I Remember

I remember the time I was walking by myself on the beach thinking
Of all the things that my friends
And I had done that summer.

I remember the warm sun beating on the cold water
And then the cool breeze took me from my memory like a puppy being taken from its mother.
I wish the summer would come again.

Ode To A Battered Script

All the dreary days you were dragged to rehearsal the slow paced scenes when we first began the fast paced race when we were late

your pages, tattered, hacked, and worn
like an old favorite sweater your original luster lost in use your marginal notes still held in deep value like a prized autograph

your words and lines worn with use but their meanings and blocking stored like a mental diary in memory

now, down into the cardinal red scrapbook you go just like the other scripts after the show.

Deborah Gould: Children's Writer

Deborah Gould, a popular author and illustrator of children's books, such as; Grandfather's Slide Show, has been working with eighth grade students and their teachers; Mrs. Eileen Sadof and Miss Diana Weiner, in their language arts classes, during the months of May and June. Each student in the eighth grade is writing and illustrating a children's book. They are looking forward to completing their books in early June, at which time they plan to share them with elementary school audiences at a planned "Publication Picnic" to be held at Broad Meadows Middle School. The students and their teachers have enjoyed their "writing workshop" with Deborah Gould, and thank her for her patience, encouragement, and expertise.

A Person Whom I Admire

Mr. Creedon

A person whom I admire is Mr. Creedon. Mr. Creedon is my former principal. He is about 6 feet tall and has short, gray hair. Mr. Creedon usually wears suits to work, but there are times when he wears pants and a T-shirt. He occassionally smokes a pipe, and sometimes wears glasses.

Mr. Creedon is very kind and caring. I think he is kind because he helps people out, and caring because when my friend's uncle died, he comforted her while her father was driving up to school to pick her up. Mr. Creedon is very smart, and he used to help us with our homework while we were in drama. He is also very thoughtful. I think he is thoughtful because when he was in our school, we collected food for the needy. Mr. Creedon is very funny too. He used to tell silly jokes, but then he improved. I can't think of a nicer person than Mr. Creedon.

Mr. Creedon is very outgoing and friendly. He will mingle at a get together with parents of the kids in our school. Mr. Creedon is also very demanding. If something has to be done, it gets done!

I especially admire Mr. Creedon because he is active in the school. I think it is good for kids to get a good education or else they would not get a good job when they get older. Mr. Creedon is not mean or bossy like other principals. He sets a good example for us to follow, and tries to show us that we should always reach for our highest goals — try to achieve our best. That's why I admire Mr. Creedon.

—BREEDA O'CONNOR

Ronald Reagan

A person whom I admire is Ronald Reagan. He is a man who has changed careers to help his country. Mr. Reagan was an actor, governor, and now the President of the United States. Ronald Reagan is about 74 years old, has dark brown hair, and dresses nicely.

I like Mr. Reagan because he cares about what is going on around the world. Ronald Reagan signs bills and treaties to help the citizens of America. Once, Mr. Reagan donated his own money for a child who needed an operation. Ronald Reagan also opened the doors for nuclear power usage. Reagan wants to have lasers in space that will be able to shoot down nuclear missles fired at the United States. Regan has allocated funds for research on this, but nothing has been sent up yet. Ronald Reagan also made treaties with Russia that would eliminate all mid-range missles in Europe.

President Reagan passed some bills that would fix some major highways, and put a tariff on goods from Japan in order to stabilize the American dollar. Ronald Reagan has passed bills to have money for research for the cure of the disease, AIDS.

Mr. Reagan has helped our country in many ways. He has built a better defense and offense system. Reagan's concern for the people of the United States, make him a good person, and an even better president. President Reagan has made a better place for all of us to live. I personally like Mr. Reagan because he makes good decisions, and does it with a great deal of thought.

ALEX MAK

Walt Disney

A person whom I admire is Walt Disney because he was intelligent, imaginative, nice, smart, patient, social, creative, and he had a good sense of humor. He looked ordinary. He had a mustache and dark hair.

The main reason why I admire Walt Disney is because he had a dream, and went for it. That dream was for him to build a huge amusement park that has everything in it. Around the 1960's, his dream came true. He had completed building Disneyland.

Walt Disney had to be imaginative, creative, and very humorous because he created

Mickey Mouse, Donald Duck, and many more characters. He also created many, many movies. Some of them are Snow White, Sleeping Beauty, and 101 Dalmations.

Walt Disney influenced me with all of the entertainment that he created. I will always want to see his movies, no matter how old I get, and I plan to go to Disney World.

Walt Disney died a very rich man. He left us the results of his powerful imagination and creativity in his great library of short cartoons, movies, and immense amusement parks. He also showed me how someone can start with nothing, but strong ideas, and end up achieving most of his goals. That is why I admire Walt Disney.

I got my guitar

By the time I composed it was my friend

Dear Mr. Teardrop

Dear Mr. Teardrop,

Hello, how are you? I've been wondering, are you ever happy or always sad and gloomy? Do you ever get tired of being one little drop in the great big world?

Sometimes you make me feel better after you're out of me, when I hear the drip drop of you on the ground and I see your clearness running down my face. Sometimes I wish you would go away forever and never come back, but sometimes I wish you would come and help me solve my problems. Mr. Teardrop, you're like a falling star falling from his home. I'm glad I got this chance to write to you, Mr. Teardrop. I'll see you someday soon.

My Papa

My papa used to have a huge belly that would shake when he laughed. He would always laugh and make you laugh also. If you were sad, he would always tell a joke to cheer you up. My papa has gray hair and a light blue color eyes.

But now my papa has a disease called cancer. He has cancer in his throat which is dangerous because it's so close to his heart. But my papa has lived through .his treatments and surgery.

Now my fun loving papa is real skinny and has almost lost his voice and never really fools around anymore. My papa is real special even though sometimes he's so quiet you forget he's there.

Dreams For Sale

On April 6, 1978, there were two guys on the corner in front of a store selling dreams.

Their names were Harry and Sissy. They had on black hats and long, brown coats. That day, I went over to the corner and asked how much one dream would cost.

They said the charge was $5 a dream. It was expensive, but they were making a lot of money. I asked what kinds of dreams they had. Harry said, "We have bad dreams, sad dreams, and gr-gr-gr-great dreams." I told Harry and Sissy I would like a great dream. "No," Sissy said, "it is gr-gr-gr-great dream."

That night, I couldn't wait until I went to bed because of that dream I bought. I was so anxious. I really wanted to see how it was to buy a dream. When I fell asleep, I had the best dream ever. The next day, I went back to the corner, and they were gone.

Hearing Dogs, Canine Winner On Channel 3 Feb. 15

For the first time, on Quincy Cable Television Channel 3, "All About Dogs with Marie Kenneally," will fill viewers in about how hearing dogs are selected for their jobs, paired up for future clients and how such dogs are trained.

The show, which aired Wednesday, Feb. 1 and will be repeated Feb. 15 at 6:30 p.m., features Ellen Terryberry, program director of the Red Acre Farm hearing dog center in Stow, Mass. She will inform viewers that the cost of training such dogs, which amounts to $3,500, may not cost its new owner anything since numerous fraternal associations and clubs are united in sponsoring such training.

A donation that the new owner can offer, however, will be acceptable to such non-profit organizations, whether it be from the new owner or from other donors.

The second part of the show focuses on Elizabeth Smith and her dog, "Chico," and anecdotal situations which she has experienced as a result of his excellent training.

"Chico," who is mostly Chihuahua, was the 1988 Gaines Dog Foods Award winner after his frantic gyrations persuaded his owner to vacate a city bus, seemingly without reason. But, once inside, she saw that the bus's entire roof was afire.

"All About Dogs," now in its ninth month, is hosted by Marie Kenneally, the well-known dog obedience trainer. She not only trains dogs in families' own homes, but helps family members to overcome canine behavioral problems and family and or neighbors' dog-people "fear" problems.

Marie has been serving the South Shore area for many years.

For North 1 And 2 Adds Up To Trouble

North Quincy's hockey team faced the number one and two teams in the Suburban League last week and lost its second and third straight games in a row to drop its record to 6-6-1.

Kevin Jago's Raiders, who must win five of its last six games to qualify for the state tournament for the fifth time in the last six years, faced Cambridge Rindge and Latin last night (Wednesday), will meet Quincy Saturday night at 7:50 at the Youth Arena and will play Newton North next Wednesday night at 6 at the Watertown Rink.

The Raiders lost to Brockton (10-2-1) last Saturday, 6-2, with the Boxers putting the game away with three goals in the last period.

"We played a good game but received a tough break when our goalie, Jeff McClory, was injured in the first period and missed the rest of the game," said Jago. "However, Steve Sugerman turned in a fine performance in relief of McClory and kept us in there until late in the game."

Paul McGrath gave North a 1-0 lead in the opening period but Brockton came back to take a 3-1 lead.

"We had numerous chances to score and cut the lead to a goal, but we just couldn't capitalize," said Jago. "Brockton's goalie (Ken Schwabe) did a good job for them."

Billy Lydon, recently brought up from the junior varsity, scored North's second goal.

Earlier in the week first place Brookline, unbeaten in the league, rolled over North, 8-0.

It was the first time the Raiders had been shut out in the league in three years.

"We just didn't play well in this game," Jago said.

Quincy Loses Scoring Punch

After displaying its best offensive punch of the year two weeks ago with nine goals in two games, the Quincy hockey team had all kinds of trouble trying to score last week as it lost to Newton North and Waltham to drop its record to 1-11.

Bob Sylvia's Presidents played at Newton North last night (Wednesday), will face North Quincy Saturday night at 7:50 at the Youth Arena and be home to Brockton next Wednesday at 6:40, also at the Youth Arena.

Quincy turned in a creditable performance last Saturday against a strong Waltham team, but lost, 5-0.

Earlier in the week the Presidents dropped a 2-1 squeaker to Newton North in a game that had been postponed earlier when the ice machine at the Youth Arena broke down.

Mike Noonan scored Quincy's goal with Tim Mann and Mark Cafano assisting.

Quincy goalie Craig Galligan turned in an excellent performance.

Pee Wee Bs Blank Milton

Quincy's Pee Wee B hockey team, sponsored by A&T Movers, blanked Milton, 4-0, as goalie Michael Manganaro recorded another shutout.

Eric Zimmerman, Lee Hughes, Chris Geary and Brian Connolly scored the goals and Connolly, Andrew Vermette, Paul King, Zimmerman and David Pacino had assists. Connolly's goal was a thing of beauty as he stick handled past two defensemen and scored with a slapshot.

Quincy lost to Westwood, 4-2, with Patrick Connolly scoring both goals and Zimmerman assisting on each. Quincy had many scoring chances but failed to capitalize.

North Girls Bow Twice

The North Quincy girls' basketball team lost Suburban League decisions to Brockton and undefeated Newton North last week, dropping its record to 5-8.

Paul Bregoli's Raiderettes are idle Friday and will host Quincy next Tuesday night at 7:30.

Newton North jumped out to an early lead last Friday on its way to a 50-33 victory, but North, behind Kerry and Paula Tolson, cut the lead to 7-5. However, Newton's Gretchen Young's seven points allowed the Tigers to take a 13-8 lead after a quarter.

Lil Johnson, the league's top scorer, had 10 of 11 of Newton's points while the Raiderettes managed only six points and trailed, 24-14, at the half.

Ten turnovers in the third quarter spoiled any chance of North getting back into the game. Deirdre Murphy had seven of the 10 North points while Debbie Panaro had the other three. Sophomore Tara Miles looked good in the final quarter and hit a three-pointer late in the game.

Murphy and Paula Tolson had nine points each, Panaro had six and Kellene Duffy had six steals.

Earlier in the week Brockton topped North, 61-45, after the Raiderettes had jumped off to an 8-0 lead three minutes into the game.

Duffy hit for six points and Murphy took a full-court pass from Duffy for two points. However, Brockton ran off 14 straight points and took a 14-8 lead at the end of the quarter.

North cut the lead to two but the lady Boxers' press caused many North turnovers and Brockton held a 31-15 lead at halftime.

North shot 56 percent from the floor in the third quarter to cut the lead to eight points midway through the quarter. Murphy had six points and Panaro and Kara Sullivan had four each. However, North's inability to keep Brockton's Michelle Doonan off the offensive boards hurt North as Doonan scored eight points.

North made one more run behind six points by Murphy, but came up short.

Murphy led the way with 18 points and eight rebounds while Panaro and Duffy had eight points each.

"We have to turn ourselves around after four losses in a row," said Bregoli. "We've been in every game and show flashes of good things. Our turnovers and missing easy shots hurt us badly in our two losses last week."

Noble, Craig Selected For Shriners Game

Quincy quarterback Chris Noble and North Quincy fullback-linebacker Ryan Craig have been selected to play for the South squad in the annual Shriners High School Football All-Star game June 16 at Boston College.

Noble, who will enter the University of New Hampshire on a full football scholarship in the fall, led the Division 1 quarterbacks with 22 touchdown passes last fall, passed from 1845 yards and in two seasons passed for 3295 yards and 34 touchdowns and rushed for seven more for the Presidents.

Craig had an outstanding 1988 season, rushing for 1160 yards despite missing one game and playing only one half against Quincy due to an injury. He also was one of the finest linebackers in the state for the Raiders.

Former Quincy coach Bill Maver, who coached Acton-Boxboro to the Dual County league title last fall, will be one of the coaches for the North squad.

Ward 4 Democrats To Caucus

Ward 4 Democrats will caucus Feb. 4 at 2 p.m. at the Lincoln Hancock School to elect delegates to the annual Democratic Convention.

Ten delegates will be elected, five men and five women. Bernice Mader, who is also Democratic State Committeewoman for Quincy, Braintree, Holbrook and Avon, will be chairman.

In addition to voting for delegates, there will be a vote upon what are the most pressing issues to be considered at the State Convention. The place and date for the Convention have not yet been decided.

All Democrats registered in Ward 4 by Dec. 30, 1988 may attend and vote. The public and press may view the proceedings.

Keohane's Regains Top

Keohane's moved back into first place in the Pee Wee House League with a 4-0 win over Bersani Brothers.

Scott MacPherson, Brian Connolly, Joe McPhee and Patrick Connolly had the goals and Connolly, Tim Kunz and MacPherson had assists.

UCT topped Colonial Federal, 6-1, as Billy Coughlin scored two goals and Justin Silverio, Dan Beaton, Joe Carinci and Lee Hughes one each. Dewey Holmes had three assists and Silverio and Carinci one each. Derek Mullen scored for Colonial Federal with Mike Grant assisting.

The standings: Keohane's, 7-4-3; Bersani, 7-5-2; Colonial Federal, 6-6-2; UCT, 4-9-1.

North Defeats Newton, 57-49

The North Quincy boys' basketball team defeated Newton North, 57-49, last Friday to improve its record to 4-9.

Ted Stevenson's Raiders played Cambridge Rindge and Latin Tuesday, will be idle Friday and will play at Quincy next Tuesday night at 7:30.

North used a stifling zone press in the second half Friday and scored eight points in a row to start the third quarter to turn the game around against Newton.

Erik DeBoer had another big night for the Raiders with 18 points and 12 rebounds and Mike Ainsley contributed 12 points.

Earlier in the week North lost to Brockton 75-62, despite 19 points and 10 rebounds for Kipp Caldwell.

DeBoer scored 12 points and Sean McDonough had nine points and six rebounds for the Raiders.

Poor Start Thwarts Quincy

The Quincy boys' basketball team, after defeating Waltham for its fourth win (two more than it had all last season), lost to Brookline last Friday night, dropping its record to 4-9.

John Franceschini's Presidents played at Brockton Tuesday, will host Cambridge Rindge and Latin Friday night at 7:30 and will be home to North Quincy next Tuesday night at 7:30.

The Presidents got off to a horrible start against Brookline, trailing, 23-9, after a quarter and Brookline went on to a 66-56 victory.

Chris Noble had one of his best nights for Quincy and led the team with 15 points, 10 rebounds and five blocked shots.

Earlier in the week Quincy topped Waltham, 70-63, paced by Jody Beauchamp, who had 16 points and 10 rebounds.

Mike Perkins had 14 points and 11 rebounds and Oscar Jara added 13 points, hitting five of six free throws in the fourth quarter.

Tough Times Continue For Quincy Girls

Things don't get any better for the young Quincy girls' basketball team, which lost to Waltham and Brookline last week, dropping its record to 2-11.

Doug MacFarlane's First Ladies played Brockton Tuesday night, will play at Cambridge Rindge and Latin Friday at 5 p.m. and will be at North Quincy next Tuesday night at 7:30.

The Quincy girls continue to show their inexperience and last Friday Brookline jumped off to an 18-3 first quarter lead and had no trouble winning, 63-27.

Melanie Sullivan scored eight points and Chris Barrett had four points, six assists and two steals for the First Ladies.

Earlier in the week the Quincy girls lost to Waltham, 65-38, as sophomore Barrett and junior Maureen Shea scored eight points each. Kim Marsden, brought up from the freshman team, took down nine rebounds and had two steals for the First Ladies.

Quincy Frosh Girls Showing Improvement

The Quincy girls' freshman basketball team appeared to be off to another fine season as coach Mary Holleran greeted 14 candidates.

However, injuries and work commitments left her with only 10 players.

The girls were impressive in their opener against Braintree, but fell short as a result of precision foul shooting by Braintree down the stretch.

Kim Marsden, Holly McDonough and Tricia Vacca all played well for the young First Ladies.

The last five games proved to be a learning experience for the girls, as they had to play without Marsden, who was moved up to the varsity after a 27-point effort in a victory over Waltham.

The team also lost its leading rebounder, Holly McDonough, with a badly sprained ankle.

Holleran still feels the team will do well the rest of the season since the first-year players have shown steady improvement.

Other players are Judy Goodman, Lori Allen, Adriana Bagu, Kim Va, Suzanne Carinci, Anne Wong, Rebecca Leong and Rita Lei.

Nancy Smith To Be Inducted Into Stonehill Hall Of Fame

Nancy Smith, a native and life-long resident of Quincy, will be one of the first eight inductees into the newly-created Stonehill College Hall of Fame.

The induction of the eight charter members will take place April 29 at the Four Hundred Restaurant in North Easton.

Nancy, the daughter of Dana and the late Patricia (Geary) Smith, is the only woman to play three sports (basketball, softball and soccer) at Stonehill. She was a point guard in basketball, shortstop in softball and goalie in soccer.

Her father and her stepmother, Joan, still live in Quincy at 83 Haviland Street.

Nancy moved to South Weymouth last year.

She attended the Wollaston School and Central Junior High School and was active for several years in the Quincy Recreation Dept.

She graduated in 1979 from Abp. Williams High School where she was a four-year standout in basketball and softball and stood out academically.

The basketball teams won the division championship all four years in which she played.

Upon graduation she received the Patricia Geary Smith Award given to the outstanding female scholar-athlete named for her late mother. This award has been given annually for the past 10 years.

NANCY E. SMITH

At Stonehill she was the first female All-America selection in softball.

Nancy, whose No. 11 basketball and softball jerseys were retired, played on three state champion softball teams and the first NE-8 Conference championship team. The title was won in 1983 on the road at St. Anselm College. She was selected the NE-10 Tournament Most Valuable Player.

She captained the basketball, soccer and softball teams. She was an outstanding goalie in soccer, shortstop in softball and a record-setting point guard in basketball.

She established new standards for assists for a game, season and career. She was the first and last three-sport female varsity athlete. As a senior, she was selected for the prestigious Edward Martin Student/Athlete Award.

Nancy is in good company among the first Hall of Fame selectees.

Joining her are the late Father William Gartland, long-time athletic director; Red Sox general manager Lou Gorman, who played first base and guard in basketball at Stonehill; Brockton High football coach Armond Colombo, Eastern dentist Don Prohovich, who became Stonehill's first Academic All-America in 1980 when he had a 3.7 academic average, hit .441 for the Chieftains' baseball team and was credited with a record 11 game-winning hits; Stonehill women's basketball coach Paula Sullivan, who coached Nancy Smith; Mike Allocco, a three-time All-America selection, Stonehill's all-time leading scorer in basketball with 2399 points, and Angelo Caranfa, the only Stonehill soccer All-America selection.

Members of the Hall-of-Fame committee were athletic director Ray Pepin, Paula Sullivan, Dr. Fred Petti, Rev. John McCarthy, Bob Richards, Timothy Lawlor and John Noblin. Before his death, Father Gartland was a charter member.

Quincy Wrestlers Host Brockton Saturday In Battle Of Undefeated

The Quincy wrestling team will host Brockton in a meeting of unbeaten Suburban League teams Saturday night at 7 o'clock at the Quincy Vo-Tech gym for the league championship.

Quincy is 6-0 in the league and 12-2 overall following wins over Cambridge Rindge and Latin and Stoughton last Saturday. Earlier in the week the Presidents defeated Waltham.

Quincy will warm up for the sectional and state championships with a meet at Milton Academy next Thursday in the final regular season meet. The league tournament will be held at Cambridge Rindge and Latin on Saturday, Feb. 11.

Quincy rolled over Cambridge, 50-13, last Saturday in a league meet and also topped Stoughton, 33-28, in a non-league meet. Earlier it had defeated Waltham, 40-27, in a league meet.

The Presidents have three undefeated wrestlers. Senior Robert Connolly at 140 pounds is 11-0-2, senior co-captain Todd Kimmell at 145 is 13-0-1 and junior Brian Burgess at 160 is 12-0.

Kimmell and Connolly had their toughest matches to date against Cambridge and came away with ties.

The Mite A's are tied with Belmont for second place in the A Division of the Greater Boston League and will meet Somerville Saturday at 5:10 p.m. at the Neponset rink.

Brian Beaton was outstanding in the Belmont game with many fine kick and glove saves. Quincy's outstanding line averaging seven goals a game was held to a goal by the outstanding efforts of the Belmont goalie. Scott Cooper had the lone goal with Mike Ryan and Eric Wood assisting.

An Eventful Time At Sacred Heart School

By CHRISTINE SKJOLD and SUZANNE SKJOLD
SHS Junior High

The year 1988 was a very eventful and exciting time at Sacred Heart School in North Quincy.

During September students sold M&M's to raise money for field trips. This successful drive brought in a substantial sum. Achievement tests were administered throughout the school the last week of September.

In October, after almost six weeks of practice, a cast of about 140 people entertained us with a Parish Show on Oct. 8-9. Oct. 12 was High School Information Night for all seventh and eighth graders and their parents. Representatives from area schools discussed their respective programs and admission procedures. The PTO Cake Sale, October 15 and 16, raised money to benefit the school. While we're talking about food, our monthly Hot Dog Days, sponsored by the PTO also began in October. Grade 3 presented an All-Saints Pageant. Several students dressed up and told about his or her saint. On October 31 all students and teachers dressed up in black and yellow to celebrate Halloween.

Nov. 6, in our own school auditorium, a fashion show was presented by Corbin's Dress Shop. This event was sponsored by the North Quincy Catholic Women's Club. During the week of November 7, a food drive was held for those in need. The non-perishable food was given to the Atlantic Neighborhood Center and the Little Brothers for the Elderly.

On Dec. 5, Grades 1-8 received report cards. Parent-Teacher Conferences followed the distribution of cards. Grade 6 went to the Museum of Fine Arts to view the Egyptian Exhibit and Program while Grade 8 went to the Science Museum. The Perishable Theater enacted a Russian Folk Tale for the student body on Dec. 20. During Christmas vacation a bowling party was one reward for those who had participated in the Parish Show earlier in the year. Children were bussed to Olindy's Bowling Alley. December was also a time for the students to participate in the Christmas seal project. The Holy Childhood Association recieved over $900 from Sacred Heart School to help the missions throughout the world.

January has also been an active month at Sacred Heart. Students from Fontbonne Academy who have been trained in Peer Leadership Programs have and will be visiting Grades 5-8. The Fontbonne students give a lesson on decision making regarding drugs and alcohol. Migration Week was also celebrated throughout the school. Each class shared with each other their family history in some way.

Parents of seventh and eighth graders were invited to participate in a conference sponsored by Sacred Heart Religious Education Office and Sacred Heart School on the topic of "Teen Suicide."

The students in Grades 7 traveled to Eastern Nazarene College to view the original musical "Parables." Everyone had a chance to be on stage. A great time was had by all! January 24 is the kick-off day for the Math-A-Thon to benefit Saint Jude's Research Hospital for Children. Father Heery has arranged an ice skating trip for Grades 7-8 on January 27. This is always an enjoyable time.

Catholic Schools Week will be celebrated at Sacred Heart the week of Feb. 5. The parish community is invited to the CSW opening liturgy on Feb. 5 at 12 noon. An Open House will follow the Mass. All are welcome to view the students' work and to partake of refreshments in the school cafeteria. Other CSW activities include a book fair to be held Feb. 6-8 and a computer room open house on Monday and Wednesday. Parents may visit the computer room during their child's scheduled class.

City Makes Last Ditch Effort Against Sludge

cannot undergo the scrutiny of public officials and citizens. He is fearful that if the truth is known about how this decision (to place the facility in Quincy) was made that it could have a substantial effect on the decision by the board of directors the next day."

Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro said it would be "very distressing and a terrible slap in the face if not one (MWRA official) had the decency to be there and at least hear comments."

Cheney said however he had heard from one board member who "might be attending" late in the meeting. Paul Anderson, Public Works Commission and MWRA representative for Quincy, said that he would also attend.

John P. DeVillars, Secretary of Environmental Affairs, had also been invited, but had given no definite indication he would attend.

City Council President Patricia Toland said that she had heard from DeVillars and that he would "consider it, but wasn't sure if he would attend."

Cheney said he feels the "MWRA is talking out of both sides of their mouth" because they had said the purchase of the General Dynamics shipyard would not "prejudice the selection process."

"We were told again," Cheney said "when the Mayor of the city of Quincy agreed to an interim plan of processing sludge at the General Dynamics shipyard, that the site would not be prejudiced to accept the long-term processing facility."

DeCristofaro, who had been out of town when the recommendation was made, said that "this is a matter that affects not only the people of Quincy Point, but the whole city of Quincy. We will do what we can to stop this, either temporarily or permanently."

City Councillor Stephen McGrath said:

"I would like to make the point that no site in Quincy should be considered for the sludge treatment plant. I think the shipyard is the wrong site.

And I think that we, as City Councillors, have to do all that we can, including bringing a lawsuit against the MWRA, for the process that they used to place the site in Quincy. I also think another interesting point is that the EPA has taken the position that they don't think the Quincy site can fully handle the amount of sludge processed. They think that they'll generate too much and that a back-up (facility) will be needed. They'll probably need to incinerate."

He noted the EPA has concluded that Quincy is not the best place for the incineration process.

"The City should be united in not having it in the City of Quincy," he concluded.

Ward 4 Councillor James A. Sheets said:

"First and foremost I plan to indicate that I've always supported a satellite plan." "If we had gone in that direction as most communities in the country have, we would not be in this situation now."

Sheets said he will discuss three things that the City of Quincy should do:

"Number one is that, after the action is taken, the city should seek a remedy in court. It would seem to me that the Equity Doctrine has been violated and that Quincy is being asked to carry far more than their load...we have to fight it in court," he said.

"Quincy also has to pursue the Environmental Protection Agency. They have concerns about the capacity of the site, as to whether or not the site is sufficient...we should pursue the EPA to ensure that the MWRA can do what they say they will do."

Sheets said he sees the final necessary action as altering the legislature which created the MWRA.

"The power (the MWRA has) is theirs because the legislature should include an Equity Agreement which would mandate that communities be treated fairly. Why should Quincy have to pay equally with (other communities) and at the same time take all of the difficulties involved in siting the sludge plant now...we have suffered enough."

State Rep. Arthur Stephen Tobin said:

"This was not the best decision, all things considered. It was merely the easiest. And there's a message here: When we allow bureaucrats to lounge on leather sofas, flick their ashes in marble ashtrays, and put their feet up on oak desks, they tend to get too comfortable and take the easy route."

Quincy Harbormaster Bernie Reisberg will moderate the hearing. He said that if he is allowed to voice his opinion on the issues as harbormaster, he would echo the opposition of city councillors.

"It has been found that other sites are better in terms of the environment, but that Quincy has been found to be the best in terms of dollars and cents. My way of thinking is that Quincy is the worst site...because it is the busiest in the Quincy Bay area."

Reisberg explained that increased water traffic caused by the facility could produce a "truly dangerous" situation.

"At the best of times that is the busiest area for us to patrol," he said. "And if they should add anymore traffic to the area...this will be a dangerous, a truly dangerous area for boating people and for commercial workers. This site is the worst of all. When they put a dollar sign on the area, I put a dollar sign on human life. It can only produce more accidents and even fatalities."

Members of the Quincy Citizens Association were also planning to attend the meeting. The association sent a letter to all members urging them to be there.

"It's hard to say how many will attend," said Dorothy Kelly, secretary for the group, "we could have as many as 50 members at the meeting." She also said that at least two or three officers of the association would attend.

"Our association has been advocating satellite sludge treatment plants in the communities where the sewage is generated," she said. "It doesn't seem that (the MWRA) has given that much thought."

City Council President Toland said Monday she was hoping for a "strong, forceful presentation by the people of Quincy" at the meeting.

"I think it's important that people speak out...we've been more than cooperative with the MWRA and have not received any special respect from them...this (selection) process has not been a fair one."

Toland also said the Council hopes that the meeting may convince the MWRA Board of Directors to delay the final decision and review other options for the facility.

"If there is a good crowd there (the MWRA) possibly might delay the decision and look at all the options again...I hope the Board will postpone the decision for at least a week."

Calls Candidacy 'A Mission'

Sheets Enters Mayoral Race, Says '89 Is Our Time'

Ward 4 Councillor James A. Sheets officially entered this year's mayoral race Tuesday night saying that 1989 "is our time."

Sheets, who has served Ward 4 for 15 years, made his formal announcement at a campaign kickoff at the George Bryan VFW Post.

Sheets becomes the fourth official major candidate to enter this year's mayoral race. The others: former Mayor Joseph LaRaia, Councillor Steve McGrath and businessman Peter O'Connell.

He told the crowd of friends, supporters and family members:

"...we are ready; it's our time in 89...it's with humility, it's with a sense of mission, and a full understanding of the difficulties ahead, that I announce my candidacy for Mayor of the City of Quincy.

"We are ready for the task ahead. We are ready this evening because we have learned the secret of leadership and that is simply that the people must come first.

"We are ready this evening because the people want someone who will listen and we will listen.

"We are ready this evening because the people want someone who will understand and we will understand.

"We are ready this evening because the people want someone who will care...and we will care.

"We are ready this evening because the people want someone who is creative and we will find new solutions to old problems.

Sheets said the city must control development, and:

"We cannot and will not budge on sludge. We must remain firm in our resolve to control our own destiny and not allow ourselves to be controlled by the monsters of might."

The text of his announcement follows:

For the past 15 years it has been my honor and privilege to serve the people of Ward 4 as their city councillor.

During these years I have felt a personal responsibility for making their lives better through understanding their needs and concerns and acting on those concerns. I have always felt a close and special relationship with the people of Ward 4. It is with great sadness that I realize that part of my public career is passing.

The writer of Ecclesiastes in the Old Testament has said it far better than I could:

"To everything there is a season, and a time to every purpose under Heaven: A time to be born, and a time to die; a time to plant, and a time to pluck up...a time to keep, and a time to cast away."

The time has come for that mantel of responsibility in Ward 4 to be passed on to new and different hands. The Ward 4 council seat has never really belonged to me, it has always belonged to the people. They have simply been gracious enough to allow me to occupy it for a time. I only hope history will show I have been a good steward of that responsibility.

During those 15 years of service I have had the opportunity to mature, grow, and become wiser as a public servant. How does that happen? I'll tell you how it happens. The people would speak and I would listen; the people would teach and I would learn; the people would work, and allow me to work along side them sharing their experiences; the people would express their hopes and dreams, and allow me to share those hopes and dreams; when times would become difficult for me, with their words they would sustain me; and when my pace would slacken they would encourage me.

The people have taught me that the genius of this city is not the politician, but the people. That the hope for our future rests not on the grandness of our plans but in such things as the soundness of the education of our children; the cleanliness of our environment, and the security of our homes and persons.

Yes, in many ways the people have contributed far more to my life, than I could possibly have contributed to theirs.

For these reasons and so

Mayor Concerned Over Mobile Methadone Clinic

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Stating he has "some serious concerns" about having a proposed mobile methadone clinic in Quincy, Mayor Francis McCauley has advised state officials behind the plan to present their proposal to the Quincy City Council.

Last summer, the Council voted 8-1 against the plan which would bring a mobile methadone clinic to Quincy. McCauley pointed out that since it is a state funded program, the clinic could come to Quincy without the support of the Council, but added the officials "would like to have it."

As of Tuesday, the officials had not yet contacted Council President Patricia Toland. Toland said she is willing to have the group go before the council if they request to do so.

The next meeting of the council is Tuesday, Feb. 21.

On Tuesday morning, McCauley met with David Mulligan of the state Department of Human Services, Robert Potter, vice president of Habit Management, Ken Tarabelli of Survival, Inc., Harry Schulman, executive director of South Shore Mental Health Center and Quincy Public Health Commissioner M. Jane Gallahue.

The program would be administered by Habit Management.

One site that was mentioned for the clinic by the officials is the Quincy District Courthouse, located on Chestnut St., in Quincy Center, the mayor said.

As proposed, the clinic would be open a few hours daily, from 6:30 to 8:30 a.m.

After the meeting, McCauley said he advised Mulligan to meet with the Council and discuss the proposal in detail.

"I told him I would like to hear the councillor's continued comments of this. I don't know, quite frankly, if when Mr. Mulligan makes his presentation, the council will change its mind but I certainly wouldn't take any action until they were afforded the opportunity of hearing the program Mr. Mulligan outlined to me," McCauley said.

If Mulligan meets with the council, McCauley said he would listen to their remarks and review the matter once again.

In his meeting with the mayor, Mulligan pointed out that the program is being conducted in Brockton, Taunton, New Bedford and Plainville and that there are plans to locate vans in Plymouth, Hyannis and Weymouth.

McCauley asked several questions regarding the program, such as the number

Liability Insurance For One-Day Liquor Licenses

By JANE ARENA

The City License Board Tuesday continued for one month a hearing concerning a proposal by Sgt. Richard Laracy, Quincy Liquor Inspector, that all one day all-alcoholic licenses be required to show proof of liability insurance and that applications for such licenses be submitted at least 14 days in advance of the event.

Sgt. Laracy's proposal, researched by David M. Spillane, legal counsel for the City of Quincy, also recommended that the board not grant one-day all alcoholic licenses for the sale and consumption of alcohol on public property, which includes the Fore River Clubhouse as well as public parks, both of which are run by the Park Department.

The board, which has traditionally granted such licenses to events at the Fore River Clubhouse and public parks, said that the clubhouse is used often by non-profit organizations in fund raising efforts and, if it is not available it would be an injustice to some of these organizations.

New Policy For Wedding Parties

By JANE ARENA

The Quincy License Board Tuesday adopted recommendations made by Sgt. Richard Laracy, Liquor Inspector for the City of Quincy, concerning after-wedding party regulations.

Sgt. Laracy proposed that an agreement be drafted and sent to all establishments which host after wedding reception parties in reference to the responsibility and liability involved in such events.

Legal counsel for the City of Quincy, David M. Spillane, told the board that these parties are becoming more popular as an effort to "skirt the liability" of serving alcohol at a private party and transferring the responsibility to the establishment.

The recommendations states that a police officer be on duty at the establishment at least one half hour before the event begins until the end of the party. The agreement also states that a police detail be mandatory, regardless of whether there be music or dancing as in other detail requirements.

The agreement states that the establishment, and not the police officer and the city, are responsible for the sobriety of the patrons entering the facility, and their sobriety while they are in the hall. The "last drink served" is the responsibility of the establishment, the agreement states.

The board passed a motion to adopt the recommendations and to send a copy of the agreement to all function halls in the city.

First Parish Clock To Ring On Hour

Thanks to a $950 appropriation passed by the City Council Monday night, the clock tower of the First Parish Church in Quincy Square will start ringing on the hour in the near future.

According to a letter from Linda Woodford to Rev. Sheldon Bennett, the money will be used to add one mercury switch to the clock which will in turn trip the gear which counts the hours. This will activate the striking hammer and the clock itself will accurately count off the hours each time it trips this switch.

The electrification of both the clock and the bell have been determined to need only this addition to make the bell ring. All mechanical striking mechanisms of the clock have been preserved.

After the clock is successfully and satisfactorily striking the hours, the bottoms of the coils on the striking hammer will be treated or covered so that it won't magnetize itself.

It is believed the magnetization caused the failure of the bell on several occasions.

MBTA Public Hearings Here On Subway Fare Increase Feb. 27

The MBTA will hold public hearings concerning a proposal to raise the one-way fare on the subway portion of the rapid transit system from 60 cents to 75 cents.

The increase will raise MBTA revenue by an estimated $10.5 million.

The increase will not affect bus fares.

This is the first fare increase since 1981. Since that time, ridership has increased by over 20 percent, while service on all lines has increased, and cost of operation, when factored for inflation, has gone down.

Currently, the MBTA's base fare is the lowest of any subway system in the nation. With the fifteen cents per ride increase, the MBTA's fares will still remain the nation's lowest.

The public hearings will be held between 3:30 p.m. and 7 p.m. Monday, Feb. 27 at Quincy City Hall.

The public is invited to attend the hearings to comment on the proposed fare increase. Written comments will be accepted through March 2, 1989, and should be addressed to:

Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority, Transportation Building, 10 Park Plaza, Boston, MA 02116, Attn: Subway Fare Proposal.

'Toothbrush Swap'

The South Shore Dental Hygienists Association will sponsor a "Toothbrush Swap" at the Thomas Crane Public Library Children's Room Saturday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Children are invited to bring in their old toothbrush in exchange for a new one.

The hygienists will show cartoons and have other hand-outs which encourage proper dental care. The tooth fairy will also appear at the event.

The event is part of National Children's Dental Health Month.

Call For Backup Before Sludge Operation Starts

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Five state representatives, including three from Quincy, have written to Mayor Francis McCauley urging him to join them and the EPA to form an alliance "demanding that the MWRA refrain from its Quincy sludge operation until an acceptable backup method to dispose of excess material has been established."

The delegation, consisting of Quincy Representatives Robert Cerasoli, Michael Morrissey and A. Stephen Tobin as well as Suzanne Bump from Braintree and Robert Ambler of Weymouth, has also asked McCauley to join them in "persuading the MWRA to locate its office headquarters within the former General Dynamics shipyard site in Quincy.

Last week, the MWRA Board of Directors voted 9-1 in favor of siting the Agency's permanent sludge processing facility at the Fore River Shipyard. The recommendation to have Quincy host the permanent facility was made by Executive Director Paul Levy.

Paul Anderson, Quincy's commissioner of Public Works and the City's representative on the board, voted against the recommendation.

The decision has been criticized by many officials, community advocates and residents who called the siting selection process flawed.

Under the approved plan, the MWRA will construct two buildings at the yard as part of the Boston Harbor cleanup project. One will be used for composting the sludge while the other will convert it to pellets through pellitization. These methods have also been criticized by officials who believe the treated sludge will pile up at the shipyard because the marker for the material is "drying up."

The delegation's letter to McCauley points out that after a recent meeting with Paul Keogh, Deputy Regional Administrator of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, and several of his chief aides, several issues were raised concerning the proposed sludge procesing plant for the Quincy shipyard.

According to the letter, "Keogh and other EPA officials emphasized that while the Agency encourages the use of management practices that provide for the beneficial use of sludge, the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority has not shown that the heat drying and composting technologies (either alone or in comination) will be sufficient to appropriately manage the quantity and quality of sludge to be generated.

"It was the consensus of the meeting that until MWRA can very clearly demonstrate that all of the compost or dried product (pelletization) can be distributed and marketed, an alternative support system must be carried as a technology for long term residuals management.

"No such demonstration has yet been made."

Also, the letter point outs that "until DEQE classifies the sludge products to determine how they may be used within the Commonwealth, any assessment of the marketability of those products will be even more speculative. The compost from the MWRA's current pilot composting facility has yet to be classified by DEQE.

"Moreover, experience in other major cities has shown that developing a market for sludge-derived products can be a lengthy process, taking as many as several years to gradually increase the acceptability, and therefore quantity, of product distributed.

"Growing competition between states as to the marketability of their own respective sludge by-products within a limited region must also be taken into consideration. This makes it highly unlikely that MWRA could demonstrate the feasibility of marketing 100 percent of its sludge product."

As a result, the "EPA feels strongly," and we concur, that MWRA must carry a viable option for an alternative support facility to dispose of excess sludge. A federal order now prohibits MWRA from dumping sludge back into the harbor, which of course, defeats the original purpose of the court-ordained project in the expurgation of Boston Harbor."

The letter also states that Deland has publicly questioned whether a treatment plant at the Quincy shipyard can handle all the sewage sludge to be removed from wastewater treated at Boston Harbor.

"These doubts were reinforced at our meeting with Deputy Administrator Keough with the additional consequences of by-product marketability."

In asking McCauley to join with them in persuading the MWRA to locate its office headquarters at the Fore River Shipyard, the delegation stated, "As you know, the MWRA is currently considering several sites for a probably move at the expiration of its current lease.

"The Authority has already purchased the Quincy Point property for $49 million and has thousands of square feet of existing office space and acres of land to facilitate any future needs.

"We believe the relocation of the MWRA offices to the Quincy shipyard is imperative to the economy and well-being of the residents in the tri-communities of Quincy, Weymouth and Braintree."

Furthermore, the letter stated, "The MWRA, through its director, Paul Levy, has expressed the desire to be a 'good neighbor' within the community. We intend to take him at his word and request that he show good faith in his words by becoming, in fact, a good neighbor at the Quincy shipyard."

Affordable Housing Trust Fund Gets Council Go-Ahead

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

A home rule petition calling for the establishment of an affordable housing trust fund with revenue supplied by a one percent fee on all future commercial and industrial developments in Quincy passed the City Council's Human Services Committee 7-1-1 Monday night.

The final vote is expected to be taken at the council's next meeting scheduled for Feb. 21.

The proposal is in the form of a home rule petition, meaning it needs not only council approval but also Mayor Francis McCauley's signature and approval by the State Legislature before it can be enacted.

About 40 people attended the meeting, many of whom wore yellow affordable housing buttons.

Planning Director Richard Meade said he knows of three other similar trust funds that have been approved by the state legislature.

In discussing the trust fund, all councillors voiced support for promoting affordable housing in Quincy but two councillors disagreed with the means stipulated in the trust fund proposal introduced by Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien. Chretien is also the chairman of the Human Services Committee.

Under his proposal, a trust fund would be established with revenue collected by administering a one percent fee on all commercial and industrial developments in Quincy.

This is an amended version of a proposal Chretien introduced in June which outlined the account would be funded by a four percent fee on commercial development.

Councillor Timothy Cahill voted against the trust fund, saying it would be detrimental to the city's economy. Ward 6 Councillor Thomas Nutley, who was in favor of sending the proposal back into committee, called out "present" when the vote was taken.

According to Chretien, a one percent fee could produce between $100,000 and $200,000 per year, depending on how much development occurs. This revenue could be used in a variety of ways, including down payments for first-time home buyers, rent supplements to tenants and by the Quincy Housing Authority to purchase affordable units provided by private developers through state programs or other means.

Chretien also pointed out that the fund would be structured so that money would be paid back with interest upon sale of the house or a part of the appreciation would be given back to the fund.

Moreover, the spending program of the trust fund would be approved annually by the City Council.

In voicing his support for the measure, Chretien

A Clarification From Citywide Parents' Council

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

In a recent article in the Ledger, the efforts of the Citywide Parents Council sub-committee on the Quincy School budget were discussed. The school budget is a major concern and because there were many questions regarding the content of the article, it is necessary to clarify the work of the subcommittee.

For a number of years, Citywide has been concerned with the inability of school funding to fully support the educational programs of Quincy public schools. Programs have been watered down, educational services cut, and building maintenance deferred; all due to a lack of adequate school funding. To address this concern, a school budget subcommittee has been established. Objectives of the subcommittee are to review past school budgets and expenditures and prepare specific comments and recommendations.

The sub-committee has only recently begun its work, and will be reporting to the full Citywide organization before comments and recommendations are forwarded to the School Committee. A final report will be submitted to the School Committee by March 11, 1989.

A major portion of the budget review will be an evaluation of programs that are currently under-funded. Examples of under-funded programs are the middle school foreign language program, building maintenance and nursing coverage. It is the general feeling that additional school funding is required to provide the necessary level of education and supporting services.

A clarification on school nurses is also warranted. The Citywide Parents Council firmly believes that each of the city's 18 schools require a full-time school nurse. Presently there are only 10-1/2 nurses, leaving all but three of the 18 schools without full-time coverage. Additional nursing staff is required and adequate funding to increase nursing staff must be included in the school budget for next year.

City wide hopes that its concern regarding the lack of adequate funding can be clearly presented and substantiated in its report to the School Committee and that it will have a positive impact during the upcoming budget setting process.

PLANNING AND RETIREMENT

In discussing planning for people that are ages 56 and older, we often find that they are no longer interested in new life insurance, unless as a gift for a grandchild. I strongly recommend that they review their current policies and their beneficiary designations.

We have many inquiries regarding the different types of annuities (very low risk), that can accumulate cash on tax deferred basis, and also supply a guaranteed lifetime income. We would be happy to meet members of all three age groups (we discussed two other groups in the previous weeks) in order to discuss, recommend and assist them in their present coverages, or any new programs they would be interested in.

Today's life insurance policies and annuity programs are all sensitive products, and used properly would be strong deterrents to financial failures for either family needs, funds for college or a secure retirement.

If you are close to retirement, why not ask us to review your present life insurance policies, and see whether or not thye ought to be used to supplement your retirement income.

For solid, intelligent advice on your insurance needs talk to the professionals at Riley & Rielly Insurance Agency, Inc. Please call our office at 471-6200 or visit us at 1050 Hancock Street in Quincy.

Like Two Mayor Races

With four major candidates in the mayoral race, 1989 could well be the year when every vote really counts.

At this stage, the four -- former Mayor Joseph LaRaia, Councillors Stephen McGrath and James Sheets and businessman Peter O'Connell -- look fairly even.

The outcome is much too early to call.

Who will eventually nail down the two nominations in September?

The answer to that may depend on another question: Who's going to take crucial votes away from who and how many?

LaRaia, who came within a whisker (460 votes) of upsetting incumbent Frank McCauley two years ago, is virtually conceded one of the nominations by some observers.

They point to his traditional support down through the years that he usually can count on by just sailing his hat into the ring.

And, in a close four-way horse race, they think it might be just enough to latch on to one of the two nominations.

But things could be a little different for LaRaia this time around.

This year he doesn't have an incumbent mayor to bash around throughout the campaign. LaRaia is quite effective when pitted against an incumbent. If there is something wrong in the city, blame it on the incumbent whether he had anything to do with it or not. That's politics.

Without an incumbent to fault, LaRaia -- and, for that matter, each of the other three candidates -- will have to mount positive campaigns, spelling out for the voter exactly what he can do better for the city and how.

LaRaia could have another problem this year. This one is named Jim Sheets.

LaRaia needs Wards 2 and 4 in his camp. He was beaten by McCauley two years ago when Ward 2 failed to give him his traditional big vote. It sent him down to defeat.

LaRaia has run strong in Ward 4 where he once lived but this year he is up against Sheets, a popular 16-year Ward councillor there.

Sheets no doubt will get votes that ordinarily would go to LaRaia. The question: Enough to keep LaRaia from a nomination?

By the same token, of course, LaRaia could cut into Sheets in Ward 4.

Then there's McGrath and O'Connell who appeal to many of the same people. Who will take votes from the other and how many?

It almost seems like there are two mayoral races shaping up: LaRaia vs. Sheets and McGrath vs. O'Connell.

Right now, it's anybody's ball game. Much too early for predictions or bets.

It should be one of the best mayoral races in many years. And, let's hope, a year when the candidates stress what they are for and what they will do for the city; instead of what they are against.

PEGGY NIGRO who a few weeks ago announced she would not seek re-election to the School Committee this year, is being urged to reconsider.

NIGRO

The urging is coming from her supporters, friends and family.

She is still resisting but they hope to convince her to change her mind before campaign time rolls around.

One sign she may change her mind: Her husband, Jack, has decided not to seek the Ward 1 City Council seat.

Fabrizio will make his formal announcement in March at Morrisette Legion Post.

FABRIZIO

A life-long resident of Quincy, Fabrizio attended Quincy public schools and Northeastern University. He is employed by the Massachusetts Department of Social Services and the Quincy Police Department.

He was formerly with the Norfolk County District Attorney's office.

Fabrizio is married to the former Kathy Graham of Quincy. They have two children.

DENIS TARDO, president of the Quincy Tenants Organization, is close to making his announcement.

TARDO

Tardo has been looking at either a run for the Ward 1 City Council or for councillor at-large. His decision, reportedly is: councillor at-large.

Tardo apparently feels he has more interests in issues at a city-wide level rather than at the one ward level.

Tardo, a Republican, was an unsuccessful candidate for the Second Norfolk District state representative seat last fall.

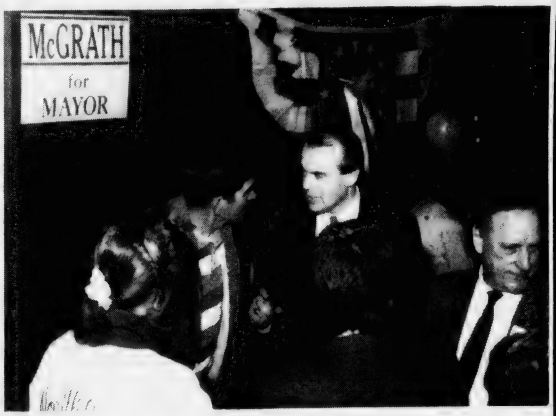
McGRATH'S OFF AND RUNNING . . . FOR MAYOR

Councillor at-large Stephen J. McGrath formally announced his candidacy for Mayor on Thursday, February 2, 1989, before hundreds of supporters, family and friends. "I ask you to share my vision of the future of Quincy with me. For I believe that this election is one in which the choices will never be clearer and the stakes will never be higher," McGrath said in kicking off his run in the 1989 Mayoral race.

McGrath, a lawyer, won election to the council in Ward 5 in 1977. He served five terms before topping the ticket for a citywide council seat in 1987, a move many political observers felt was a sign that McGrath was laying the groundwork for an eventual mayoral run.



McGrath has served a two-year stint as council president and is chairman of the council's financial committee.

McGrath told the crowded room that "The road ahead will be long and hard, longer and harder than any campaign we've worked in together before, but I know our resolve will not falter and no candidate for Mayor will work harder than I."

As Mayor Steve McGrath would improve public education and rejuvenate downtown Quincy, and would strongly oppose any attempts to override the tax limitations of Proposition 2½.

"I will live within our limits and, through good management, run the city of Quincy competently and correctly."

McGrath will continue to fight the location of a sludge treatment plant at the Fore River shipyard and the proposal to reopen the Old Colony rail line through Quincy.

Campaign Chairman Leo Kelly, introduced Steve McGrath at Thursday's event calling him "Clearly, the best candidate in the race. He functions as a guy who wants to get the job done and done well."

McGrath campaign workers were out in force Saturday covering the issue caucuses being held throughout the city.

Chicken Foldovers

A New Twist On An Old Standby

Last week as I was preparing to make cutlets out of some boneless chicken breasts, I changed my mind and decided to stuff them instead. I call them foldovers because that's exactly what I did. I just stuffed them and folded them. They cut even easier than when I had rolled them.

CHICKEN FOLDOVERS

2 Large boneless chicken breasts
4 slices of bread
(soaked and squeezed)
1 cup of either bread crumbs or stuffing mix
1 Tbsp Bell's seasoning
1 Tbsp white wine (optional)
1 small stalk of celery
1 small onion
1 cup water
salt and pepper to taste

Cut up the celery and onion in tiny pieces and cook them in the water. Add the bread and cook until blended. Add the wine, the Bell's seasoning, salt and pepper and the bread crumbs until stuffing looks well blended. (If you have to add a little water, you can do so at this time.)

Open the chicken breasts and place stuffing, covering it all. Then fold it over and press tightly. Place in a slightly greased baking pan. (I also put a little water in the bottom of the pan) and bake covered for 25 minutes in a 350 degree oven, then uncovered for about 10 more minutes.

Chicken breasts vary in size, so give the big ones a few extra minutes.

Cool for a few minutes (unless the family is starving) and then place on a platter and slice!

Burgin, Platner Moving To Franklin St.

Burgin, Platner Insurance, a downtown fixture since it's founding in the mid-1920's, is moving to 14 Franklin St. by April.

Burgin, Platner has been at it's present location, 1359 Hancock St., since 1952. Prior to that the office was in the Adams Building.

According to Vice President David Leitch, the move is due to a need for more space.

"We'll be just about doubling our space with the move," he said. "We hate to leave the hub of the downtown area. We have a lot of friends here...and we've been next to City Hall for so long, but I think we're still considered the downtown area on Franklin St., because it's right on the edge."

The move will be completed "on or about April 1," he said.

many more, you have helped prepare me for this hour.

And we are ready; it's our time in 89...it's with humility, it's with a sense of mission, and a full understanding of the difficulties ahead, that I announce my candidacy for Mayor of the City of Quincy.

We are ready for the task ahead. We are ready this evening because we have learned the secret of leadership, and that is simply that the people must come first. We are ready this evening, because the people want someone who will listen, and we will listen. We are ready this evening, because the people want someone who will understand, and we will understand. We are ready this evening, because the people want someone who will care, and Tommy, Jackie, Rhonda we care. We are ready this evening, because the people want someone who is creative, and we will find new solutions to old problems.

We are ready this evening, because the people want directed, thoughtful action, and we will be wise and we will act.

Our hopes and dreams for the City of Quincy can best be summed up in the words of Sheldon Bennett, minister of the United First Parish Church of Presidents when he said of Quincy:

"We want a city of greatness not only in prosperity, but especially in spirit...a city in which the spirit of brotherhood and sisterhood is strong...a city that may not be a city of hostility but a city of hospitality...a city that forever remains a city of peace and light.":

That is our dream too. The pathway to our hopes and dreams will not be easy. The needs in this city are many and the funds short. But if we are to fulfill our dreams we must ensure that our educational system is second to none. That our students remain competitive, and our teachers proud.

Three of my children have completed their education in the Quincy Public Schools and the fourth is currently at Central Middle School. Their teachers were outstanding as well as the education. We must have a safe and secure city as drug addiction continues and crime visits our neighborhoods, and our city can only be secure when our fire and police departments have the manpower necessary to get the job done.

As we begin a new era at Quincy City Hospital we must ensure that our health care remains of the finest quality and new health care programs are available to all.

We must control development, lest the sun, the trees, the grass, all those things so essential to the naturalness of life be blotted out by bricks and mortar, boards and blacktop.

We cannot and will not budge on sludge. We must remain firm in our resolve to control our own destiny and not allow ourselves to be controlled by the monsters of might.

Together we will reach our goals and realize our dreams. Together our administration will leave a living legacy worthy of the noble heritage which is ours.

Isbister Says He Will Run

Jack Isbister of 20 Gilson Rd., a meat cutter by trade, said Tuesday he is running for mayor in Quincy.

Isbister, who said he ran for mayor several years ago but was forced out of the race because of personal problems, stated he is upset with what he referred to as "deficiencies" in city government. "I'm upset. My kids can't buy a home. It's so harsh today," he said.

Stating he wants to raise the level of social consciousness in the city, Isbister said he would address several issues as mayor, including halfway houses and homeless shelters in the city.

"My best attribute is that I have integrity. I'm willing to speak from the heart. I'm not a salesman. Enough is enough," he said.

A meatcutter for 30 years, Isbister described himself as a "hard-nosed union contractor negotiator."

"I'll stand side by side with any man as long as he doesn't put his hands on me," he said. Isbister also declared he was an honest candidate.

"I'll stand up and tell what has to be told. I'm high-powered and I say what I mean."

As a highlight to his campaign, Isbister said he plans on inviting city residents to hear him speak at Quincy Veterans' Memorial Stadium sometime in the summer.

According to Isbister, he grew up in Quincy and was a meat manager at the Stop and Shop supermarket on Southern Artery. He said he has worked as an international business agent and was president of a meatcutter's union.

Coal Shortage Hits City

Feb. 9-15
1923
66 Years Ago

Coal was so short in Quincy that Fuel Commissioner John F. Scott confiscated a ton that was delivered to a home in Atlantic "under false pretenses" and ordered it redistributed to the needy.

Five tons of coal was sent to Houghs Neck to be sold to the residents in 100-pound bags and Quincy coal dealers sent representatives to Boston to check rumors that several carloads were sidetracked there.

A barge with 1,500 tons of coal, overdue at the City Fuel Co. wharf, was reported sighted off Sandwich on Cape Cod, fighting headwinds and heavy seas.

HIGH SCHOOL STALLED

Work on the new High School on Coddington St. was halted when the contractors, Coblo and Griffin, were unable to pay their workers. The $576,336.90 contract was about 50 percent fulfilled.

John Coblo, one of the contracting partners, said the company was "caught in an increased market," then amended that to say, "We're pinched for funds at the present time ... We're broke."

Public Works Commissioner Crocker requested the bonding company to assume its liability and complete the high school project, the largest contract ever awarded by the city of Quincy.

SUPERINTENDENT REINSTATED

Bill Jones was reinstated as superintendent of streets for Quincy a few hours after his petition of a writ mandamus was received by the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts.

Jones, who was fired Jan. 2 by Mayor Bates "for political activity and for the good of the service," claimed that his ouster was made outside the Mayor's authority.

He claimed $8 in pay for each day that he was out of work.

Squantum Meeting To Discuss Land Traffic Impact

Ward 6 Councillor Thomas Nutley scheduled a meeting for Wednesday, Feb. 8 at 7:30 p.m. in the Squantum Community Center to discuss the impact of traffic relative to a proposed land acquisition by the MDC.

The meeting will be held in the center, which is located in the basement of the Fire Station on Huckins Ave.

Several weeks ago, the MDC announced that it is attempting to acquire 45 acres of land in Squantum near the Jordan Marsh warehouse.

A portion of the money needed for the acquisition would come from the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority.

Affordable Housing Trust Fund Gets Committee Go-Ahead

emphasized that the fund is not a "cure all" to the city's affordable housing situation but added this was an important first step.

Council President Patricia Toland echoed his remarks, stating, "One percent is a very small step towards establishing an affordable housing program.

"I think it's a good step forward. It's not a lot of money and it's time we got started," she said.

Ward 4 Councillor James Sheets said, "I think the concept is fundamentally sound. Certainly some refinements will have to be made," adding that if there are flaws with the proposal, they could be corrected by the state legislature.

Councillor Stephen McGrath said he was concerned that the proposal be adopted so that it ensures more personnel are not needed to implement it.

"I'm really concerned that we don't end up in a beaucratic expanding situation," he said just prior to the vote.

In voting against the measure, Cahill said he supports promoting affordable housing in the city but not by "taxing business."

"My problem is that too often we in government take the easy way out by trying to solve society's problems by taxing businesses. Although it doesn't seem like it initially, adding all the fees together amounts to a lot," he said, referring to other fees developers pay.

"It doesn't hurt the big guy because he passes the cost on to the little guy — the consumer. In the long run, you'll get less money and you won't solve society's ills by taxing business," Cahill said, adding he believes both business and personal taxes are high enough in Quincy.

Nutley, who urged more information be made available before a vote, agreed with Cahill. "If we keep penalizing business, at some point, we're going to force them out of business.

"I'm concerned that if the development slows down, we won't have the funds coming in and we'll lose that (financial) buffer.

"I want to see affordable housing. I don't think our questions have been answered tonight," Nutley added.

$20,000 Approved For Help In Assessors Office

The City Council unanimously approved a $20,000 appropriation Monday night that will be used to fund two temporary, full-time employees on the Board of Assessors.

The money will be used to keep two employees in the assessors office on the city's payroll for six months.

They will help expediate the data entry backlog from the city's property listings done during the revaluation period.

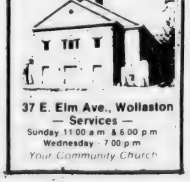
St. Boniface Church To Conduct Split Format Parish Census

Rev. Francis H. Kelly and Rev. Richard S. DeVeer of St. Boniface Church in Germantown announce the start of a new and unique census program in the parish.

Unlike traditional census programs that use entirely door-to-door visitations, the census program at St. Boniface will use a split format. Under this new system, census materials will be mailed to all households within the parish boundaries regardless of religious affiliation.

Those area families that are Catholic will be asked to complete the census. Parish representatives will then make door-to-door visitations to collect the census material.



Present plans call for the census materials to be mailed within the next two weeks.

Laity Sunday At Bethany Congregational

This Sunday will be Laity Sunday at Bethany Congregational Church, United Church of Christ, Coddington and Spear Sts., Quincy Center.

On this Sunday each year the worship is entirely led by church members. This reflects the Protestant belief in the "priesthood of all believers." In addition it is always an exciting experience to have lay members share their gifts for leading worship.

The sermons will be given by Wendell C. Cosgrove and Louise B. Forsyth. Cosgrove will speak on "Remember What's Important" based on Matthew 6:25-33 which will be read by Lisa C. Andre. Forsyth will preach on "Bethany: An Anchor For Our Lives" based on Hebrews 6:10-20 which will be read by Robert W. Mitchell. Carolyn E. Leuchte will call everyone to worship and lead the invocational prayer. Harry F. Massey, Jr. will welcome everyone to the service, give the announcements, and receive the morning's offering. Maria T. Sanchez will lead the congregation in prayer and give the pastoral prayer. Kim M. Miani will close the service giving the final prayer and Benediction.

Charles Blue, Bethany's organist and choir director, will be at the organ console. He will direct the chancel choir — which will have additional members for this special Sunday — in singing two anthems. The first anthem will be "Christ, We Do All Adore Thee" by Theodore Dubois and the offertory will be "The Lord is My Light" by Frances Allitsen.

Sunday School will be in session from 10 to 11 a.m. with classes for children through eighth grade. excellent nursery care for babies is also provided. Our Church School Coordinator, Pamela Curran, will be present to supervise the care of infants and children as well as providing a friendly person for parents to speak with.

The worship service will be broadcast over WJDA, 1300 kc at 10 a.m. It also can be obtained on cassette tape of the service can be obtained for $5 by contacting the church office.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

PRAYER FOR EVERY DAY

Make me too brave to lie or be unkind.
Make me too understanding, too, to mind.
The little hurts companions give, and friends,
The careless hurts that no one quite intends.

Make me too thoughtful to hurt others so.
Help me to know
The inmost hearts of those for whom I care,
Their secret wishes, all the loads they bear,
That I may add my courage to their own.
May I add my courage to their own.
May I make lonely folks feel less alone,
And happier ones a little happier yet.
May I forget
What ought to be forgotten; and recall,
Unfailing, all
That ought to be recalled, each kindly thing.
Forgetting what might sting.
To all upon my way,
Day after day,
Let me be joy, be hope! Let my life sing! ... Author Unknown

Hudson, Merlino Spark Rams

The Norfolk County Agricultural School boys' basketball team is enjoying one of its best seasons.

Last week the Rams qualified for the Eastern Mass. tournament for the first time in five years and only the second time in the last 25 years.

The Rams, coached by Bob Vichnick, are 11-4 overall and 8-3 in the Mayflower League.

Each contributed eight points and played fine all-around games in a 45-42 win over Upper Cape, only the second loss for the Cape team.

The Rams overcame a 10-point deficit to edge Upper Cape in the final minutes.

Earlier the Rams had little trouble defeating the Bristol County Aggies, 87-57, and previously they had clinched the tournament spot with a 75-65 win over Tri-County Regional, in which Hudson had 11 points and Merlino hit a three-pointer.

North Girls Roll By Cambridge, 49-21

The North Quincy girls' basketball team traveled to Cambridge last week and rolled over Cambridge Rindge and Latin, 49-21, to improve its record to 6-8.

Paul Bregoli's Raiderettes, who play at Waltham Friday at 5 o'clock, must win all six of its remaining games to qualify for the Eastern Mass. Tournament.

After a sluggish start, sophomore center Joanna Rugnetta converted an offensive rebound to give North an early lead. North continued to struggle offensively until senior tri-captain Paula Tolson hit a running layup and senior tri-captain Debbie Panaro hit a three-point play. Cambridge moved to within a point before Deirdre Murphy hit two free throws and a layup to give the Raiderettes an 11-6 lead after a quarter.

Tolson hit a baseline jumper to start the second quarter but Cambridge ran off six straight points to close to 13-12. Junior guard Christine Salton hit a wing jump shot and sophomore Kara Sullivan scored on an offensive rebound to break the run.

Kerry Tolson hit a baseline jumper and took a fine pass from Sullivan as the Raiderettes took a 21-14 lead at halftime.

North came out quickly in the third quarter as Murphy and Paula Tolson hit for four points each and North's defense kept Cambridge off the scoreboard until there was 2:30 left in the quarter. It was Cambridge's only basket of the second half.

The defense was led by senior guard Tricia Mitton, who got her first start of the year, and senior tri-captain Kellene Duffy. Karin Reister had a power move for a hoop and Duffy went coast-to-coast for a layup to give North a big 34-17 lead going into the final quarter.

Reister, Kerry Tolson and Sullivan hit three quick layups early in the fourth quarter and Murphy had four points. Junior guard Theresa Dwyer scored her first varsity basket and had three steals in the quarter.

Murphy had 12 points, eight rebounds and two blocked shots, Paula Tolson 10 points and five steals, Kerry Tolson seven points and five rebounds and Duffy seven assists and eight steals.

Quincy seconds were taken by Beth Weixler, hurdles, and Deanna DeSantis, shot put.

The meet was directed for long-time North coach Lou Tozzi.

Quincy Drops Pair But Looking Better

By TOM SULLIVAN

The Quincy boys' basketball team faced the top two teams in the Suburban League last week and, although the team lost both games, coach John Franceschi was pleased with the Presidents' performances.

Quincy (4-11) hosted North Quincy Tuesday, will play at Newton North Friday night at 7:30 and will be idle next Tuesday.

The Presidents, trailing league-leading Cambridge Rindge and Latin (14-1 and unbeaten in the league) by nine points with six minutes to play, lost, 68-51, last Friday.

Joe Russell had 14 points and six assists for Quincy, Jody Beauchamp had 12 points and 12 rebounds and Chris Noble had eight points and three steals.

Earlier in the week the Presidents trailed second-place Brockton by only five points late in the game but lost, 73-63.

Russell had 23 points and six assists for Quincy and Beauchamp had 16 points and 14 rebounds.

"I was very pleased with the way the boys played in both games," said Franceschini. "We were in both games until late in the final quarter and the kids just did a fine job against superior opponents.

"We haven't been blown out in any game and have lost four games by less than five points. We are shooting much better from the floor that we did last year, but our free throw showing has been our big weakness.

"Mike Perkins is having another terrific season. He is the number five scorer in the Suburban League and Jody Beauchamp has been a big plus for us and is number six in league scoring. (Beauchamp is playing his only season for Quincy after transferring from Madison Park High in Boston). Perkins leads in rebounding with Beauchamp second and Russell leads the team in assists. Noble is having an outstanding season on the boards and is scoring well.

"We have five games remaining and I feel we have a chance to win them all."

The Presidents, following the final league games against North Quincy, Newton North and Waltham, will finish up by playing Hingham and either Silver Lake or Stoughton in their own invitational tournament.

Cambridge Too Much For North

The North Quincy boys' basketball team faced Cambridge Rindge and Latin, undefeated in the Surburban League and 14-1 overall, last week and again found the visitors too strong as the Raiders absorbed an 82-46 defeat, dropping their record to 4-10.

Ted Stevenson's North team faced Quincy Tuesday night, will host Waltham Friday night at 7:30 and will be at Brookline next Tuesday at 5 o'clock.

Following their final league game against Brockton at home on Feb. 17, the Raiders will finish up against Hanover and either Norwell or Holbrook in their own invitational tournament Feb. 20 and 22.

Erik DeBoer had another big night for North against Cambridge as he scored 17 points, including five three-pointers. Kipp Caldwell, who has had a fine season, added 11 points and 10 rebounds.

"We just don't have the height or experience to cope with a team like Cambridge," said Stevenson. "The boys played their hearts out, but Cambridge is just an outstanding team that has everything.

"We should hold our own the rest of the season with a chance to win most of our remaining game."

—TOM SULLIVAN

Quincy Girls Lose Two

The Quincy girls' basketball team suffered two more defeats last week, dropping its record to 2-13.

Doug MacFarlane's First Ladies will host Newton North Friday at 5 o'clock and will be home to Abp. Williams next Tuesday at 5 o'clock.

Last Friday Cambridge Rindge and Latin scored the first 11 points of the game and went on to top Quincy, 56-47, avenging an earlier defeat.

Amy Baker and Maureen Shea had nine points each for the First Ladies, who were hurt by 30 turnovers.

Earlier in the week the Quincy girls lost to Brockton, 48-29, with Melanie Sullivan scoring 10 points and Chris Barrett taking down 13 rebounds and having three steals for the First Ladies.

North Has Work Cut Out To Make Tourney

The North Quincy hockey team, needing five wins in its last six games to qualify for the state tournament, got by its first two hurdles last week but faces a tough struggle trying to win three of the last four against the Suburban League's iron.

Kevin Jago's Raiders topped Quincy, 8-3, last Saturday after edging Cambridge Rindge and Latin, 3-2, earlier in the week.

North (8-6-1, 5-3 in the league) played at Newton North last night (Wednesday), will be idle Saturday and will play at Waltham next Wednesday at 8 o'clock. First place Brookline will be next Feb. 18 and second place Brockton will wind up the regular season Feb. 20.

Meanwhile, Quincy (1-14) played Brockton last night, will play at Cambridge Rindge and Latin Saturday at 4 o'clock and will face Brookline next Wednesday at 6:40 at the Quincy Youth Arena.

Seven different players scored for North against Quincy, with Sal Manganaro, one of the top scorers in the league, having two goals and Joe Fasano, Paul McGrath, Mark Kelleher, Brian Zimmerman, Bob Kane and Arthur Cangemi one each. Marty Feeney had three assists.

Tim Mann scored two goals and had an assist for Quincy and Eric Seamans a goal.

Steve Sugarman, continuing in the North goal in place of the injured Jeff McClory, had an excellent game and was given tremendous support by the defense.

"Tonight we played a good game and finished off our plays much better than we did against Cambridge," Jago said.

North out-shot Cambridge, 50-29, including a 21-5 edge in the final period, but barely squeaked by on Fasano's goal at 2:54 of the last period.

After Tom McCarthy had given Cambridge a 1-0 lead, Zimmerman tied it up with assists for Manganaro and Armando Mancini. The Raiders took a 2-1 lead with 32 seconds left in the period on a goal by Billy Lydon. Feeney and Mancini assisted.

Cambridge tied it late in the second period on Mark Clavette's unassisted goal.

Kane and Zimmerman assisted on Fasano's winning goal.

Sugarman had a good night in goal with 27 saves, and Cambridge's Brian Higgins was superb, stopping 47 of North's 50 shots.

A bright spot for Quincy was the performance of backup goalie Kevin Johnston, who relieved starter Craig Galligan.

The diminutive Johnston faced 34 of North's 63 shots and gave up only one goal.

"Kevin kept us in it," said coach Bob Sylvia. "That's the kind of goaltending he is capable of. Some kids can come off the bench and play well, while others might be rusty. Kevin obviously was sharp as a tack."

Quincy was shut out for the second game in a row, 6-0, by Newton North.

Squirt Bs Win In Overtime

Quincy's Squirt B hockey team, sponsored by Continental Cablevision and leading the Greater Boston League, pulled out a thrilling 2-1 overtime victory over Norwood last week at the Quincy Youth Arena in a state playdown game.

Norwood scored with only a minute and three seconds gone in the game when Matthew McCue jammed one in through a pileup at the Quincy net.

There followed nearly a half hour of scoreless, intensive play and an outstanding effort by both teams.

With only 19 seconds left in regulation time, Quincy pulled its goalie and Chris Grant scored off a fine pass from Capt. Jimmy Gallagher, who had picked up the puck from defenseman Eric Oliva at center ice.

At 49 seconds of sudden death overtime Grant came through again off assists from Jimmy Kelley and Gallagher.

Both goalies, Timmy Sheehan of Quincy and Chris Stark of Norwood turned in superlative performances.

Earlier Quincy had moved into first place in the league with a 5-4 win over Hyde Park, the first loss for the Parkers. Tommy Moriarty's goal with four seconds to play won the game for Quincy.

Paul Princiotto had a hat trick and Joshua Wingate the other goal. Jimmy Gallagher had three assists and John Manning, Shawn McTomney, Eric Oliva and Bruce Stenberg one each.

Outstanding backchecking by Robbie Pirelli, Billy Barron and Jimmy Kelley and fine defensive play by Oliva, Stenberg, John Ryan, Mike O'Brien and Joe Bracken keyed the win. Goalie Timmy Sheehan played an excellent game to record his 19th win.

With 35 seconds left in the game, Stenberg robbed Hyde Park of a clean breakaway, clearing the puck out of the Quincy zone and setting up Moriarty for the winning goal.

The Squirt B's will face Norwood tonight (Thursday) at 6:40 at the Quincy Youth Arena in a state playdown game.

Mite As Explode, 11-0

Quincy's Mite A hockey team, sponsored by DAV Post 79, exploded for an 11-0 victory over Somerville, keeping its hold on second place in the Greater Boston League.

The team will face Canton Saturday night at 6 o'clock at the Skating Club of Boston.

Goalie Brian Beaton was outstanding and was given strong support from the defense of Derek McTomney, Betsy Stone and Brian Degan.

Quincy scored seven goals in the second period and four in the third.

Robbie Winter had a hat trick, Eric Wood and John Barron two goals apiece and Scott Cooper, Billy Graney, Michael Ryan and John Bertucci one each. Chris DiMattia had four assists, Cooper and Eric Wood two each and Barron, Graney, Tim Wood, Jason Snaith, Michael Sullivan, Bertucci and Matt Langille one apiece.

Quincy Girls At Home Saturday

The Quincy Youth girls' hockey team will play a rare home game at the Quincy Youth Arena when it hosts the Assabet Valley senior B team Saturday morning at 11:40 in a state playdown game.

The Quincy girls stunned the R.I. midget team, 5-0, Sunday with Stephanie O'Sullivan and Heidi Maguire having a goal and assist each. Lisa Bent, Margaret McSharry and Jean Gill a goal apiece. Pauline Stehan two assists and Stehan Graham one. Goalie Melissa Marder recorded the shutout.

Saturday the girls tied Billerica, 2-2, with Nancy Craig scoring both goals and McSharry having an assist.

Earlier Quincy squandered a 5-2 lead and lost to Brockton, 6-5. O'Sullivan had a hat trick, two of the goals unassisted, and Craig and Janet Fennelly the other goals. Amy Bertrand and Craig had assists.

McCauley Concerned Over Methadone Clinic

of addicts in the city and what the program is all about.

In outlining the program, Mulligan said the clinic would not only dispense methadone but also give medical examinations, conduct urine testing and require the users to have counseling once a week.

Methadone is a synthetic drug used to wean heroin addicts.

As for the number of people who need the program in Quincy, Mulligan said there are 400 to 700 potential users.

McCauley said he was skeptical the number was that high.

"I have some serious concerns about the situation. Mr. Mulligan says, however, a memorandum of agreement would be drawn up that would protect the city," McCauley said.

"But I would not want to see is this area, the City of Quincy, become a magnet for people coming all over the general area. I think that if there have been problems in other communities, those communities should take care of the problems," he added.

Insurance For One-Day Licenses

Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro said that, while he was "not arguing with the proposal," he does not feel that the clubhouse should not be used for such functions.

Police Chief Francis Finn asked Spillane whether a requirement by the board that the Fore River Clubhouse purchase a liability policy, with the City of Quincy as co-insured, would satisfy the legal department.

Spillane said that, as a matter of public policy interest and public safety, the board should require more liability than the $100,000 which is required by the city.

Spillane and the board agreed that a $500,000 policy would be more helpful in the event of a lawsuit against the city stemming from the granting of the license or the serving of alcohol under the license.

City Clerk John Gillis said he would contact the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission as well as other cities in the Commonwealth, to discover how other communities are handling similar situations.

The hearing will continue on March 7.

Sheets Supports City Approval For Helicopters

Ward 4 Councillor James Sheets has introduced legislation that would require helicopter businesses to have city approval in order to operate in the city.

In a resolve introduced Monday night, Sheets said he wants the Quincy Planning Department, under the direction of Director Richard Meade, to prepare a zoning change subjecting the creation of a heliport in any and all zoning categories to a special permit by the City Council.

Sheets said the measure is needed since heliports are becoming more common in suburban areas and heliports, with their arriving and departing helicopters, create noise disturbances.

Draft Environmental Impact Report
Braintree-Weymouth Pumping Station and Interceptor Upgrade

DATE:	Thursday, February 23, 1989
Time:	7:30 PM
Place:	St. Boniface's Church Hall Corner of Palmer and Shed Street Quincy, MA

The purpose of this meeting will be to discuss the Draft Environmental Impact Report (DEIR) for the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) Braintree-Weymouth pump station and interceptor upgrade. The Braintree-Weymouth Pumping Station and Interceptor Upgrade involves the construction of a new pumping station adjacent to the existing Braintree-Weymouth Pumping Station and the conversion of the existing pumping station site to a salt water marsh area. The primary benefit of the proposed project is to eliminate surcharging thereby reducing wastewater overflows and sewerage systems backups which occur along the upper reaches of the interceptor during wet weather. Past overflows have resulted in the discharge of raw wastewater to the Fore River as well as roadways and homes in the area. Increased capacity will reduce the likelihood of poor water quality and related public health issues in the future.

All comments on the Draft EIR must be submitted in writing by March 13, 1989 to the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs, MEPA Unit, 100 Cambridge Street, Boston, MA 02202.

The Draft EIR is available for review in the main public libraries of Braintree, Hingham, Holbrook, Quincy, Randolph, Weymouth, Boston, and the State House.

For further information about this public meeting or the project, please contact Danny Johnson at 241-6057, ext. 1180.

Deputy Changes Mind

O'Connell Seeks Appointment As Fire Chief

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Deputy Fire Chief Paul E. O'Connell, who last June qualified for the position of fire chief but turned down the job, has notified Mayor Francis McCauley that he has changed his mind and wants to be considered for the position.

The job is presently being held by Thomas Gorman. Gorman was appointed acting chief by McCauley after O'Connell told the mayor he could not accept the job last summer.

After further consideration and much thought since his decision, O'Connell, 38, told McCauley he wants to be considered for the $55,445 position.

"I needed some time to think about it. After further investigating what the chief's job is really about, I was able to have a change of heart and I made the decision," O'Connell said Tuesday. He also said he needed to discuss the decision more with his family.

O'Connell, a 16-year veteran of the department, became a firefighter in June, 1973. He was promoted to lieutenant in September, 1978, captain in November of 1984 and deputy chief in January, 1987.

The chief's position became vacant last June 24 when former Fire Chief Carl Valenti announced he was retiring. O'Connell, the only candidate from within the department to pass a Civil Service chief's examination, told the mayor that although he felt he could do the job, he could not accept it.

As a result, McCauley offered the position to three deputies who took the exam but did not pass: Joseph Jackson, Francis O'Hare and Thomas Gorman.

Gorman, 50, the last deputy notified because of seniority, accepted. He is in the process of appealing his mark and a ruling could be announced within a month.

A lifelong Quincy resident, he is the son of the late Thomas F. Gorman who served as Quincy's fire chief from Nov. 7, 1947 until his retirement on July 1, 1967.

Gorman began his firefighting career in October of 1963 as a firefighter. He was promoted to lieutenant in June, 1973, captain in July, 1979 and became deputy in September, 1983.

On Tuesday, McCauley said he has called for the Civil Service list which presently has only O'Connell's name on it. "When that list comes down, I'm required to make an appointment and right now, O'Connell is the only one on it," the mayor said, adding that the list has not expired yet.

O'Connell pointed out that his exam mark of 96 out of 100 is one of the highest in the state and is good for two years. Furthermore, there are no plans in the near future to administer the Civil Service examination again because there are only three qualified applicants and a minimum of four are needed.

In explaining his decision, O'Connell said, "I had an option. I did turn the job

After Dry Winter

Serious Drought Feared This Summer

A dry winter and below average precipitation the past four years has forced MDC and MWRA officials to jointly seek a water emergency declaration for the communities served by the Quabbin Reservoir, which includes Quincy.

The reservoir, which provides water to 2.5 million people in 44 communities including Quincy, Boston, Canton and Milton, has dropped to its lowest level in 16 years because of a lack of rain and snow this winter.

According to Chris Phillips, a spokesman for state Environmental Affairs Secretary John DeVillars, a lack of snow has state officials concerned that the spring runoff that usually replenishes the Quabbin's water level will not be of any significance this year.

Officials from the Metropolitan District Commission which supplies the water asked for the declaration Feb. 9. The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority, which distributes the water supply, was scheduled to vote on the recommendation yesterday (Wednesday).

The Department of Environmental Quality Engineering, which has the final say, will decide by late March or early April whether to declare the emergency. If the DEQE approves the recommendation, communities would have 30 days to submit plans for voluntary conservation.

If the emergency is declared, it would be the first among the Quabbin communities in 24 years.

According to Ilyas Bhatti, the MDC's director of watershed management, four years of below-average precipitation have left the Quabbin communities in a near-drought situation.

"The deficit in rainfall was not very dramatic, but it has a cumulative effect," Bhatti said.

Since July, the Quabbin water level has dropped from 78 to 68 percent capacity.

The system is currently on the edge of a drought warning, one step before a drought emergency, said Pat Baker, a spokesman for the MWRA.

"We are not there yet, but we're lower than we have been. What we were hoping for was a really wet winter. It hasn't done that.

"Even if we get good normal wet weather for the rest of the winter, it won't make up for dryness that we've had," Baker said.

The fact that the MDC and MWRA are seeking the declaration so soon is an indication that the water supply situation could become serious this summer, said David Colton, Quincy's deputy commissioner of Public Works.

"They say it could get bad this summer. The Quabbin level is down and there's no way to get it up in sight. They're projecting drought conditions by summer if we don't get significant rainfall," Colton said.

"It's a situation that could become serious. There's reason to believe we're heading for a serious drought this summer," he added.

According to Bhatti, if the declaration is approved by the DEQE, the MDC and MWRA would have the power to require member

774 New Telephone Exchange

New England Telephone recently activated a new exchange code in Quincy to keep up with the area's growing telecommunications needs.

The new central office code--the first three numbers of seven-digit telephone numbers--will be 774.

The code becomes the 10th exchange in Quincy. The others are: 328, 471, 472, 479, 770, 773, 786, 847 and 984.

"Quincy continues to grow and our network expansion is keeping pace with it," said Carolyn McKeon, NET area public relations manager.

"There are 9,999 possible number combinations in one code," McKeon explained. "When the number of telephone line requests in Quincy begins to approach the amount of available telephone numbers, it's standard procedure to provide a new central office code."

Radon Kits At Health Center

Quincy residents interested in having their homes tested for the presence of radon gas can purchase one or two radon test kits now through March 31 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Quincy Health Department, 1120 Hancock St., Quincy.

Kits are offered at a low cost from Niton Corp. of Lexington if distributed through the Health Department for homeowners/dwellers.

The Niton Corp. has an approved E.P.A. on-site laboratroy which analyzes radon levels in homes within a minimal amount of time. An explanation of what the results mean along with literature from the E.P.A. will be mailed to all participants.

Homeowners receiving notice of high levels will be advised to conduct a second screening. If the results remain the same and the levels require remediation, a referral to Radon Remediation Companies listed with the State Department of Public Health will be offered through the Health Department's Housing Inspectors, Paul Barry and Michael Shaheen.

The Health Department recommends purchase of the test kit cannisters which contain thorough instructions, at a cost of $8.50 for one test kit or $16.25 for double test kits.

Checks must be made payable to Nitron Corp.

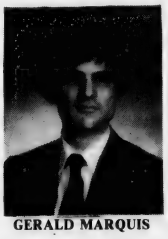
Marquis Vice-Chairman, McIntosh Secretary

Buckley Hospital Board First Woman Chairman

Gertrude "Trudy" Buckley, community activist, has been elected chairman of the Quincy City Hospital Board of Managers—the first woman to hold that post in the hospital's 99-year history.

The hospital will open a new $60 million healthcare facility this fall and observe its centennial in 1990.

Gerald P. Marquis was elected vice chairman and David B. MacIntosh, secretary of the nine-member hospital board.



For more than a quarter century until her retirement in 1978, Buckley worked in the financial services industry. She began her business career as a secretary-receptionist for E.F. Hutton before becoming a registered representative buying and selling securities for Weeden and Co. She was one of the first women equity traders in Boston. She retired after 27 years with Weeden. Today, Buckley remains active in the Boston Security Traders Association, to which she was the first woman admitted in the 1950s.

"In those days, it was difficult. Women didn't have it easy coming up the ladder," she recalls. "I was very well-received, but it wasn't easy."

She survived by what she terms "street smarts," helped by adult education courses offered by the Quincy schools,

TRUDY BUCKLEY

GERALD MARQUIS

DAVID MacINTOSH

as well as studies at Quincy Junior College and Harvard University's Lifelong Learning Program.

Buckley has been active in a wide variety of community efforts during more than three decades of service to Quincy. Appointed by former Mayor Walter Hannon as a member of the Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women at its inception in 1974, she chaired the group in 1976-77. A commission task force, formed during Buckley's tenure as chairwoman, led to the establishment of a home for abused and battered women in Quincy and the founding of the advocacy group DOVE in 1978.

Buckley also serves on the board of the Quincy Council on Aging. In addition, she is the elected representative to the Massachusetts Silver-Haired Legislature for the Second Norfolk District.

Buckley was also part of a small but dedicated group of 52 people that founded the Quincy chapter of the American Association of Retired Persons in 1986. The group has grown to 450 members in just two and a half years. Buckley continues to serve as a Quincy AARP director. A Scholarship Fund she heads for the organization is currently raising money for seniors at Quincy and North Quincy High Schools who are interested in becoming registered nurses.

Buckley has been a warden in city elections for more than two decades and was a member of the planning committee that helped raise funds to establish St. Boniface's Church nearly 30 years ago.

She is a member and past president of the Strikers' Bowling League and in 1981 ran in Boston's famed 10-kilometer Bonne Bell Road Race for women- and finished! Buckley also worked closely with the Quincy-South Shore Cultural Arts Commission. When free time allows, she enjoys walking for fitness and traveling.

She and her husband, Thomas, recently toured Europe; visiting London, the Scandinavian countries, and the Soviet Union.

A Boston native, Buckley has lived in the Germantown neighborhood of Quincy for 33 years. She and her husband have two children.

"Each evening at the dinner table, I would tell my family about the most interesting story or transaction of that day," Buckley said. "My enthusiasm seems to have had a favorable impact. I believe that's how my children became interested in the investment business."

Thomas Buckley III is a corporate senior vice president and manager of institutional sales for a major investment firm. He has been a member and past president of the Board of Governors of the Boston Stock Exchange. Daughter Deborah Elaine holds an undergraduate degree from Stonehill College and an MBA from Boston College, where she is immediate past president of the alumni association. she is also a vice president for institutional sales at a major Boston-area investment firm.

A granddaughter, Michele, is a student at the Derby Academy in Hingham. The ten year old daughter of Thomas III and Beverly Buckley, was born at Quincy City Hospital on Trudy Buckley's birthday a decade ago. Last year, Michele was among 25 South Shore athletes chosen to compete in a national figure-skating competition in Dallas. The talented youngster led the team in awards won, garnering six medals and a ribbon.

Marquis was first appointed to the board in 1983. He previously served as chairman.

Marquis, a professional land use planner with Arrow Development Corporation, a firm involved in real estate analysis and development. A Quincy resident for 11 years, he served as a planner for the city in the mid to late 1970s.

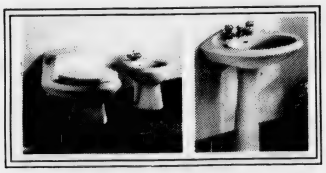
Marquis and his wife, June, have two sons, ages 8 and 10. They live in Squantum.

MacIntosh was appointed to his third five year term on the board last year by Mayor Francis McCauley.

Since he was first appointed to the board in 1977, he has held other elective positions, including chairman and vice chairman.

Formerly the purchasing manager for Armstrong World Industries in Braintree, MacIntosh retired in 1980 after 35 years with the firm.

In addition to his involvement with Quincy City Hospital, MacIntosh serves in an advisory capacity at South Shore Cooperative Bank in Weymouth, where he is both chairman of the Board of Directors and a member of the bank's Real Estate Security Committee.



A 1937 graduate of Harvard University, MacIntosh is the regional director of the Harvard Alumni Association for southeastern New England. He is also a member of the Harvard Varsity Club and past president of the Harvard Club of Quincy.

MacIntosh, a lifelong resident of Quincy, and his wife of 47 years, Helen, have three children and five grandchildren. Helen MacIntosh is an active member and former president of the hospital's Auxiliary.

McGrath Asks Lease Renewal For Beechwood Without Emergency Clause

Councillor and mayoral candidate Stephen McGrath has called upon the Quincy School Committee to renew the lease of the Beechwood Community Life Center at the Beechwood Knoll School, without the proposed requirement of a 30-day notice for eviction.

"The proposal to make the Beechwood Community Center subject to a 30-day notice requirement to potentially be evicted from the building will threaten program funding for the Center," McGrath said.

"I feel that as I had played some part in the original location of the center at the site, that I would be remiss in not speaking out against the proposal to possibly evict the excellent programs at this building with only a 30-day notice to vacate," he said.

"I have spoken with the director of the center, Betty Southwick, who assures me that in the event of an emergency the Beechwood Center would cooperate fully to help deal with any situation regarding the relocation of students.

"I feel that the proposed action, which I view as unnecessary, would jeopardize the fine educational, recreational and after school day-care programs in existence at Beechwood," McGrath said.

DeCristofaro Requests Rte 3-A Traffic Study

Ward 2 Councillor Theodore DeCristofaro has asked the stte commissioner of Public Works to conduct a traffic study on Route 3A in Quincy.

Specifically, DeCristofaro requested Public Works Commissioner Jane F. Garvey adopt the following recommendations:

- Side streets having stop lights must have in-raod sensors for light changes.
- Pedestrian lights must be able to override traffic lights (many seniors in area).
- New lights on either side of Fire Station (to be blinking yellow; but be able to control from Fire Station when needed.)

O'Connell Makes Four Demands On Levy

Mayoral candidate Peter O'Connell says the announcement by the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority of increased water and sewer rates for Quincy residents "adds insult to injury" following the decision to locate a permanent sludge plant in the city.

"The announcement by Mr. Levy is both insensitive and unfair," O'Connell said. "Quincy should be compensated for this unjust burden. No other community is being exploited to the extent of Quincy by the MWRA to solve regional issues to benefit other communities."

"We must have a concerted effort by all public officials of good will to speak out with one voice in the best interest of our citizens. Mr. Levy must understand that Quincy will no longer be exploited and we demand compensation now."

O'Connell also listed four demands for Levy:

- "We demand control of the balance of the shipyard property so that we will not be further exploited to solve more regional problems.
- "We demand jobs preferences for Quincy residents.
- "We demand compensation for lost revenue from our tax base.
- We demand the elimination of these latest water and sewer tax increases.

"Every day that passes without action makes it easier for the MWRA to anchor itself in our community. Leadership is needed now.

"I will offer my services to the (Francis McCauley) administration and to the people of Quincy in order to demand results from the MWRA."

Primary, High School Education Must Be Improved First

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The newly appointed chairman of the Massachusetts Board of Regents, Paul Tsongas, recently said that less politics and more cooperation was needed to improve the state's public higher educational institutions. "What we are seeking to do is to establish," said Tsongas,"...the best public higher education system in the country by the year 2000." Tsongas spoke of bringing the business community into play by appealing to "enlightened self-interest."

However, before Massachusetts can have the best public colleges and universities, the state better help the cities and towns improve public education at the primary and high school levels. Colleges and universities are useless without the educational continuum in play from Day One of Grade One.

President Jack Kennedy once said, "The course of civilization is a race between catastrophe and education." Kennedy was right when he said that back in the sixties and we must continue to make sure education wins for our generation's children. Rep. Steve Tobin in his successful state rep race last year asked will our children be prepared to face the challenges of the 21st century. Said Tobin, "Will they have received the very best education possible? If the answer is no, then we have failed in our task."

Recently, Lt. Governor Evelyn Murphy has been touting her Blueprint 2000 proposal but the real Blueprint 2000 should be focused on public educational goals from Grade One to Grad School. Can Tsongas set into motion plans to improve public higher education without cities and towns improving their individual public school systems?

As we move closer and closer to the 21st century we need a complete public education system geared to the future and not welded to the past. The world is moving too fast out there and if we don't improve public education, today's school children will be out of the educational race before they even leave the starting gate.

Some Good Mayoral Races

With four major candidates already off and running, this year's mayoral race is shaping up as one of the best in the city's history.

And there have been some pretty good ones since Quincy became a city 100 years ago.

Former Mayor Joseph LaRaia, Councillors Steve McGrath and James Sheets and businessman Peter O'Connell have generated more political excitement than has been seen in sometime.

Two others, William Jensen, an assistant building manager and Jack Isbister, a meat cutter, indicated they will run.

That would make it a six-candidate field but the latter two would not be considered major contenders.

LaRAIA

Six sounds like a lot of candidates. But there were six once before.

TOBIN

That was 1977 when incumbent Joe LaRaia – after a turbulent two years was challenged by Arthur Tobin, Thomas Barron, Leo Hannon, George Tull and Thomas McHugh.

The handwriting was on the wall for LaRaia in that preliminary. Tobin topped him 12,216 to 7,411. Tobin went on to win the final 19,096 to 14,046 – a 5,050 vote margin.

THERE CERTAINLY has been no shortage of mayoral candidates down through the years. There have been 16 two-candidate matchups, 20 three-candidate contests, 16 four-candidate fields, and five five-candidate contests besides the two six mentioned.

McCAULEY

ONLY TWO MAYORS, have been given free rides to re-election: Thomas Burgin in 1940 and Francis McCauley in 1983.

BURGIN

WHEN YOU THINK of close mayoral races, the Joseph LaRaia-Walter Hannon blood battle of 1975 usually comes to mind.

HANNON

There were four candidates that year. The other two were Grace Saphir and Michael Jovanovic.

Incumbent Hannon (10,403 votes) and LaRaia (8,492) were nominated and there didn't seem to be anything like an upset in the works.

In the final election, the verdict went to Hannon by a scant 134 votes. But a recount turned that around with LaRaia the ultimate winner by 483 votes.

TWO YEARS AGO, it was a close one between incumbent Francis McCauley and challenger LaRaia with McCauley winning it by 460 votes.

BUT THERE HAVE been some closer Mayoral elections than that.

In 1894, William Hodges defeated Stephen Moxon by 28 votes.

The following year (mayoral races were held annually back then and until 1916) Charles Francis Adams, direct descendant of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams defeated Charles Hammond by 179 votes.

Adams and Hammond were at it again the following year with Adams winning by 245 votes this time.

In 1898, Harrison Keith edged Russell Sears by 45 votes. Incidentally, in that election third candidate Henry Faxon got exactly one vote.

IN 1929 AND 1940 there was no preliminary election for any office. There weren't enough candidates for mayor, City Council and School Committee to hold one.

THERE HAVE BEEN some good political rivalries down through the years but perhaps the best of them all was between Thomas McGrath and Charles Ross.

They ran against one another eight times -- four preliminary and four final elections.

Ross topped McGrath in three of the preliminaries but he and McGrath broke even in the final elections each winning two.

T. McGRATH

ROSS LEFT OFFICE in 1935 and Thomas Burgin defeated Leo Mullin in a special election to succeed him.

The following year, McGrath made his last run for mayor, challenging Burgin but was walloped 15,605 to 4,808 votes.

ROSS

ROSS HOWEVER came back to run four more times. He lost against Burgin 15,962 to 9,416 in 1938. Four years later, after Burgin had entered the Navy, Ross defeated Myron Lane, 11,265 to 9,846. Lane, incidentally, went on to become Norfolk County District Attorney.

Ross defeated Joseph Kendrick 15,369 to 9,088. Ross, in his final run, turned back Russell Bates 14,830 to 12,021.

PLAN E CAME in with the election of 1949 with a city manager the city's chief executive. There were no more mayoral races until 1957 when Amelio Della Chiesa defeated former City Council President Laurence Curtin 14,953 to 11,615 as Plan A returned.

DELLA CHIESA

ROSS HOLDS TWO mayoral records. He ran the most often: eight times. Winning five and losing three. He served nine years -- the longest of any Plan A mayor in the city's history.

DELLA CHIESA served as mayor the longest: 12 years -- eight under Plan A and four under Plan E.

A Plan E mayor was similar to a City Council president, being elected by the council and not the people. His main function was to preside over the City Council, to cut ribbons and welcome dignitaries to the city.

McGRATH, for the record, ran five times, winning two and losing three.

Incidentally, Steve McGrath, one of this year's contenders, is no relation.

MWRA Can't Get Control Of Squantum Land, Says Geary

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

During a recent visit to The Quincy Sun, MDC Commissioner William Geary explained his agency's reasoning behind a land acquisition deal in Squantum, stating the MDC had to act quickly to guarantee the land be set aside for park use.

Geary, who recently announced that this is his last year as commissioner, explained the land acquisition deal and also commented on several other topics during a visit to The Sun and Sun Ch. 26.

He was questioned by Sun Editor and Publisher Henry Bosworth, Assistant Editor Robert Bosworth, and Paul Gagnon of radio station WJDA.

During the interview, Geary, a Quincy resident who has been commissioner since 1983, said the state's fiscal crisis is forcing the commission to curtail some MDC programs, including police presence along Quincy Shore Drive and Wollaston Beach.

He also discussed the MDC's plans to acquire the site of the old Quincy Lumber Yard along Route 3A as open space, his accomplishments as commissioner and the reason for his stepping down.

Geary was most vocal about the recent announcement that the MDC, with fiscal aid from the MWRA, is trying to acquire 45 acres of land in Squantum located near the Jordan Marsh warehouse. On Monday, Jan. 9, Geary, along with Gov. Michael Dukakis, announced that the MDC would take the land and convert the property into a waterfront park.

The MDC plans to purchase 10 of the 45 acres shortly with $3.2 million from the MWRA. Geary said the commission would acquire the other 35 acres with $6.5 million of its own money July 1.

The land is presently owned by Boston Edison. Geary said the MDC will likely take the land by eminent domain.

For supplying the initial

revenue, the MWRA will get temporary use of three of the 10 acres for the Boston Harbor Cleanup project.

The Authority will construct a ferry terminal consisting of a pier and parking lot on the site. It will be used as a point of departure for roughly 600 to 800 workers who will board boats to Deer Island. The MWRA will build a reginal sewage treatment plant on the island in the 1990s.

The announcement was criticized by several city councillors, including Ward 6 Councillor Thomas Nutley who has called for a public hearing on the deal. Nutley and other councillors said they were upset because they were not informed of the deal.

At The Sun office Geary said the deal was not a secret and in fact was the subject of many public hearings attended by several councillors.

"One would have not been following what we were doing very closely if they were to say our move was a surprise," Geary said.

"Now, what may have been a surprise was that we were going to use MWRA money but my understanding is that the prospect of the MWRA buying that land was not a secret either.

"I found out about it by reading the paper here in Quincy," he added.

In explaining the deal, Geary said the MDC had to act fast with the help of the MWRA because if it hadn't, perhaps the MWRA might have "cajoled" the Edison owners into selling the property to them.

If that scenario had occurred, the MDC would have lost out on protecting the land as open sapce, he said.

"I was determined that this particular acquisition was so critical to the future of open space and access to Boston Harbor, and particularly for my hometown, I was not going to let that become MWRA land.

"It was a good move and we had to move boldly and decisively. I felt that if we did not move rapidly then, there was a danger that (the land) would be lost," Geary added.

As for the criticism from the City Council, Geary responded, "if the members of the Council got late notice, for that I apologize.

"For seizing the opportunity, I don't apologize. I think it was the right thing to do."

Plans for the waterfront park include landscaping, trees, benches, picnic tables, a pier to accomodate recreational vehicles and perhaps a maked off public fishing area.

Geary called the MWRA's financial assistance an "advantage" since the Authority is "willing to put up the money."

He also emphasized that although it is the MWRA's money, the MDC still retains the sole right of ownership and therefore determines what the land will be used for.

"The minute they make a deposit into (the Metropolitan Parks Trust Fund), they are our funds which can be expended only for legitimate park purposes. As a donor, they can make some requests which they're making for the construction of a parking lot and pier," Geary explained.

"When we take that land, probably by eminent domain, we will use a token amount of our own money to give double protection that the minute that land is bought by us, it's MDC park land, it can only be used as MDC park land that cannot be diverted for any other purpose.

"It can't become anything other than what is supportive of park land," he added.

In answer to a question, Geary said there was "no fine orint" in the agreement by which the MWRA could wind up with control of the Squantum land.

As a further precaution, Geary pointed out that the MWRA could become the owners of the Squantum site only through legislation approved by two thirds of the Massachusetts House and Senate.

"The likelihood of that happening is nill," he said, adding that the Quincy delegation would be strong enough to stop it if that bill were ever filed.

As for the impact on area traffic when the MWRA's parking lot and pier are constructed, Geary said it would be "manageable. It's not going to be a great volume of cars."

Above all, Geary said the land acquisition will ensure residents that the land is spared from commercial development such as a power plant, sludge or pumping station, more tall buildings or a warehouse.

"What we want to see is that beautiful place accessible to our families for the future," he said.

In discussing the state's fiscal crisis effect on the MDC, Geary said "it's very possible that some of the MDC's programs will be curtailed."

Geary, who pointed out that nearly $2 million was cut from the police budget and another $1 million was slashed from the park system this fiscal year, said the agency will experience more budget cuts for fiscal 1990.

"It's going to require us to curtail hours at a number of skating rinks (including Shea rink in West Quincy), and it's going to require us to reduce or eliminate some target police patrols, including Wollaston Beach and Quincy Shore Drive." Geary noted the patrols have been "very successful in reducing

13,000 On Strike At Shipyard

Feb. 17-22 1960 29 Years Ago

A strike of some 13,000 workers at the Bethlehem Steel Co.'s Fore River Shipyard entered its third week with Quincy and the South Shore Beginning to feel the pinch of the loss of a $2 million weekly payroll.

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa asked the state to reimburse Quincy for its share of money paid to veterans during the strike payments which amounted to 15,696 between Feb. 5 and Feb. 17.

The Shipbuilding Workers Union informed the U.S. Navy it would not permit its members to do any work whatsoever on the $35 million cruiser Springfield, which was 95 percent completed at the Yard.

The Navy had asked the union for its help in moving the missile cruiser from Fore River to the Boston Navy Yard for completion.

Noodles A La Different

Even when guests are dining at our home, they reveal to us their favorite recipes. And so it was last week-end when our daughter invited her boyfriend's parents for dinner.

both husband and wife enthusiastically gave us a few of their favorites which I must admit were new to me. So today one of their favorites will be shared with you. Here is a recipe from Alma and Arthur.

NOODLES A LA DIFFERENT
1 Lb. egg noodles (any size) five or six hot dogs mustard mayonaise
butter, cheese and milk.

Cook noodles adding the milk, butter and cheese. Place in a casserole dish. Cut up the hot dogs and cover with mustard and a little mayonnaise. Place on the top of the noodles. Bake in a 350 degree oven uncovered for about 30 minutes. If you prefer to cook the hot dogs first, then the baking time will be less.

Marie D'Olimpio is the author of "Simply Italian-And Then Some," a collection of her own recipes. Copies of the book are available at That's Italian, Franklin St., South Quincy; Previte's Market, Sumner St., Quincy Point , Samoset Pharmacy, Samoset Ave., Merrymount and Winfield Gift Emporium, Hancock St., Quincy Center.

QHS, Vo-Tech Evaluation Details Before School Committee

This week, the School Committee will hear details of the Philosophy and School Community reports from a joint accreditation committee evaluating Quincy Vocational Technical and Quincy High Schools.

Charles Baillargeon, Assistant Director and Co-Chairman of the Accredition Committee, said there are no surprises in either report, although he admitted that the philosophy statement of both schools was modified to recognize the changing demographics of Quincy, particularly the influx of Asians.

The two schools are conducting a year long self study and will make a report to the New England Association of Schools and Colleges which has jurisdiction to issue accreditions to schools throughout Massachusetts.

The philosophy report has wide acceptance from faculty, administrators and members of the community.

"This philosophy will become the corner stone to be used by all other committees as they conduct self evaluations of educational programs during the coming year," explained Dr. Patrick Crozier, a member of the Philosophy Commitee.

While the accreditation team was reluctant to make public any details of the report prior to a presentation before the School Committee, Crozier did say that the proposed philosophy reflected changing technology, changes in student population and the emphasis on computers in today's society. The last statement of philosophy was authored ten years ago, Crozier said, adding "the new report eliminates the trendy jargon of a decade ago!"

The School Community report focuses on changing demographics, declining enrollments, the influx of Asians, the growth of industry and the increase of construction. The report also describes the student body to be served, so that other committees can determine if programs are pertinent to that constitutency.

Joseph Mazzarella, Director of Quincy Vocational Technical School, was expected to appear before the School Committee Wednesday with Quincy High Principal Lloyd Hill to describe both reports.

"We are very impressed with the level of cooperation between both facilities and between both faculties," Mazzarella said.

Denis Tardo Candidate For Councillor At-Large

Denis F. Tardo of Merrymount announces his candidacy for Quincy City Councillor-At-Large.

Tardo, president of the Quincy Tenant Organization, said that, if elected, he would fight for a reorganization of the Board of Directors of the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority.

He said he would "appeal to our legislation delegation to ammend Chapter 372 Section 3B of the General Laws (Acts of 1984) to eliminate the necessity of the approval of the Governor for appointment to the Board of Directors."

Other issues Tardo addressed included affordable housing, city development, and drug free neighborhoods.

The text of Tardo's official announcement is as follows:

"Last year at about this time I was considering a run for public office. At that time, the City of Quincy was without full representation at the state house. Development was rampant. The MWRA, armed with staging area and sludge treatment plant proposals, was preparing to invade our city.

"The shipbuilders were struggling to return shipbuilding to Quincy. Affordable housing was a phrase hardly definable to the satisfaction of the public officials. Drugs were creeping into our community threatening the health, education and general future of our children and families.

"Today we search for housing that is within the budget of the common man, woman or family.

"Today we pray for safe drug free neighborhoods where our children have a greater relationship with God and family.

"Today the profiteers still pressure the city officials to approve unrealistic development in the name of growth.

"Today many of the shipbuilders have gone the way many clamdiggers have gone before them, forced into unplanned and poorly financed retirement.

"Today the MWRA has encircled our city hoping to encounter discouraged citizens with heads bowed waving white flags of surrender while they tell the world they are good neighbors.

"Denis Tardo will never bow his head and surrender to the MWRA. Nor will I bury my head in the sand and deny the solutions to the problems that strain the enjoyment and quality of our lives.

"As a community activist I understand the frustration of our civic groups and organizations. Collectively we must take a stand. We must elect conscientious councilors that are willing to stand toe to toe with the "big boys" and demand the will of the people.

DENIS TARDO

"Today I am proud to say that I do represent the will of the people. Today I am pleased to announce that I will actively seek the office of Councilor At Large.

By now, everyone has seen the picture of the executive director of the MWRA with a smile on his face while sniffing a plate of fertilizer pellets. Well, I want to see that smile on his face on a 90 degree day as gentle ocean breezes are softly caressing the barges of raw sewerage and sludge and the fragrant aroma travels through the open window of his office located at the plant.

"For an agency that is allegedly doing such a great job, why do they need public relation people to shield them from the press? Are they above public scrunity? I don't think so. I believe the people making the decisions, should answer the questions.

"The need for reorganization of the board of directors was recently made clear when the board member from Quincy made a motion and the other board members refused to second the motion, denying the possibility of debate. Forcing the executive director's decisions upon us without debate is a dictatorship.

"I appeal to our legislative delegation to ammend Chapter 327 Section 3B of the General Laws (Acts of 1984) to eliminate the necessity of the approval of the governor for appointment to the board of directors. Also, because of the enormous impact of the MWRA on our city, we must force the addition of two more board members from the City of Quincy. One appointed by the city council and one appointed by a coalition of community groups.

"Recently, the good people of Quincy petitioned the city council to address the issue of unconscionable development of our historic city. As a result a compromise of the building and zoning laws were a reality.

"Areas of the city were defined and clearly zoned to address the needs of each section of the city. Under no circumstances were buildings to exceed six stories and a specified density was outlined.

Now, I recognize the need for so called downtown revitalization, however, I believe we must accomplish our goal without easing the building code.

"First, we must stop charging shoppers to park their cars. Millions of dollars are spent at shopping malls daily and I don't know of a single one that charges customers to park. Nor do I know of one that has buildings 10 stories high.

"To revitalize any section of our city we must demand that abandoned and derelict property be improved to conform with public safety rules and regulations.

"Affordable housing has become the slogan of the times, but what does it take to provide this truly necessary commodity? It takes courage.

"Courage to speak distinctively of the one solution that directly assists the tenant and first time home buyer. In essence, assists everyday working people who simply seek decent housing.

"To accomplish the task of creating affordable housing we don't need to increase taxes, fines or fees. What we must do is implement laws that limit the profit of residential property investors who seek commercial benefits.

"We need to slow the growth of the condo craze. We need to refuse tax abatements to the developers who have overbuilt complexes and have overpriced the units to ensure enormous profits.

"We must change from homeless people and vacant condos to affordable houses and homebodies!

"Our homes must be secure and our neighborhoods must be safe. The escalation of drug use and related crimes is not acceptable to the quality of life standards we have set for ourselves and our families.

"We need to feel secure walking the streets of our neighborhoods. We need to know that the senior members of our community are comfortable with the precautions we will implement to ensure the personal safety of each and every one of us.

"The City of Quincy must join forces with other great cities of this country and call for the elimination of assault weapons on our streets.

"As a candidate for Councilor At-Large, I look forward to addressing the issues of today and tomorrow. I am proud to say I have taken an active role in the community for many years. I am involved because, I care.

DeCristofaro To Seek Fifth Term In Ward 2

Ward 2 Councillor, Ted DeCristofaro, announces his intention to seek re-election to a fifth term.

His formal announcement will come at a campaign reception to be held at the Fore River Clubhouse on April 22, 1989.

DeCristofaro presently chairs the Council's Public Works and Park and Recreation Committees. He has served as Ward 2 Councillor since 1982.

An early opponent of the siting of a sludge plant at General Dynamics, DeCristofaro pledged to continue his efforts to explore every avenue available to defeat the proposal of the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority.

"It simply is not fair, said DeCristofaro, for the residents of Ward 2 to bear all the burden of cleaning up Boston Harbor...especially when there are other more appropriate solutions to the problem."

DeCristofaro is a life-long resident of Quincy Point. He is a graduate of Quincy schools and is married to the former Betty Petzoldt.

Prior to his election to public office, DeCristofaro was known for his community involvement. He is a co-founder of the Ward 2 Civic Association and the recipient of many community awards. His attendance at zoning and licensing board hearings reflects his view that a councillor's job extends far beyond the council chamber. DeCristofaro said, "As a ward councillor, you must be available to your constituents nearly all of the time. Remedying the everyday problems people face when dealing with a city administration is a large part of my job, and making sure the views of a particular neighborhood are properly understood by those who sit on our local boards is a responsibility I take very seriously."

DeCristofaro noted that during his term, he has been successful in establishing the Ward 2 Community Center at the Fore River Clubhouse which provides information and services to all the residents of Ward 2. He was further able to obtain a new pumper engine at the Quincy Point Fire Station.

As chairman of the Park and Recreation Committee, he obtained funds for refurbishing Faxon Park, as well as the Pollard, Fore River, Pond St. and Elm St. playgrounds.

DeCristofaro noted he fought to increase the number of police and firefighters and for the stationing of a permanent foot patrol on Washington Street to patrol local businesses. Recently, he filed an ordinance which imposes a substantial penalty for the illegal dumping of infectious or hazardous waste material within the city limits.

"The coming two years will bring great challenges and some changes to the Ward and its neighborhoods," DeCristofaro said. Perhaps now, more than ever, we need a Councillor who knows this Ward, its people, their problems and their preferences."

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Valentine's Day is for children, lovers and romantics. Well, essentially, yes, but when it comes to affairs of the heart, everyone is included.

Valentines need not be expensive. A happy note written in your own handwriting ... a telephone call to someone who might not otherwise receive a call.

Some people find it hard to say "I love you," but on Valentine's Day they express that sentiment with special remembrances or gifts. It is also a day that "mushy" sentiments on brightly colored paper are not really taken seriously (i.e. Valentines exchanged by children at school). There, the important thing is the number of valentines received, not the sentiment. As people mature, the sentiment becomes more important than the number.

It takes only a little time to send a valentine, or a note, or to make a telephone call to someone, especially someone who is a little "out of circulation" these days. A little surprise gift will make that someone feel special, and you'll feel good too!

MWRA Can't Get Control Of Squantum Land, Says Geary

fatalities and reducing rowdyism that had afflicted the beach for so long which has essentially been eliminated because of our target police patrol."

The intensive enforcement program set up along Quincy Shore Drive to reduce the number of speeding motorists has been one of the hallmarks of Geary's term.

Implemented with police presence, signage, recycling traffic lights, high sodium vapor lights and new street markings, the program has greatly reduced the number of accidents along that route, Geary said.

Since it began five years ago, there have been no fatal accidents, he noted.

The program has also served as a model, being implemented along other major roadways, especially in the North Shore.

"It's made a significant difference in virtually every place we implemented that program," Geary said.

The program slows down a motorists commute by about five minutes. For the most part, there has been very minimal commuter discontent he said.

Another proud achievement Geary will look back on is the MDC's beautification effort throughout the entire Metroparks system. This too has been a model for other projects throughout the state.

"That had a symbolic signifigance in terms of the public appreciating their public spaces with more sensitivity," he said.

Another accomplishment Geary pointed out was the MDC's open space program, which has acquired land at the Quincy Quarries, along the Neponset River and more recently, in Squantum.

The MDC could also acquire another parcel of Quincy land in the near future: the site of the former Quincy Lumber Yard along route 3A.

"We're looking very seriously at that and I'm hoping before I leave office to make some announcements on that," Geary said.

Geary originally had hoped to put forth an open space plan which could be implemented in three to five years. But with the state fiscal crisis, he said, "I will be coming back and putting forth a plan that I could see being implemented in five to eight years.

"I think it's important for the public to know what we plan to acquire land so that they could be supportive of that. The Quincy Lumber Yard site is still one of those parcels being considered," he said.

As for his decision to step down as commissioner, Geary described the position as "high pressured, a seven days a week, 24 hours a day job."

Now in his sixty year, he is the longest serving commissioner in the last 38 years. Moreover, prior to his appointement in 1983, there had been 10 commissioners in eight years.

"Most of all, I thought it was time for me to spend more time with my family which you really can't do in this job. It's time to spend more time with my family."

He also felt the time is right for him to step out of public service for a while.

"I've been in public service between 13 and 15 years and I think there comes a point in time when public officials ought to step out of government services for a period of time to recharge the batteries, get a little distance from government service and get a different perspective on life," he said.

In ruling out any run for public office in the near future, Geary said he has had a lot of job offers, including positions with banks, law firms, advertising agencies, public relations firms and government agencies.

"I really have to sit down and think through each one of these opportunities. I'd like to do something that is beneficial to the community."

Marcia Olinto Candidate For Ward 1 Council Seat

Marcia Olinto, a lifelong resident of Houghs Neck, will formally announce her candidacy for Ward 1 City Councillor Feb. 24, at The Quincy Yacht Club.

Her decision to run she said was prompted by Michael Cheney's announcement he will vacate the seat to run for Councillor at-large.

Olinto has been involved in community activities for a number of years. She is an active member of the Houghs Neck Community Council and was elected to the executive board. The Quincy School Committee has appointed her community representative to the School Improvement Council at Atherton Hough School.

She said she recognizes there are many concerns and issues confronting the Ward 1 community. Among them: the MWRA; environmental concerns; and substance abuse.

"The MWRA has called the sludge processing decision at Fore River a swap-off for the decommissioning of Nut Island and their plan will be good neighbors to surrounding communities," she said.

"In their continuing "neighborly" spirit they now propose to raise our sewage and water rates upwards to 43 percent and we are told we should expect such gigantic increases for 10 years.

"I find it personally outrageous that these good neighbors continually betray the good faith Ward 1 and our city has afforded them. Be assured, I refuse to take a complacent attitude with this agency whose excessive share of "equitable distribution of regional responsibility" has been given to Quincy — with no economic benefit to the residents.

MARCIA OLINTO

"As a sound advocate of preserving the natural resources of our fragile marshlands, I am totally opposed to the Braintree-Weymouth pumping station/ Quincy interceptor section which is currently targeted by the MWRA for the Doane St. marsh. This will not only cause environmental havoc to the marshland, it will be as equally disruptive to the residents of Doane Street and surrounding neighborhoods. The deep rock tunnel from North Weymouth is the most environmentally sound - with non-residential impact - solution."

"If the MWRA continues these "good neighbor" policies, perhaps we should ask both the federal and Commonwealth's environmental protection agencies to declare the citizens of Ward 1 a potentially endangered species!"

"Substance abuse is a tragic concern that confronts us all. One of my goals will be to establish a community based volunteer substance abuse task force; inviting all 4 neighborhood community groups in Ward 1 to unite in planning a positive substance abuse program. Some possible objectives could be: education in collaboration with present educational programs, potential grant projects, counselling for citizens of all ages, support network. This concern demands immediate attention and I will be diligent in my efforts to bring such task force to fruition."

"I'm going to be an initiator of positive changes to improve upon the quality of life for all residents in Ward 1."

Throughout her campaign she said she plans to discuss these and many other pertinent Ward 1 issues and concerns.

"I hope to meet every resident of the Ward so they can share with me their most immediate concerns, issues, and/ or complaints," she said.

"I make only one campaign promise. I will be accessible, attentive, and responsible to every citizen in Ward 1 and will bring "our" concerns to City Hall."

communities to take conservation measures ranging from curtailing the hours when people can water their lawns and wash their cars to a worst-case scenario of banning new hookups to the reservoir.

If a crisis develops, the DEQE can require that the agencies ration water to its member communities, Bhatti said.

The agencies are acting now so they will have the authority to order conservation measures in place before the summer arrives, Colton said.

Ride Your Bike Safely

The top cause of bike-car accidents is bicyclists riding on the left side of the road (against traffic). Most bike-car accidents (51%) happen at intersections. Another big cause of accidents is bicyclists (and motorists) pulling out of driveways into traffic without stopping to look. When bicyclists or motorists do something unexpected or unpredictable, they are risking injury to themselves or others. Because the roads have to be shared by many people and vehicles, common rules have developed so that road users will generally know what to expect from others sharing the road. Massachusetts' Bicycle Safety Law treats bicycles as vehicles and allows bicyclists to use all streets and roads in the state, except heavily travelled highways and expressways. Under the law bicyclists have the responsibility to follow the same rules of the road as motorists. In other words, bicyclists are expected to be predictable on the road.

Here are the main Rules of the Road you'll need to ride predictably:

1. Ride on the right with the flow of traffic.
2. Ride single file.
3. Stop at stop signs and traffic lights. Obey all other traffic signs and signals, too.
4. Signal by hand and LOOK before turning. Otherwise keep both hands on the handlebars.
5. Give the right of way to pedestrians.
6. Give a clear warning (bell, horn or voice) when passing pedestrians or other cyclists or whenever needed for safety.
7. Never carry passengers.
8. Check your brakes often.
9. Equip your bike with front and rear reflectors, pedal reflectors, and reflective material on both sides.
10. Do not adjust handlebars above your shoulders or alter the front fork of the bike.
11. Never ride on express or limited access highways.
12. You may ride on the sidewalk outside business districts unless your city or town prohibits it.

Under Massachusetts law police officers may give a warning notice or a ticket to bicyclists who fail to follow the rules of the road.

What Should You Look For In A Diet?

By NANCY W. STOLFA
Manager/Counselor
Diet Center of Quincy

We all talk about starting a diet after the holidays. All those festivities included foods which put on extra pounds.

Or perhaps we promised ourselves we'd take off our excess weight in the New Year. Now it's mid-February and thoughts of spring and summer add themselves to our lists of reasons to diet.

We're ready but how do we select from the hundreds of diets we've read about? Some are reported to be un-safe, some to be wildly successful. What should we look for in a diet? How do we find the right diet for our own needs?

The most important requirement is that the diet be a well-balanced, nutritious selection of food from all the basic food groups. Remember those from our schools days: meats, vegetables, fruit, cereals, and dairy products. Watch out for the "Johnny-one-note" diet!

Any diet that focuses on one food or food group can only be characterized as a fad diet. Weight loss on these programs is usually quite rapid but the weight lost is really just a reduction in the amount of total body water. As the water level balances itself over time, the scale shows that you've regained what you lost. The other problem with fad diets is that real weight loss is mainly in the form of muscle, not fat.

The second factor to consider is that the diet be followed with food available at any grocery store.

When you diet with pre-packaged foods or special products, you are more likely to regain your weight when you return to your regular diet. By following a diet where you prepare your own meals with food from your own grocery store, you are building a repetoire of good shopping and cooking habits which will help you keep your weight off when you reach your goal.

This brings us to the third requirement of a good diet. Select a weight loss program which has a maintenance plan. Look for gradual, structured additions of a wide variety of foods. Nutritional education and behavior modification have also proven beneficial for permanent weight maintenance.

In summary, the best diet is one that uses a well-balanced variety of nutritious foods in a way which teaches good, life-long eating habits. And this diet needs just one other thing — YOU!! Start today.

William Jensen In Mayoral Race

William F. Jensen, 64, of Kidder St., Quincy, an assistant building manager, has announced his candidacy for mayor in this fall's city primary.

He is the fifth candidate in the race, joining former mayor Joseph LaRaia, businessman Peter O'Connell, and city councillors Stephen McGrath and James Sheets.

Jensen, a first-time candidate for public office, said he believes ensuring the safety of Quincy's growing Asian population is the city's biggest problem.

To address this issue, Jensen said he favors more police and patrols.

He also said something should be done to rectify the city's traffic problems.

Acknowledging that the job can be hectic at times, Jensen said he would run the city the way he runs his home. He said he has no debts and that managing the city's $118.5 million budget will mean having more money to deal with.

Jensen is employed as assistant building manager at the Linpro Building at Crown Colony Place. He is a retired sheet metal worker who was employed for 30 years at Navy shipyards in Boston and Portsmouth, N.H.

He is also an Army veteran who took part in the D-Day invasion of Normandy during World War II.

Sheets Says Helicopter Service Owner's Comments 'Not Accurate'

Ward 4 Councillor James Sheets said that comments made to the Patriot Ledger Saturday by Rhett Flater, owner of Hub Express Helicopter Service, were "not accurate."

Flater's comments came after a neighborhood meeting organized by Sheets and State Rep. Stephen Tobin on Flater's proposal to provide Quincy-To-Logan Airport Helicopter service at Crown Colony, South Quincy.

As a result of the meeting, Ed Lubitz and Rick Vassa, son of Richard Vassa, one of the owners of Crown Colony, agreed to drop plans for the service because of neighborhood opposition.

The Patriot Ledger reported that Flater had said there were "a couple of dozen militants among the audience, whose objections are not truly representative of the whole community."

Flater also said in the Ledger article that he will call the developer to find out if the project manager had the authority to say at the meeting that the service would be cancelled.

Flater said "If that's true, the developer is saying he is willing to be held hostage by a group of militants whose wishes are not in the best interest of Quincy."

Sheets said that the people at the meeting who spoke in opposition to the helicopter service "were not militants, they were not crusading for or against a cause, they were simply speaking out, as is their constitutional right, in defense of their safety and community concerns."

Sheets also said that the people should have been consulted before any action was taken on the Helioport by Crown Colony.

Apartments, Condos Not Break Proof

Many people that live in apartments or condo complex's feel that they are safe from break-in's, this is simply not true. As a matter of fact many of the break-in's we have investigated recently have been in these complex's. Recently Det. Bob Curtis and Det. Bob Ciriello arrested a Boston man and charged him with 14 of these break-in's in Quincy. There are many steps that you can take to protect your apartment/condo from a break-in. The following are just a few:

- If you move into an "other than new" apartment or condo the very first thing you should do is to change the locks on the doors. There is no way of knowing how many keys the previous occupant may have given to family or friends.
- Use good deadbolt locks. And make sure you know how they work.
- Sliding doors require extra protection. Use a "Charlie Bar" to prevent entry even if the lock is picked or broken. A less desirable option is wedge a wooden rod, broomstick, into the bottom track. To prevent the panels from being lifted out of the tracks, secure the stationary panel with a screw from the inside into the door frame. The top track should have small screws protruding down over the slider, so that the slider cannot be lifted out of the track.
- Give your apartment/condo the appearance of being lived in. When you leave for the day turn on a radio so that anyone coming to the door will think someone is home.
- Get to know your neighbors. When you leave your home, night or day, let your neighbor know. Tell your neighbor if you are expecting deliveries, maintenance men or friends.
- Do not leave notes on your door saying when you will return.
- Use timers on lights, and maybe the TV, so that you will not come into a dark room when you return home. This will also give your home the appearance of being lived in.
- Challenge strangers that you see in the hallways. A simple "Can I help you?" may help to chase off a potential thief. If the individual appears suspicious or nervous call the police.
- Call the police if anything looks suspicious. Do not hesitate to call the police at any time. Your call may stop a crime.

If you need any further information on security please call me at 479-1212 ext 344. If you would like to start a Neighborhood Watch group in your complex I will help you get it started.

Noble Signs UNH Letter Of Intent

By TOM SULLIVAN

Last Wednesday, Feb. 8, was a big day for Quincy High School.

On that afternoon, before a good crowd of teachers, students and family members in the new Pride Room, three of the school's top student-athletes signed letters of intent to attend major colleges in the fall on full four-year athletic scholarships.

Chris Noble, quarterback for the Quincy football team, will attend the University of New Hampshire at Durham, N.H.

Nancy Laitinen and Amy Guidice, co-captains of Quincy's state volleyball champions, will attend Northeastern University and Drexel Universal of Philadelphia, respectively.

Noble, who was sought by several colleges, last fall passed for 22 touchdowns, tops in Division 1, passed for 1845 yards and in two seasons passed for 3295 yards and 34 touchdowns and rushed for seven more. He was named to the Boston Globe, Boston Herald and Patriot Ledger all-scholastic teams.

He had narrowed his choices down to UNH, Maine, UMass/Amherst and Villanova.

"I think he made a fine choice," said his father, Bob. "New Hampshire has the type of offense that should be ideal for Chris. They average 45 passes a game and that was a big reason he chose to go there."

Noble, who made a recruiting trip to Villanova, was impressed with that school, but wanted to stay nearer to home.

Much of the credit for Chris' progress as a football player must go to his father, who coached the West Quincy Elks of the Quincy Youth Football League for several years and had Chris on his teams for four years.

UNH assistant coaches Jack Bicknell, Jr., and Matt Matlak were present for Chris' signing and both had good words for him.

"We are delighted to get Chris and he should fit in to our offense easily," said Bicknell. "He is a drop back and throw type of passer and that is what we want. Also, he can run out of the pocket and is a fine ball carrier. (he was one of Quincy's top runners last fall in addition to his passing). It is tough for a freshman to work right in and start for the varsity because of the short period of time they have to learn the system. However, Chris will get his chance and it is possible he can work his way right in.

"Our starting quarterback, Bob Jean, graduates, but we have a fifth-year quarterback who looms as number one, but Chris will be competitive and will get his chance to play."

"Quincy Coach Jack Raymer is delighted that Noble picked UNH.

"It is the perfect place for him and I know he will do well there," he said.

Another of the state's top quarterbacks, Rich Green of Melrose, the Middlesex League Most Valuable Player, is also going to New Hampshire.

"Chris and Rich are both outstanding prospects," said UNH head coach Bill Bowes. "They are not total opposites but are different type quarterbacks and we want to give them every opportunity to see what they have.

"Chris is a big strong kid (6-3, 210) who is a classic drop back passer. He can sprint out and throw on the run, but mostly he has that strong arm downfield. He has excellent ability to throw the ball from the pocket and on the run.

"Green has the quickest feet of any quarterback we have seen on film. He has a good arm with accuracy, especially on sideline patterns and has a quick release. He is such a good athlete that we will find a place for him somewhere if he is not the quarterback."

"I selected New Hampshire because I will be near home and they have a fine athletic program and I will get a fine education there," Noble said.

Amy Guidice and Nancy Laitin played volleyball for four years at Quincy and both admitted their biggest thrill was winning the state championship last fall.

"I picked Northeastern because I can get a fine education there, they have a fine division 1 volleyball program and I will be near home," Laitinen said. Northeastern has won two straight conference championships.

"I decided on Drexel because they have my major, merchandising, on their curriculum and they also have a fine volleyball program," added Guidice.

Noble, Guidice and Laitinen all said Quincy High prepared them well for their further education.

90 Game Schedule Starts Feb. 20

52 Teams In Quincy Kiwanis Tourney

The 16th annual Quincy Kiwanis International Youth Hockey Tournament begins Monday, Feb. 20 at 8:10 a.m. at the Quincy Youth Hockey Rink.

Before the tourney ends on Sunday, Feb. 26, with the four finals, 90 games will have been played.

Each team participating in the tournament is guaranteed three games. The first game will feature Milton versus the Seahawks (Scituate, Cohasset, Hull) in the Mites Division. The Division 1 AHA-sanctioned tournament will feature teams from four divisions: Bantam, Pee Wees, Mites and Squirts.

The games will feature teams from Denver, Colorado; Suffolk, Adirondack, Troy and Schenectady, New York; North Toronto; Thornhill, Ontario; Sackville, Nova Scotia; Penobscot, Maine; Greater Bridgeport, Connecticut; Providence, Rhode Island as well as several Eastern Massachusetts teams from Brockton, Framingham, Westwood, Melrose, Duxbury, Canton, Plymouth, Chelmsford, Dennis-Yarmouth, Milton, Needham, Hingham, Medfield, Burlington and Quincy.

The out-of-state players arrived in Quincy Wednesday. Beverly Reinhardt, manager of the Quincy Youth Hockey Rink, has arranged housing for the youths during their stay. Most of them will be accommodated in the homes of Quincy Youth Hockey players. Parents and fans of the visitors have made arrangements to stay in local motels. 150 adults are coming from Sackville, Nova Scotia to support their 3 teams.

Rev. Dr. Richard Malmquist, Kiwanis Hockey Tournament chairman, stated that all of the proceeds will be used by the local Kiwanis Club to provide scholarships, campership as well as funding for the club's major emphasis needs to assist local families in need.

A pass, good for admission to all the games, can be purchased from any Quincy Kiwanian or at the door for $5. Single admission at the door is $3 for adults and $1 for students 12-18 years of age. Children under 12 years will be admitted free.

All four final championship games will be played on Sunday afternoon, February 26th beginning at 12 noon. Trophies are awarded to the winners and runners-up in all four divisions.

A souvenir program book will be on sale at the rink listing the names of all the players as well as the schedule of games to be played. The Kiwanis Club of Quincy will be observing its 65th anniversary in March.

Noble, Laitinen, Guidice Sign Letters Of Intent

Raymer thanked the teachers, students and family members for attending the ceremonies and congratulated the three scholarship winners.

"This proves you don't have to go to outside schools to get a good education," he said. "These kids prove you can go right to any college from Quincy High School."

Supt. of Schools, Dr. Robert Ricci congratulated the trio and wished them the best in college. he said they were a real credit to their school, their parents and their city and he is sure they will continue to be a credit to their colleges.

His views were echoed by Principal Lloyd Hill, Athletic Coordinator Marty Finnegan, school committeeman Frank Santoro and volleyball coach Tom Henderson.

Raymer pointed out that Noble, Guidice and Laitinen aren't the only athletes who will be going to college.

"Eighteen of our 25 senior football players have applied to colleges and many have been accepted. Also, several of the Vo-Tech students will be moving into excellent jobs," he said.

Quincy Youth Will Be In Canada Hockey Tourney

In April 80 Quincy Youth Hockey players will take part in an international tournament in Halifax, Nova Scotia.

The expense of sending the young players is steep and in an attempt to offset these costs, four fundraising events have been planned.

Last Friday the first event, a junior raffle, was attended by 410 children and young adults. Each participant received a prize ranging from soccer balls, hockey sticks, jewelry, Celtic tickets, etc. Over $6000 worth of gifts were collected by Mrs. Nancy Barron, Mrs. Gail Bracken, Mrs. Dottie Greenwood, Mrs. Lori Hemingway, Mrs. Debbie McTomney, Mrs. Julie Oliva, Mrs. Karen Sheehan, Mrs. Michelle Stenberg and Ms. Eileen Wingate. Refreshments were donated by Burger King, McDonald's and Hendrie's Ice Cream.

The next fundraiser is a meat raffle Friday night from 7:30 to 9:30 at St. Boniface. Church Hall. A celebrity hockey game is planned for next month.

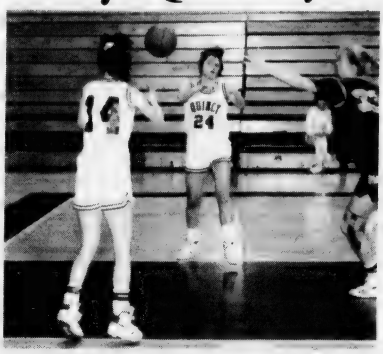
North Girls Breeze By Quincy

The North Quincy girls' basketball team easily defeated Quincy for the second time, 57-29, but Friday the Raiderettes lost to Waltham, 65-46, ending its hopes for another Eastern Mass. tournament berth.



The North girls will wind up the season next Tuesday and Wednesday nights in the North-South Tournament.

Tuesday night at North Quincy North will face Lincoln-Sudbury at 7:30 and Newton South will face Indian Hill High of Oakland, New Jersey, at 6.

Wednesday at Newton South the consolation game will be played at 6 and the championship contest at 7:30.

The Raiderettes trailed early at Waltham, 15-6, in a very physical game. North battled back in the second quarter as Debbie Panaro scored five points and Paula Tolson three, but still trailed, 27-20, at halftime.

North cut into the lead early in the third quarter as Tolson hit for nine points, including a three-point shot.

Kellene Duffy, Kara Sullivan and Kerry Tolson tried to keep North close in the third quarter but the Hawks went to the line often, converting 13 of 14 free throws as three Raiderettes fouled out of the game. The game got out of hand and the officials stopped the game with 46 seconds left.

Paula Tolson scored 16 points, Duffy had nine points, seven assists and five steals, Deirdre Murphy eight points, 15 rebounds and tied a school record with five blocked shots.

Earlier in the week North clinched the city championship for the fourth straight year.

The First Ladies jumped off to an early 4-1 lead on baskets by Amy Baker and Melanie Sullivan, but North took a lead it would never relinquish when Paula Tolson hit two jump shots and Sullivan and Duffy had baskets. After Quincy's Erin Doherty scored, Kerry Tolson hit four successive free throws to give North a 15-6 lead after a quarter.

Lisa Morrell hit two early free throws for Quincy and Jennifer Dondero added one, but North countered with a 15-2 run with only Kim Marsden scoring for Quincy.

Paula Tolson got hot and hit for 10 points and Sullivan and Panaro hit two free throws each for a 32-12 halftime lead.

North continued in the third quarter with a 19-2 run to end any Quincy hopes of a comeback. Duffy and Murphy scored seven points each.

Paula Tolson had 14 points, all in the first half, Murphy had 12 points, 16 rebounds and three steals, Sullivan 10 points and Duffy nine. Baker led Quincy with six points.

Quincy lost to undefeated Newton North, 53-22, with Sullivan having eight rebounds and holding Newton's high-scoring Lil Johnson to 11 points, Amy Doherty had eight points and Doherty six.

North Rebounds To Defeat Waltham

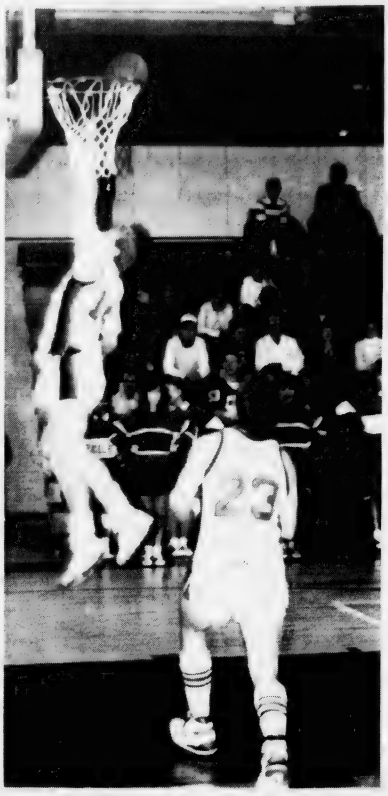
The North Quincy boys' basketball team, which has been hit hard by illnesses all season, rebounded from a disappointing loss to Quincy to defeat Waltham, 63-52, last Friday night and improve its record to 5-11. The win gave Quincy the mythical city title as it was the second win in three games over the Raiders.

Ted Stevenson's North team played at Brookline Tuesday and will host Brockton Friday night at 7:30 in the final regular-season game. The Raiders will face Hanover and either Norwell or Holbrook in its invitational tournament Feb. 20 and 22.

Billy MacDougall sparked North to its win over Waltham with 18 points. Kipp Caldwell had 14 points and 13 rebounds and Erik DeBoer had 13 points and nine rebounds as the Raiders raced out to an 18-7 lead and never looked back.

Earlier in the week Quincy used its superior height to defeat North, 68-51.

The Presidents' big men, 6-4 Mike Perkins and Jody Beauchamp, and 6-3 Chris Noble controlled the boards, a key factor in North's loss.



Caldwell had a big night for North with 25 points, including 10 in the first quarter. DeBoer had 17 points, including two three-pointers.

North trailed, 18-14, after one quarter and 32-23 at the half. Quincy had a 43-34 lead going into the final quarter.

"We have played better than our record indicates," said Stevenson. "We have been hard hit by illnesses all year long. I have 14 varsity players and have not had my full squad available in a single game this season.

"The boys performed very well against Waltham and also did a good job against Quincy, but Quincy's domination of the boards with Perkins and Beauchamp was too much for us."

North Keeps Tourney Hopes Alive

The North Quincy hockey team kept its flickering state tournament hopes alive last week with a 5-4 victory over Newton North, but the Raiders face a difficult task if it hopes to qualify for the fifth time in the last six years.

Kevin Jago's North team played at second-place Waltham last night (Wednesday), will host Brookline, undefeated Suburban League leader, Saturday night at the Quincy Youth Arena, and will finish up at third-place Brockton Monday at 1 o'clock.

North lost to all three teams earlier in the year. Waltham pulled out a 4-3 victory, Brookline romped, 8-0, and Brockton won, 6-2.

Last night's game at Waltham marked the second time North faced that team after a night off, the Raiders being idle last Saturday.

"I hope the layoff won't affect us like it did the last time," Jago said. "We were very rusty at the start of the last Waltham game and it proved costly."

Defenseman Joe Keegan moved in from the point and scored the winning goal against Newton North with 2:36 left in the game, giving the Raiders their third win in a row.

North (9-6-1 overall and 6-3 in the league) must take four points in the last three games to make the tournament, two wins or a win and two ties.

Arthur Cangemi scored two goals for North as it was tied, 1-1, after a period and 3-3 going into the third period.

Joe Fasano and Billy Lydon each had a goal for North and Jeff McClory, returning to action after missing two games with an injury, made several big saves down the stretch.

Lights Go Out On Quincy In Cambridge

A manhole explosion which left the city of Cambridge without power Saturday, may have 'blacked' the Quincy hockey team out of a chance of getting its second win of the season.

After Cambridge Rindge and Latin had taken a 2-0 lead over the Presidents, Tim Mann scored twice in the second period to tie the score.

Quincy was on a power play and was putting the pressure on Cambridge when, with three minutes left in the period, the lights went out leaving the arena in total darkness.

"You couldn't see your hand in front of your face and there is no emergency lighting in the arena," said Quincy assistant coach George Peachy. "Talk about chaos, everything was helter-skelter as we tried to get the players and the fans out. We were looking for flashlights or something else to see where we were going."

The teams waited nearly an hour and the officials decided it would be impossible to continue the game.

"I honestly feel we had a good chance of winning," said coach Bob Sylvia. "The kids were keyed up after tying the score and Cambridge was shorthanded. I feel sorry for our kids, who have had such a frustrating season." Quincy is 1-15 on the season.

It is doubtful if the game will be continued or replayed, as the only objective for either team is to win and stay out of the Suburban League cellar.

Earlier in the week the Presidents lost to Brockton, 7-0.

Quincy finishes up against the two top league teams, hosting first place Brookline last night (Wednesday) and playing at second place Waltham Monday at 6 o'clock.

Girls Clinch Tourney Berth

The Quincy Youth girls hockey team clinched a berth in the Girls Senior "B" State Tournament in Marlboro the weekend of March 10-12 by defeating the Assabet Valley Senior B team, 7-1, last Saturday at the Quincy Youth Arena.

Lisa Skehan had two goals and an assist, Heidi Maguire, Stephanie O'Sullivan and Nancy Craig a goal and assist each, Sheilah Graham and Pauline Skehan a goal apiece and Jean Gill, Janet Fennelly, Tricia Hughes and Karen McCabe an assist each.

Sunday the girls were edged by Canton Chargers, 4-3, in a league game. Fennelly, Graham and O'Sullivan scored the goals and O'Sullivan, Hughes and Skehan had assists.

Pee Wee Bs Win Despite Injuries

Quincy's Pee Wee B hockey team, sponsored by A&T Movers, defeated Canton, 4-2, in a state playdown game, despite the absence of key players with injuries.

Billy Coughlin, Lee Hughes, Eric Zimmerman and Brian Connolly had the goals, while Michael Dern had three assists and Zimmerman, Connolly and Andrew Vermette one each. Goalie Michael Manganaro had a fine game.

Quincy edged Greater Boston League-leading Brookline, 2-1, with Connolly and Zimmerman scoring the goals and each assisting on the other's goal. Manganaro was outstanding in goal and the defense of Paul King, Kevin Flaherty, David Pacino, Dennis Pateras, Jay Evans and Vermette turned in strong efforts.

Quincy Defeats North, Newton N.

The Quincy boys' basketball team, which has been playing well despite a 6-11 record (four more wins than it had all last year), won two games in a row last week and only the second time this season.

Following a big 68-51 victory over North Quincy to give them the city title, the Presidents defeated Newton North, 59-54, last Friday.

John Franceschini's Quincy team plays at Waltham Friday night at 7:30 in its final regular-season game and then will play Hingham and either Silver Lake or Stoughton in its invitational tournament Feb. 21 and 22.

A big reason for the Presidents' improved showing this season has been the all-around play of Jody Beauchamp, a 6-4, 215-pound transfer from Madison Park High of Boston.

Beauchamp, who was a starter for two years at Madison Park and starred in tournament play both years, transferred to Quincy last fall and became eligible for the last three football games.

He did an excellent job and caught three touchdown passes, including a fine catch in the Presidents' Thanksgiving Day win over North Quincy.

Beauchamp has had an outstanding basketball season. One of the top scorers in the Suburban League, he has been tremendous off the boards and on defense.

"He has done a terrific job and has taken a lot of the pressure off Mike Perkins and Joe Russell," said Franceschini. "Last year the other teams were able to concentrate on Perkins and Russell but not this year. Perkins is just ahead of Beauchamp in scoring and they are 1-2 in rebounding. Russell leads the team in assists and Rich Noble is also having a fine year on the boards and in scoring."

In last Friday's win over Newton North, Beauchamp scored 24 points and hit four free throws in the final 1:15. He had 10 rebounds and was seven for seven from the line in the fourth quarter.

Russell had 13 points including three three-pointers and had seven assists, while Perkins had eight points and took down 17 rebounds.

Quincy's tall, aggressive front court sparked the big win over North Quincy.

North had won the previous league game between the two, but the Presidents topped the Raiders in the consolation game of the Christmas tournament at Weymouth South, giving them the mythical city crown.

Perkins (also 6-4) and Beauchamp gave Quincy a height advantage over North as Perkins, a force on the offensive and defensive ends, scored 25 points and had 14 rebounds, while Beauchamp had 13 points and 13 rebounds.

"Our big people, Perkins and Beauchamp, were able to control the boards and that was one of the big keys for us," said Franceschini. "We were able to create good shots and we kept their three-point shooter (Erik DeBoer) pretty much under control."

Quincy took an 18-14 lead after a quarter and increased its lead to 32-23 at the half. Going into the final session the Presidents had a 43-34 lead and scored 25 points in the fourth quarter to pull safely away.

Oscar Jara was a key man in the final quarter as he hit seven or eight from the foul line.

North Wrestlers Third In Championships

The North Quincy wrestling team, which has had its problems this year in the Suburban League, was the surprise team of last weekend's league championships, as it finished third behind league champion Brockton and runnerup Quincy.

North's Glen Morales was voted the tournament's Most Valuable Wrestler after surprising Brookline's Jung Lee for the 130-pound title. He used two first-period takedowns to win, 6-5. It was the first loss in two years for Lee, the reigning state champion.

Aaron Silverman also won for Steve Joyce's Raiders, winning the 112-pound crown by pinning Brookline's Albert Gagnon.

Quincy, loser only to Brockton in the league, also had two winners.

Todd Kimmell rallied from an 8-3 deficit to defeat Shawn Yard of Cambridge Rindge and Latin, 11-10, at 145 pounds with a third-period reversal.

Brian Burgess won at 160 for Lou Venturelli's Presidents at 160 pounds, blanking Brookline's Eric Liebman, 5-0.

Quincy's Scott O'Brien (135) placed second and Tim Schultz (103), Robert Connolly (140) and Jerry Stavrakopoulos (189) took third places.

North's Derek Colantonio (103) and Bill Lee (152) took seconds and Peter Wildes took a third.

The South Sectional championships will be held for Division 1 at Hingham and Division 2 at Middleboro Friday and Saturday.

Squirt Bs Win

Quincy's Squirt B hockey team, sponsored by Continental Cablevision, defeated Milton, 6-1, in a Greater Boston League game.

Chris Grant had two goals and John Manning, Tommy Moriarty, Robbie Pirelli and Jimmy Gallagher one each. Gallagher had two assists and John Ryan, Michael O'Brien, Moriarty, Bruce Stenberg and Josh Wingate one each.

Quincy lost to Belmont, 3-1, with Jimmy Kelley scoring the goal unassisted.

Quincy came back to the top All-Bright, 6-1, with O'Brien, Wingate, Manning, Grant, Shawn McTomney and Moriarty scoring the goals. Billy Barron had two assists and O'Brien, McTomney, Eric Oliva, Manning, Moriarty, Grant and Gallagher one each.

Quincy plays a division championship game tonight (Thursday) at 6:40 at the Quincy Youth Arena.

Puppet Theatre At Crane Library

The Boston Lamplight Puppet Theatre will perform "The Jungle Tales of Anansi the Spider" Tuesday, Feb. 21 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library main branch in Quincy Square.

Children age four and older and their families are invited. Funding for the puppet show is through the Quincy Arts Council.

Anansi the Spider is a folk hero whose origins are traced to the Ashanti Tribe in West Anansi's tales of trickery and greed to the Caribbean Islands.

Eventually, the tales reached our southern states where the spider became a rabbit, and the tales themselves became Uncle Remus stories.

Another vacation week program is a web of self-directed activities, also at the Quincy Square library. These activities are suitable for pre-schoolers and older children and are available Wednesday, Thursday and Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Activities include making a paper spider, assembling felt board creatures, solving a spider web maze, finding a hidden picture and designing a spider bookmark.

'Lunch And Theatre' At Woodward School

The Woodward School, 1102 Hancock St., and the Children's Theatre Workshop will present two days of "Lunch and Theatre" at the school on Tuesday (Feb. 21) and Thursday (Feb. 23) at 12:30 p.m.

Hot dogs, pizza, soda, cookies and more will be available at reasonable prices.

At 1 p.m. on each day the Children's Theatre Workshop will present a play. Tuesday's performance will be "Whitewashing The Fence," featuring Tom Sawyer and Huch Finn, and Thursday's performance will be "School's Out for Charlie Brown."

Admission will be $2 at the door.

For further information call 773-5610 or 472-9233.

'Hopedale Community' For Historical Society

The Quincy Historical Society will meet Thursday, Feb. 23 at 7:30 p.m. in the Adams Academy Building, 8 Adams St.

Guest speaker will be Barbara Faulkner, a professor at Eastern Nazarene College, who will speak on the "Hopedale Community."

The Hopedale Community, created in Milford, in 1842, was "an experiment in the science of a divine order of society, or an attempt to actualize in organic form, the kingdom of God on Earth."

The meeting is open to members and non-members. Refreshments will be served.

LEGAL NOTICE

CITY OF QUINCY IN COUNCIL

ORDER NO. 511
ORDERED: November 21, 1988

Be it ordained by the City Council of the City of Quincy that the revised ordinances of the City of Quincy, 1976 are further amended upon the recommendation of the Commissioner of Public Health. In Chapter 13, Article IV add the following :

Section 55 - Infectious Waste Disposal

INFECTIOUS WASTE DISPOSAL ORDINANCE

Section 1. Rationale: A potential public health hazard exists from exposure to improperly disposed infectious waste. Stringent federal and state regulations require that specified methods of infectious waste storage, packaging and disposal be practiced by both the generator and the disposal contractor. At the same time, this geographical area is experiencing diminished landfill capacity, thus promoting incineration as the preferred disposal method. Although incineration is most commonly used by hospitals, the largest quantity generators of infectious waste, problems of incinerator acceptability by the public greatly restrict this disposal method. As a result, disposal costs continue to escalate, particularly for the small quantity generator of infectious waste. All of these factors contribute to the increased potential for the improper disposal of infectious waste.

Section 2. Legal Significance: Pursuant to Chapter 111, Section 31 of the Massachusetts General Laws, the City of Quincy adopts the following ordinance which is designed to impose strict penalties upon persons and/or entities responsible for any infectious waste which is improperly disposed of within the boundaries of the City of Quincy. This ordinance shall apply to all generators and all disposal contractors affiliated with the disposal of any type of infectious waste.

Section 3. Definitions:

a.) "Infectious Waste" - Waste which because of its infectious characteristics may cause or significantly contribute to an increase in mortality or an increase in serious irreversible or incapacitating reversible illness and which may pose a substantial present or potential hazard to human health or the environment when improperly treated, stored, transported, disposed of or otherwise managed. Infectious waste includes; Isolation wastes, cultures, and stocks of etiologic (disease causing) agents, Blood and blood products, Pathological wastes, Contaminated laboratory wastes, Sharps (syringed, needles, scalples etc.), Dialysis Unit waste, Animal and Body parts, Biologicals and Contaminated food and patient-care wastes.

b.) "Infectious Waste Generator" - Any person or entity which produces infectious waste. Generators may include: Hospitals, Doctors Offices, Home Health Care Facilities, Health Maintenance Organizations, Teaching Facilities (ie biology laboratories etc.), Research and Development Laboratories, Clinics (all types, ie chiropractor, accupunture, sports medicine etc.) veterinary facilities, nursing homes, funeral homes, dental clinics and offices and a single or group of individuals.

c.) "Infectious Waste Disposal Contractor" - Any person or company responsible for the proper and legal disposal of solid waste, including but not limited to hazardous infectious waste. Cleaning contractors responsible for the cleaning and removal of waste from the property of an infectious waste generator shall be considered a disposal contractor for the purposes of this ordinance.

d.) "Proper Disposal of Infectious Waste"
1. All infectious waste designated for off-site disposal excluding sharp wastes, shall be placed in non-permeable three (3) ml. polyethylene (or equivalent) bags which are to be securely sealed and placed into a second [illegible] which shall also be securely sealed. This sealed double bag shall be placed into a rigid or semi-rigid container and sealed. The container must be labeled according to Department of Transportation regulations. Incineration of any infectious waste so contained in a Type 4 D.E.Q.E. approved incinerator or the landfilling of treated (sterilized) infectious waste similarly contained, and as per D.E.Q.E. (or out of state equivalent) regulations, shall constitute proper disposal.

2. Sharp Wastes, which can include hypodermic needles, syringes, pasteur pipettes, broken glass, Scalpel blades, disposal razors and suture needles which have come in contact with infectious agents during use in patient care or in laboratories must be rendered unusable and placed in rigid, puncture-resistant containers immediately after use. The containers of sharp waste shall either undergo incineration (in a type 4, D.E.Q.E. - approved incinerator) or be processed by grinding (or another similarly effective method) to eliminate the physical hazard of the sharps and then disposed of in a sanitary landfill approved by D.E.Q.E. (or out of state equivalent). Either method shall constitute proper disposal of Sharp Wastes.

e.) "Improper Disposal of Infectious Waste" - Any action or lack of action which causes infectious waste to be disposed in a manner contrary to the definition of proper disposal as specified above.

f.) "Responsible Party" - Any person or entity who by definition, is a generator of infectious waste and/or who, by contract, agreement or otherwise, directly or indirectly, arranged for or participated in the improper packaging, improper transport or improper disposal of infectious waste.

Preble Supports Clause In New Beechwood Center Lease

Stating a compromise could be reached between the center and the school, School Committee candidate Mike Preble said he supports some sort of emergency clause in the new lease for the Beechwood Community Life Center in Wollaston.

"I think that some sort of compromise could be reached between the center and the school committee," he said.

Under the current contract the School Committee must notify the center by March 30 if they want the building back for school purposes.

"Beechwood serves a much needed service to the community as a whole, but my concern is that in the event of an emergency the kids will have no place to go," Preble said.

The Beechwood facility, a former school, was closed by the School Committee in 1981. That year, the center opened and since that time, the school department has retained ownership while the center has functioned as a community center.

"If the center doesn't want to have this clause in the new contract, then maybe we should look at shortening the length of the contract to suit our needs," Preble said.

Thursday In Germantown

Hearing On Pipe Connector Project Through Marsh

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Quincy residents are encouraged to attend a public meeting to be held by the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority tonight (Thursday) at 7:30 p.m. at St. Boniface Church Hall, Palmer St., Germantown.

Purpose of the meeting is for the MWRA to accept public input and discuss the latest proposal for the cross-pipe connector which would run from Weymouth to the Braintree-Weymouth pumping station located on Kilby St., Houghs Neck.

According to Ward 1 Councillor Michael Cheney, the Authority's preferred option is to dredge up nearly one acre of marsh land abutting Germantown and Houghs Neck and lay a pipe line through Doane St.

The MWRA has also proposed to construct a new pumping station which would replace the existing pumping station.

The estimated cost of the project, which would take 12 to 24 months to complete, is $16,400,000.

The purpose of the project is to allow for additional flows from the Braintree-Weymouth sewer interceptor line to be pumped to the high level sewer for treatment at the Nut Island sewerage plant.

Cheney, who is opposed to MWRA's preferred option, said he will discuss another option at the meeting Thursday night.

The administrative assistant to MWRA Executive Director Paul Levy is expected to attend the meeting.

Cheney, who said the pipe would bring an additional 30 million gallons of sewerage to the pumping station daily, called the proposal an "environmental nightmare." "Environmentally, this just doesn't make any sense. They're going to rip up that marshland for approximately two years while they lay that pipe in. It poses a public safety problem to the children and the residents in the area.

"It's also an environmental nightmare because we'll end up closing down the clamflats in that section for at least two years, perhaps three or four years while the sediments are cleaned up from the water," Cheney said.

Continuing, he pointed out that whenever marshes are dug up, the tall marsh grass which can easily catch fire, takes root very quickly. "We feel this will endanger some of the wildlife species in the marshland."

Cheney said the communities served by the pumping station, particularly Braintree and Weymouth, should address the problem of infiltration inflow. This is the amount of water that leaks into the sewer pipes or is pumped into the sewer pipes from sump pumps in home cellars.

According to Cheney, during heavy rains, the amount of sewerage that flows through these pipes increases 50 to 75 percent. "We feel the communities beyond Quincy should start addressing their own problems by removing the infiltration inflow," he said.

If the MWRA proposal goes through, Cheney said the city can expect additional sewage discharges from the Nut Island treatment plant until the Deer Island treatment plant begins operation.

"This, in my opinion, violates the Clean Water Act. We're adding more sewerage to an already overburdened system.

"They're going to be ripping up marsh lands that are extremely valuable to us and our children. They're going to be disrupting people's lives for up to two years.

"They're going to be trucking through our streets. It's just going to be a nightmare," Cheney said.

Before going through with any option, Cheney said the MWRA should "really go back to those communities and say "remove your own infiltration inflow and address your own problems before Quincy has to put up with yet another burden."

There is also data, Cheney said, that indicates sewerage back up problems could occur in other sections of the city, such as West Quincy and Quincy Point, if the pipe connector is allowed to go through Germantown.

"It's imperative for people to turn out and let the MWRA know we don't want another facility in Quincy."

McGrath Urges Suit Against MWRA

Stating Quincy should continue to "vigorously fight" a recent decision by the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority to site a permanent sludge treatment plant at the Fore River Shipyard in Quincy Point, Councillor Stephen McGrath has urged Mayor Francis McCauley to file a lawsuit against the authority.

In a letter to McCauley, McGrath said, "It is clear that the City has explored every other avenue short of litigation to protest the recent siting decision for the sludge treatment plant to be located in Quincy.

"It is my feeling that we should not surrender just because the votes of the Advisory Board have gone against us," he said. The MWRA Board of Directors voted 10-1 on Feb. 1 in favor of a recommendation made by Executive Director Paul Levy to site a permanent plant at the shipyard.

The lone dissenting vote was cast by Quincy Public Works Commissioner Paul Anderson, the city's representative on the Authority's board.

The facility, expected to begin operation in 1995, will process thousands of gallons of dry sludge daily into compost and fertilizer. The cost to construct and operate the facility, which is part of the Boston Harbor clean up project, is estimated at $193 million over 25 years.

A contingent of city officials, including McCauley and the City Council, fought the decision up until the day of the decision for several reasons, including charges of unfairness in the selection process.

Responding to McGrath's letter, McCauley said a lawsuit remains one of his options.

"The matter is still under consideration. We are going to be commenting on the selection process, Mr. Levy's recommendation and the board's final decision fairly soon," McCauley said.

"We are exploring all avenues and a lawsuit is one of them," the mayor added.

In his letter, McGrath also said the city "should continue to fight and be prepared to take the battle to the courts in order to ensure that Quincy, which has already borne an inordinate share of the burden of sewage treatment, is treated fairly."

Expounding on his letter, McGrath said, "I feel that the

Two awards were given to Arthur Simons, far left, and Fred Kiley, second from left, of the A & S Development Corp. for their generosity in donating land, preparing the grounds and doing the preliminary work for the commemorative monument for the Ward 2 park. Also receiving a unity award was John "Jake" Comer, far right, past national commander of the American Legion and present director of the Quincy Housing Authority. Presenting the awards was Ronald Mariano, second from right, president of the Ward 2 Civic Association. Cheney Wants Traffic Study In Merrymount

Ward 1 Councillor Michael Cheney planned to introduce a resolve at the City Council meeting Tuesday requiring the Traffic Commission to do a study in the Merrymount neighborhood area bounded by Sea St., Norton Rd., Shore Dr. and both sides of Quincy Shore Drive.

The resolve, if approved by the council, would require the commission to look at traffic patterns and make recommendations on ways to reduce the high volume and high speed of traffic through that section of the city.

Cheney has already requested additional enforcement in Merrymount, particularly at intersections with four-way stop signs.

"Merrymount is not the only area with traffic problems. There are other neighborhoods that have problems with traffic but right now, Merrymount is a priority because it is a school zone," Cheney said, adding that many children walk to and from school there.

Before drafting the resolve, Cheney sent out surveys to area residents and asked them to respond to the Merrymount traffic situation. He said he received more than 115 responses with specific suggestions.

Also, the Merrymount Association met with Cheney and discussed the matter.

Quincy Crisis Center To Benefit From Bush Inauguration Celebration

Massachusetts Republicans will gather in Milton, birthplace of President George Bush, Friday night to celebrate his inauguration. The festivities will take place at the Hoosic Club from 8 p.m. to midnight.

The evening will include hors d'oeuvres, music by the Zaitchik Brothers Band, and a slide show of the Inaugural festivities in Washington that took place last month.

Jamie Bush, who is the President's nephew, is the Chairman of the Republican Committee in Milton and one of the prime organizers of the event. "All of the proceeds will go to the Quincy Crisis Center as a small gesture on our part of 'kindness and gentleness'," he said.

Those interested in attending and would like more information may contact Caty Sible, who is the event co-chairman, or call 749-4844.

Parking Problem Hearing Continued

The Quincy License Board Tuesday continued for three weeks a hearing concerning parking problems at Trucks of Quincy, 51 Holbrook Rd., North Quincy, and at Karl's Auto Body, 65 Holbrook Rd. The Board noted that Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien had brought the matter to the attention of the Board due to neighborhood complaints.

Chretien told the Board that there are several vehicles, many in need of major repair, parked in the area and that public safety is being affected because the parked cars impair visibility at intersections.

Robert Donovan, manager of Karl's Auto Body, told the board that he had been "unaware of a parking problem until a month ago" when he received a letter from Chretien. He told the Board that he has tried to correct the problem since then and will continue to do so. "The purpose of being here is to work together," he told the Board.

Speaking on the parking problem at the meeting were neighboring residents, Gilsomina DiNofrio of 67 Farrington St., and Henry Bradley of Small St.

Both residents told the Board that there are too many cars and trucks parked in the area which blocks visibility. Bradley also told the board that there is a gate to a dumpster owned by Karl's Auto Body which is left open and the dumpster itself allowed to overflow.

Chretien told the board that the area has improved somewhat since he had written the letter of complaint, but that the neighbors were the only ones to say whether the situation had improved enough. Both neighbors told the Board that the parking problem was not improved enough.

The Board noted that there are other business in the area and that some of the vehicles may belong to them, but the vehicles are parked on their site and are therefore the responsibility of Trucks of Quincy and Karl's Auto Body.

The board continued the hearing for three weeks in order to give the owner of Karl's Auto Body, Alan LeBrun, a chance to appear before the Board on the matter. The Board also told Trucks of Quincy to document the trucks parked in their area and the repairs being done on them before they come back before the Board.

License Board Rejects Quincy Ave. Takeout Restaurant

By JANE ARENA

The Quincy License Board Tuesday denied a request from Steven Gillig of Carver, to open a proposed take-out and home delivery only restaurant, U-Turn, at 199 Quincy Ave.

The board denied the request due to opposition from neighboring residents concerned about traffic problems in the area.

Atty. Peter Eleey, Council for Gillig, told the board that site plans and building plans showed that Gillig had designed the establishment so that cars would be able to enter, place their orders and pick up their food without causing a back up of traffic on Quincy Ave. He explained that cars would move around the rear of the building and re-enter onto Quincy Ave.

Eleey also told the board that plans included demolishing an existing house at the location to construct a building which would be smaller in square footage than the existing house.

Gillig, who has been long active in Quincy civic organizations, the Rotary Club of Quincy, and the Quincy business community where he was co-owner of two McDonald's restaurants, has a long background in restaurant business, Eleey said.

Eleey also told the board that Gillig had the support of many prominent business and professional leaders in the city.

Among the many speaking in support of the proposal were: Robert Colman, president of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association (QCBPA), Medical Examiner Dr. William Ridder, Kenneth P. Fallon, Jr., past executive director of the QCBPA, George Riley, current executive director, QCBPA, Joseph Hennessey, Quincy businessman, Phyllis Godwin, owner of Granite City Electric, Inc. and member of the Quincy Rotary Club, and Anthony Siciliano, Deputy Director of the Quincy Civil Defense.

The Board also received letters of support from John P. "Jake" Comer of the Quincy Housing Authority, Bernie Reisberg, owner of Bernies Formal Shops, and a letter of approval signed by 29 other Quincy residents.

All those in favor of the proposed license told the board that Gillig was a well known and respected member of the community and that he could be trusted to adhere to city regulations.

"If Steve says he'll do something, he'll do it," many said.

Ward Two Councillor Ted DeCristofaro told the board that a meeting with neighborhood residents had been held Monday night and that only one couple had supported the proposal while 11 others in attendance were in opposition.

DeCristofaro told the board that the main reasons for neighborhood opposition were dangerous traffic conditions in the area of Quincy Ave., concerns that groups of youths frequenting Faxon Park at night may be drawn to the establishment and/or use the grounds as a short-cut to the park, and litter in the area.

Speaking in opposition at the meeting were: Mary Gaziano of Quincy Ave., and Rose O'Connell, also of Quincy Ave. Both women told the Board that the traffic in the area is "dangerous" and that they feel the proposed restaurant would add to the problem. Both women also said that they had no opposition to Gillig's idea, only to the proposed site.

Eleey told the board that Gillig had indicated he would close the establishment's intended "walk-up window" for pedestrians at 9 p.m. to ensure that youth in the area did not frequent the restaurant at night, and that he was willing to construct a fence around the grounds so that it would not be used as a short-cut to the park. Eleey also said the Gillig would instruct his staff to "police the area" for litter daily and clean any littered yards in the neighborhood.

In regard to the traffic problems, Eleey said that, due to the proposed location at the crest of the hill on Quincy Ave., the visibility for oncoming traffic was not impaired and that the traffic conditions would not be worsened by the restaurant. He also said that Gillig would be willing to work with the city on any traffic problems.

The board noted that the location is zoned as Business "B," and the use is permitted in the area. They noted also, however, that a business of this type may generate more traffic in the area than another type of business.

The board denied the license due to strong neighborhood opposition to the traffic situation.

Board Chairman John Gillis said that he is not opposed to the idea of the restaurant, and that he had voted in favor of Gillig in two past endeavors, but said that Quincy Ave. "is the wrong place for it."

J. THOMAS SMYTH, far left, of Central Protective Systems presents awards to Quincy Patrolmen John Foster, second left, and Philip Cheverie, center, as Lt. Jack Doyle, second right, and Captain Frederick Laracy, right, look on. Smyth also presented a $50 check to the Quincy Police Betterment Fund in the name of the two patrolmen who recently foiled a burglary attempt.

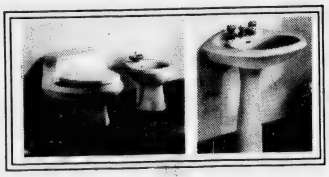
MDC Seeks Permission For Work On Town River

The Massachusetts Metropolitan District Commission is seeking permission from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to accomplish work along Town River in Quincy as part of the Town Brook Flood Control Project.

The work, which would mitigate for salt marsh lost in the construction of the project, consists of replicating one acre of salt marsh.



The application for the federal permit was filed with the Engineers in compliance with Section 10 of the Rivers and Harbors Act which provides for federal regulation of any work in, under or over navigable waters in the United States, and Section 404 of the Clean Water Act which regulates the discharge of dredged or fill materials in U.S. waters, including wetlands.

To assist in evaluating the proposed work, the Engineers are soliciting public comments. Written statements should be forwarded to their office no later than March 19.

Additional information may be obtained by contacting John Skarbek, the New England Division, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, 424 Trapelo Rd., Waltham, MA 02254-9149.

Urges Support For Water Pollution Control Bill

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The future of clean water in Massachusetts will be decided by the Legislature this year. The process will begin when the Natural Resources Committee holds a hearing on House Bill 1000, which would establish a $1.5 billion fund for municipal water pollution control projects.

In 1990, the federal government is scheduled to end its construction grants program for water pollution control. If the state does not provide new money, cities and towns in Massachusetts will no longer be able to build new sewer and water systems or upgrade old ones. The long-range consequences will be disastrous. We may find very soon that the only place to swim is in chlorinated pools and the only drinkable water is in bottles.

As the lead Senate sponsor of this bill, which was filed by Rep. Robert Emmet Hayes, I urge citizens concerned about the future of our water supplies to ask their legislators to support House Bill 1000.

HARD MARKET - SOFT MARKET

Generally speaking, insurance carriers will adjust their underwriting requirements based on previous history. If they are sustaining serious losses, they will tighten up on their requirements and increase their premiums, thereby creating a hard market. On the other hand, if profits are good, they will ease up on their requirements, lower their premiums and thereby create a soft market.

Have you noticed that at certain times, coverages seem to become prohibitive, while at other times there doesn't seem to be any problem? Well, 1985, 1986, and part of 1987 were problem periods, and premiums were at a high, but at this time there are strong indications that 1988 will be the year to examine your coverages and their costs.

If and when you do decide to see if you can reduce your premium dollars, it might be advisable to offer the underwriter a package of all your policies. By doing so, this will very often be an incentive for the insurance company to be more liberal in their offerings to you.

O'Connell Knocking On Doors

Quincy businessman Peter O'Connell who said he would take his campaign to the people, is doing just that.

It may be February, but O'Connell is already knocking on doors. He started last week in North Quincy. On his first day he got to approximately 200 residences although there wasn't someone home at all of them.

O'CONNELL

O'Connell, who has taken a leave of absence from his company, says he plans to knock on doors every day and hopes to reach every residence in the city.

What's the reaction so far?

"Favorable," he says. "The people I have talked with say they think I could provide good management for the city. And they indicate they are tired of just plain politics.

He says he was pleasantly surprised by those who said, "we really like Marina Bay."

"Development," O'Connell says, "may be an issue but it may not be our (O'Connell Management) development."

He found a general mistrust of the MWRA and a strong feeling that Quincy should be well compensated for having been selected as the site for the permanent sludge facility which is what O'Connell has been saying.

O'Connell has come away from the doors he has knocked on so far with this feeling:

"I think there is a very silent majority out there who will decide who will be the next mayor."

THERE'S BEEN SOME speculation that Joseph LaRaia will drop out of the mayor's race. Don't buy it.

LaRAIA

There's about as much chance of LaRaia getting out as there is of Paul Levy getting in.

One of LaRaia's top aides says he's heard one City Hall figure predicting that LaRaia won't file his nomination papers.

"That's absurd," he says. "We are getting a good reaction from people and money is no problem. Joe is going to be a strong candidate, he always is."

And, speaking of money, LaRaia has a fundraiser coming up Friday, April 7 at Morrisette Legion Post, West Quincy. Tickets are $10 each and may be obtained from Denise Lord (471-7049). They'll also be available at the door.

JOSEPH SHEA, a familiar former City Hall figure, will seek the Ward 4 City Council seat being vacated by James Sheets to run for mayor.

Shea was executive secretary to Mayor Walter Hannon from 1972-76, says he will formally announce shortly -- probably next week.

Shea reportedly has the backing of Bernice Mader, state Democratic Committeewoman and chairman of the Ward 4 Democratic Committee; Mario Traficante and Gail Kilcommons, all of whom had been mentioned as potential candidates for the Ward 4 seat.

MAY BE A third hat sailing into the City Council at-large ring soon. This one belonging to Atty. Kevin Burke.

K. BURKE

"I'm seriously considering it," he says.

But right now he has something more important on his mind. He and his wife Judith, are expecting their first child around Feb. 28.

"I won't make any decisions until after that," Burke says.

Burke, nephew of George Burke, former Norfolk County district attorney and city councillor, was involved in one of the closest elections in the city's history two years ago.

Making his first run for public office he lost a primary nomination for the Ward 5 City Council seat by one vote to John Keenan.

The other nomination went to Charles Phelan who went on to defeat Keenan in the final election.

INCIDENTALLY, both George and Kevin Burke had dinner with the Celtics Kevin McHale the other night at the Oyster Club, across from Boston Garden. George's wife, Sandy, four daughters and a few friends were also at the table. The dinner cost George $3500. That was his winning bid for dinner with McHale and for McHale's No. 32 jersey in an Easter Seals Fundraiser.

G. BURKE

McHale autographed the jersey: "To the original No. 32." That was Burke's number as a Celtics rookie some years ago.

Burke also wore that number while a standout at the University of Massachusetts. A fellow by the name of Julius Irving wore it after him and it was recently retired.

"Well, my number has been retired at U-Mass," mused Burke. "And someday it will be retired in Boston --"

McHale thought that would be a great honor for both of them.

Kevin Burke said he had another possible honor for McHale. If the first child Burke and his wife, Judith, are expecting is a boy, he told McHale, "we'll name him Kevin."

McHale roared with laughter knowing that the dad-to-be was also named Kevin.

McHale spent three hours with the group during which Danny Ainge and Jim Paxton dropped by and joined them.

The following day a personally autographed photo and a bouquet of flowers arrived at the Burke office from McHale with a card saying: "Thanks for a great time."

Lt. Robert Kelley:

Last Of The Fire Dept's '48ers' Retires Feb. 28

By JANE ARENA

Lt. Robert Kelley, 65, of the Quincy Fire Department will officially retired Feb. 28 after 41 years of service — the last of the "48ers".

The "48ers" were a group of 130 men sworn into the department in 1948, after World War II when the department's work week was cut from 72 hours to 48 hours per week. In 1970, the work week went down to the current 42 hours. No larger group has been sworn in since.

"We had a good group," Kelley says of the 48ers. "It was a wonderful bunch of guys...Dick Walters, Jerry Galvin, Bobby Bennett, and so many others, I wish I could remember all the names...we stuck together."

Kelley, who was appointed coordinator of the department's hazardous waste division when it was started in 1987, has a long list of achievements and a large store of memories from his years in service.

Starting out as a firefighter, he was made lieutenent in 1964. He taught for 10 years in the Fire Science Program at Massasoit Junior College, covering instruction in arson investigation, fire prevention, and building construction for fire safety. He was then assigned to arson investigation and fire prevention in the department, where he stayed for 17 years.

"The chief asked me to help out (in fire prevention) on a temporary basis, and I was there for nearly 20 years," he says. "It was a highlight of my career. The chance to work with the public on a daily basis in fire prevention was just tremendous."

During that time he gave lectures and demonstrations to civic groups, boy scouts, girl scouts, senior citizens and many local organizations on fire safety and prevention. It is easy to note his pride when he speaks of the work, and he is certain that it's helped save lives.

He's helped save lives in more direct ways too.

In 1954, Kelley was staioned with Engine 6 in Houghs Neck. On a Saturday morning that fall, a man came into the station holding what Kelley remembers "looked like a rag doll," and told Kelley that his infant daughter had stopped breathing. Kelley used mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to save the baby's life.

"In a situation like that, you react to your training," Kelley says. "There's no thinking, you automatically react to the situation and instinct carries you through."

In the 1960's Kelley was awarded the Roll of Merit for rescuing a woman from a burning building. It was 1 a.m. when the call came in, he remembers, and when Kelley arrived there was a woman trapped in an upstairs bedroom. "I was lucky enough to get in there in time and pull her out," he says.

"That was one of the highlights of my career...that's why we take the oath, to protect the lives and property of the citizens."

Kelley remembers first wanting to become a firefighter when he was as young as 10 years old. He refers to the decision as "a kind of calling," and reflects that most firefighters he has known made the decision at a very young age. He explains that the image of a firefighter as a hero is common among little boys, but sometimes the image never leaves. His own son, James, 38, is a good example. He now serves in the Quincy department.

"Very few firefighters in my own experience have ever turned cynical," he says. "Any changes that are made over the years are only improvements, and the improvements will continue."

In his 41 years in service, Kelley saw a great many improvements in equipment and apparatus, in training techniques, and the role of fire safety and prevention education to the public.

Some of the improvements he sees as most valuable are bigger fire hoses, the use of closed circuit television in training, and enclosed cabs on the back of fire engines.

LT. ROBERT KELLEY of the Quincy Fire Department, the last of the "48ers," retires after 41 years of service.

And, although he remembers his share of standing up outside the back of a speeding fire engine, Kelley will tell you he has no regrets in 41 years.

"I've enjoyed every single minute of my career," he says, "I've enjoyed it tremendously...I have no regrets whatsoever."

"I've had a couple of injuries," he says, "and spent some time in the hospital, but your brain lets you forget that...I have no regrets."

Today he can look back with pride, a sense of true accomplishment and good memories, and he's looking forward to his retirement. His retirement plans include golfing, travelling, and relaxation, he says, and spending time with his wife, Jan, his seven children and 10 grandchildren.

"I'll miss the men I've worked with, 41 years is a long time, but I'm looking forward to it."

"I've always done the best I could," he says finally. "I've tried to serve with pride, honor and dignity, and I think I've accomplished that."

St. Valentine's Day Blizzard Snow Cost $34,629

City Treasurer Harold P. Newell announced that the total cost to the city for snow removal after the Great Valentine's Day blizzard would be $34,629.21.

Newell said the figure did not include $4,800 paid out of emergency funds at the height of the storm for the purchase of a new snow loader.

49 Years Ago

Meanwhile, City Auditor Leo E. Mullen refused to authorize payment of a $17,502.77 bill for the hiring of outside cleanup equipment, claiming the bills were not itemized.

But about 1,200 men, some of them relief recipients and WPA workers, were paid a total of $17,126.44 for cleanup work. They worked 27,400 man hours at 62½ cents an hour.

The storm which deposited up to 20 inches of snow that was whipped into drifts 10 to 12 feet deep by winds that reached 80 miles an hour, was called the worst blizzard of the century.

Shirley's Turkey Stuffed Peppers

Ever since my accident last October, a couple of people I know had about the same thing happen to them. This morning one of those people called me and as we were discussing our mutual problems, we began talking about how hard it was to prepare meals while in this condition.

My friend Shirley told me about a great recipe for stuffed peppers that I want to share with you today. She used ground turkey and said her family did not know the difference between that and ground beef!

SHIRLEY'S TURKEY STUFFED PEPPERS

One cup cooked rice half pound ground turkey four green peppers
1 egg (or use egg substitute as Shirley did)
1 cup seasoned bread crumbs
1 small stalk celery
1 small onion garlic powder
salt and pepper

Cut up the celery and onion and saute in oil or butter. Add the garlic powder, salt and pepper, turkey meat, the egg, and cooked rice. Cook until blended. At this point you spoon out the mixture and sort of roll it into the bread crumbs and then stuff the peppers.

Bake in a 350 degree oven covered for about 20 minutes, and then uncovered for about 10-15 minutes depending on the size of the peppers. If you prefer not to roll the mixture onto the bread crumbs, then just sprinkle the top of each pepper instead.

When I stuff peppers, if they are large, I cut the peppers in halves and they cook faster.d

Deadline March 4 For Daffodil Days Flower Orders

Saturday, March 4 is the last day American Cancer Society volunteers will be able to accept flower orders for Daffodil Days on March 21-22, said Pauline Sweeney, Daffodil Days co-chairperson in the Quincy/Milton communities.

Mrs. Sweeney said that the Quincy/Milton unit of the American Cancer Society has already received daffodil orders from local residents, businesses and clubs. "Our goal in Quincy and Milton is to raise more than last year's accomplishment of $25,000," she said.

"These flowers can bring a friend some of the cheerfulness of spring while helping in the fight against cancer," Sweeney said.

A minimum contribution of $4 will buy a bouquet of 10 daffodils, and $200 will buy a box of 500.

Mrs. Sweeney and her husband, Dennis, director of the Sweeney Funeral Home in Quincy, co-chair the Daffodil Days program in the Quincy/Milton area on behalf of the American Cancer Society. This is the sixth straight year they have sponsored the project.

Last year, Quincy/Milton elementary school students raised $12,500, half of the unit's total funds collected. Students from the community schools will be participating in the sales effort again this year.

"Because the daffodil is the first flower of spring, it is the American Cancer Society's symbol of hope that cancer can be beaten," said Joyce Kulhawik, WBZ-TV personality who is serving as honorary state chairperson of Daffodil Days. She added that the money raised during Daffodil Days will be used to fund researchers who are making constant progress in the prevention, detection, and treatment of cancer, as well as cancer education programs and service to cancer patients.

"In Massachusetts, volunteers are working to raise $600,000 for the American Cancer Society's cancer control programs," Sweeney said.

"For the people of Quincy and Milton to be part of this event, they must order flowers by March 4."

Daffodils can be ordered by calling 773-8226.

Helps Youngsters Exercise

Quincy Moose Lodge Donates Treadmill To St. Coletta's

By Jane Tamburri-Spitz

"Okay Lisa, lift those feet, keep moving. You've got it!"

Spoken by adapted physical education teacher Teddy Jacobs those encouraging words mean a lot to Lisa, a student at Braintree St. Coletta Day School.

"It's difficult to get some of our students to exercise. Once they begin to jog, for instance, it can be tough to keep them at it," said Jacobs, who for five years has been teaching special needs students at St. Coletta's.

The new $700-treadmill, purchased by the school with money donated by the Quincy Moose Lodge, helps maintain youngsters' interest in exercise and fitness. While walking, jogging or running, students like 13-year-old Lisa Scales of Quincy, read their speed, pulse rate, mileage covered and calories burned. Upbeat music from a boom box, also donated by the Lodge, is a welcome accompaniment to the exercise machine.

JIM INGLIS, Quincy Moose Lodge Prelate, St. Coletta's adapted physical education teacher Teddy Jacobs, student Lisa Scales, and Moose Lodge Legion Chairman Bernie Murphy with tread-mill donated by the Moose Lodge.

"I have one student, a heavyset boy, who would sit against the wall and refuse to participate. Now he throws his coat down, jumps on the treadmill and for 20 minutes walks at a brisk pace," Jacobs enthused.

It was several months ago while he lay in a hospital bed recooperating from heart surgery that the idea of buying a piece of exercise equipment for the school came to Burnie Murphy, Legion Chairman for the lodge.

"We've been giving St. Coletta's kids a Spring Party for the past eight years — complete with a puppet show, clowns, refreshments — because we (members of the Quincy Moose Lodge) wanted to do something local," said Murphy.

The generous donation of nearly $800 was an extension of this commitment to contribute to a worthwhile organization serving the community.

The majority of the 93 developmentally delayed students enrolled at St. Coletta Day School are benefitting from the latest piece of exercise equipment. Not only does it help increase endurance, promote cardiovascular health and overall fitness, but the carry over value is significant for students.

"After they leave here, they'll be more likely to join a gym because of the interest and familiarity with such equipment," concluded Jacobs.

Can You Name That Ice Cream Shop?

Gregory Hanley, 23, of Quincy, will open an ice cream shop at the Quincy Fair Mall, 1591 Hancock St. at the end of March.

He's got plenty of good ideas for the shop, but no idea of what to call it, so he's leaving that up to someone else.

"I've been racking my brain for months," he says, "but I can't come up with anything."

Instead, Hanley is holding a "name the store contest."

Readers are invited to submit their own ideas for a name.

The shop will also sell frozen yogurt, chocolates, fudge, speciality candies and small gift items.

Participants may submit as many names as they can think of, but only one name will end up in lights.

The winner will be notified by Hanley on March 17, St. Patrick's Day. But that's not where the contest ends.

The winner will then select four friends to join him or her in an ice cream eating contest against a team of five Quincy officials. The contest will be held at the shop on opening day. Whichever team eats the most ice cream in a three minute period will receive a $100 gift certificate to the shop. Even split five ways, that's a lot of ice cream.

Hanley said that if the city team wins the contest the $100 will be donated to a local charity. "No matter who wins, nobody loses," he said.

Participants should send entries in to Quincy Frozen Desserts, P.O. Box 533, Quincy, MA 02269 before March 17.

Entries may also be dropped off in person at the office of the Quincy Sun, 1372 Hancock St. Be sure to include full name and phone number with all entries.

Marianns Meat Raffle

St. Ann's Marianns will sponsor a meat raffle on Wednesday, March 1, at 8 p.m. at St. Ann School Hall, 1 St. Ann Road, Wollaston.

This is open to the public.

Cheney Wants Merrymount Traffic Study

(Cont'd from Page 1)

After compiling the survey data and meeting with the association, the following recommendations were drafted:

- Four three-way stop signs to be placed at these intersections: Norton Rd. and Algonquin Rd.; Norton Rd. and Chickatabot Rd.; Chickatabot Rd., Narragansett Rd. and Shore Ave.; and Victoria Ave. and Shore Ave.

Cheney wants these installed for a 90-day trial basis.

- Crosswalks be placed at each intersection where stop signs are requested.
- Slow School Zone and 20 MPH signs be posted at frequent intervals on all streets within 200 yards of the Merrymount School and Perkins Field.
- Slow-Curve and Playground signs be posted, as appropriate, on Shore Ave.

Cheney has also met with Dr. Robert Ricci, superintendent of Public Schools, regarding empty school buses, other than those returning from the Merrymount School, not be allowed to use Merrymount as a short cut.

Also included in Cheney's traffic survey was a question asking residents if they approve of the recently installed four-way stop signs. All but one resident approved, he said.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

"I was summoned by my country, whose voice I can never hear but with veneration and love." These words were spoken on April 30, 1789, by a tall, tired man. After losing many battles, but winning a war, he had hoped to retire from public life to his beautiful and beloved home on the banks of the Potomac.

His countrymen, though, needed George Washington in peace even more than in war. They called upon him to lead their infant republic forward.

How Washington responded to the summons is described in his Inaugural Address. In an eloquent passage, the first President of the United States gave his countrymen of that day and of our own day a responsibility which should always guide Americans: "The preservatin of the sacred fire of liberty and the destiny of the republican model of government are justly considered as deeply and finally staked on the experiment entrusted to the hands of the American people."

We Americans have preserved this heritage; its future rests in our hands today, as surely as when the Father of His Country gave his trust to those who heard him on April 30, 1789. We, like Washington, are summoned by our country to preserve "the sacred fire of liberty."..

Quincy Sun Car Care Guide

ALL GASOLINES ARE NOT CREATED EQUAL—The gas pump is a great place for taking control of your car's performance. A good gas can make the difference in areas like driveability and car noises—particularly on newer cars which demand quality gasolines like Chevron (above), which is also marketed under the Gulf name in Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas and Oklahoma.

Gas pump best place to keep cars good as new

There's a lot of excitement at your neighborhood boulevard of car dealers. The 1989 cars are making their debut, and chances are you or one of your friends is looking to make a purchase.

You may have begun reviewing your finances, future plans and other factors which could influence your buying decision. Or you've been watching television and reading the paper, and are beginning to wonder if that model you're seeing is right for you.

But even if you don't buy a new car, there are several ways you can take charge of your car's ability to run as smoothly as it did the day you first drove it home.

"The best place to take control of your car is at the gasoline pump," says Lewis Gibbs, senior engineering associate with Chevron Research Company, the company that develops gasoline products available at Chevron stations coast to coast, and Gulf stations in Texas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Arkansas and New Mexico.

"It's really important to pump a gasoline that makes a difference," says Gibbs. "Today's cars demand a gasoline that can deliver performance. A good gasoline can clean an engine fuel intake system—including keeping the car free of valve deposits."

Here are a few additional sure-fire tips that will help you save fuel and make your car last even longer:

• Avoid lengthy warm-up idling. Once your engine is running smoothly, begin driving—gently. On cold winter days, this may take a bit longer.

• Accelerate slowly and smoothly. Avoid jackrabbit starts and plan your driving so as to keep stop-and-go driving to a minimum.

• Do not rest your foot on the clutch or brake pedal. What appears harmless actually can cause needless wear and tear, overheating and poor fuel economy.

• Keep the front wheels in proper alignment. Avoid hitting curbs and be sure to slow down on rough roads. Poor alignment not only wears down your tires but can reduce fuel economy.

• Keep your tires inflated at the proper pressure. Under-inflated tires not only cause wear and waste fuel, but also can be unsafe.

• Get your car ready for winter. Changes in temperature are just around the corner. Get a jump on winter by checking your battery, cables, cooling system and ignition system, including spark plugs. And be sure to check the wiper blades, and use a windshield washer fluid with an antifreeze solution.

"These tips may seem basic, but you'd be surprised how often people don't follow them," says Gibbs. "But owners of both new and older cars will find their cars deliver a higher level of performance if they follow them."

Don't blame the battery when your car won't start

It's possible the best never-say-die battery won't get your car started this winter.

The reason, according to The Gates Rubber Company, is that not all engine parts and systems are as maintenance-free. But, you can prepare for the effects of cold weather with the following helpful tips:

1) Buy the best battery you can afford when it's time to replace it, about every three years. Cheap batteries have a lower power reserve. Remember, a battery will lose 35 percent of its cranking power at 32°F. and 50 percent at 0°F.

2) Check the condition, tightness and cleanliness of the battery posts. The electrical resistance that develops when a battery cable terminal is loose or badly corroded can cause a no-start problem.

3) Keep the gas tank full. This prevents condensation of moisture in the tank, which leads to fuel line freeze-up.

4) Use the correct grade of winter motor oil for your area of the country. Most vehicle manufacturers recommend a thinner 10W-30 multi-viscosity oil to reduce engine part wear during the winter.

5) Consider a minor engine tuneup, including checks of the charging and starting systems, spark plugs, ignition wires and the choke.

Wet or cold winter weather increases deficiencies in ignition components, and worn spark plugs easily require twice the electricity of new ones. If the choke is not operating properly, the engine will crank slowly and will be hard to start.

6) Rust, seeping antifreeze and just plain old crud in the cooling system can cause your engine to crank sluggishly or not at all.

The system should be flushed out and new coolant added every other year. This also is the most convenient time to check the radiator hoses, and replace those that are soft or that show exterior cracks.

7) Check all V-belts, especially the alternator drive, says The Gates Rubber Company. The alternator should carry most of the electrical load, thereby reserving battery power for starting the engine and operating emergency accessories. If the belts have not been replaced in four years, they could fail at any time.

Frustrating Season Ends For Quincy

The most frustrating season for the Quincy hockey team came to an end Monday when the Presidents were walloped by Waltham, 11-2.

The Presidents, vastly outmanned in every game, ended with a 1-18 record and prospects for next year are not much better.

"We had a small turnout of 27 this year and in many games we had players out with illnesses or injuries and we just couldn't cope with the other teams' depth," said coach Bob Sylvia. "In the last game we had just two lines, three defensemen and two goalies. Waltham used a fourth and even a fifth line and even those kids scored. I had several freshmen playing varsity all year long. We don't have many players returning and things continue to look dark for next season."

Freshman Shane Abboud and Jim Marini scored the goals at Waltham with Tim Mann having two assists and Steve McInnis one.

In their previous game, a replay of the game blacked out by a manhole explosion in Cambridge, the Presidents lost, 7-4, with freshman Scott MacPherson and Mann, the team's leading scorer with over 30 points, scoring two goals each. Each assisted on one of the other's goals.

Earlier Quincy lost to Suburban League champion Brookline, 12-4, with Mann scoring twice and Eric Seamans and Mark Cafano once each.

North Routed In Finale By Brockton

The North Quincy hockey team, which failed to qualify for the state tournament for only the second time in six years, ended its season Monday when it was routed by Brockton, 11-4, giving it a final record of 9-9-1, 6-6 in the Suburban League.

In their previous game Kevin Jago's Raiders dropped a heartbreaking 4-3 decision to league champion Brookline, ending their tournament hopes, and they were unable to get up for the finale.

"The kids just didn't have their hearts in it after their tough loss to Brookline," Jago said. "I used everyone and Brockton came out firing after a stunning loss to Newton North.

"They tried hard and we lost a lot of tough games, and I couldn't ask any more of them."

Freshman Mark Kelleher scored two goals against Brockton and Paul McGrath and Brian Zimmerman one each.

North turned in one of its best efforts against Brookline and led, 3-2, with a little more than two and a half minutes to play. A questionable penalty call against North gave Brookline a power play and it tied the game. With 1:20 to play the league champs scored the winning goal, 4-3.

"I don't like to criticize the officials, but this was a very marginal call," Jago said. "I felt sorry for the boys, who played their most solid game of the year. It was a real tough one for them to lose."

Sal Manganaro, one of the top scorers in the league, Bobby Kane and McGrath scored the North goals and Jeff McClory played an excellent game in goal.

"I want to say a good word about Steve Sugarman, our backup goalie, who did a tremendous job for us while McClory was out with an injury," said Jago. "He played two and a half games and did an excellent job, keeping us in the games and keeping our tournament hopes alive."

In their previous game the Raiders were shut out by Waltham, 4-0.

North had its chances, but Waltham goalie Jim Mooney recorded his second shutout in a row, having 26 saves. In his previous game he had blanked Brockton and had 36 saves.

"He was outstanding and stopped a lot of tough shots," Jago said. "And hitting the post three times didn't help us."

Home Safety And Security

What You Can Do

By ROBERT HANNA
Crime Prevention Officer
Quincy Police Department

In the last six months:

Did you leave the front door or garage door unlocked while you made a quick trip to the grocery store?

Was it too much trouble to check the meter reader's identification before letting him in?

Did you forget to tell a neighbor that you were going away for the weekend?

If you answered "yes" ato any of these questions, you are making it easier for a thief to work in your community.

What can you do?

Good locks, simple precautions, neighborly alertness, and common sense can help prevent most property crimes.

Get together with your neighbors to keep an eye on each other's homes. Half of all burglaries occur during the day when alert neighbors could spot the thieves and call the police. Many neighborhoods have started "Neighborhood Watch Programs," which is a program of neighbors being the eyes and ears of the police and reporting anything suspicious to police immediately.

Locks, doors, and windows:

- Install good deadbolt locks in your doors, not the springlatch ones with the key in the knob, and USE THEM! (About 50 percent of burglars get in through unlocked doors and windows.)
- Avoid door locks that can be manipulated by breaking glass or door panels to reach inside.
- Lock double-hung windows by "pinning" them with an eight penny nail. You can do this by drilling a hole at a downward angle in each top corner of the inside sash and partway through the outside sash. When you install the eight penny nail the window is secured but can be opened quickly in case of an emergency.

Outside:

- Trim back all shrubbery that hides doors or windows. Cut back tree limbs that could help a thief climb into a second story window.
- Make sure all porches, entrances, and yards are well-lighted. In spite of today's high energy costs it only costs a nickel or so to burn a 30 watt bulb for twelve hours. And that's cheap security. But remember to turn the light off during daylight hours. This is an unmistakeable tip that no one is home to turn them off.

Key sense:

- Do not hide house keys in mailboxes, planters, or under doormats. Give a duplicate key to a trusted friend or neighbor in case you are locked out.
- Do not put any personal identification on key rings.
- If you lose the keys to your home or move, change the locks immediately.

If you would like to start a Neighborhood Watch program in your area, please call me at 479-1212 ext. 368 and I will assist you in any way that I can. If we all work together we surely can "Take A Bite Out Of Crime."

WEEK OF: February 23

BIRTHDAY THIS WEEK
You're known for your imagination and creativity. You can be a little unrealistic, and some say you're too easily influenced by the ideas of others. Influential peoples cross your path several times over the next 12 months, leading to the possibility of key strides in career, finance, and relationships.

AQUARIUS — January 21 - February 19
Career goal appears in view - - but this is a critical time for avoiding impulsive moves. Social events on weekend offer chance to make important contact. Friends are usually upbeat.

PISCES — February 20 - March 20
Local travel may include an opportunity for acquiring a long-sought-after object. Your offbeat plans suddenly win the attention of an old-fashioned type. Watch a too-imaginative streak.

ARIES — March 21 - April 20
Sporty activities are highlighted through the week - - you enjoy the role of spectator and/or participant. A loved one's resolutions have a positive effect on your life.

TAURUS — April 21 - May 22
Not too late to make resolutions; in fact, those made now have a good chance of being kept. Intellectual achievement leads to improved status. Loved one is usually outspoken.

GEMINI — May 23 - June 21
Friends return favors - - but some strings may be attached. Avoid extremes this week. News from a neighbor is more intriguing than the news you receive from faraway corners.

CANCER — June 22 - July 22
The maneuvers of an anonymous admirer help you make strides on the job. Look for interesting outlets for creative expression. Family member may be unexpectedly preachy.

LEO — July 23 - August 22
You take on a key leadership role, which earns the renewed respect of family and friends. Romance is on the horizon. Finances demand a thorough review. News-brightener arrives after weekend.

VIRGO — August 23 - September 22
Job procedures are changing and community events take place at breathtaking speed. Overall, it's a tough week for keeping up-to-date. Financially, though, it can be a winner.

LIBRA — September 23 - October 22
If planning a function, review guest list meticulously to ensure that you're not omitting an obvious guest. Your charm helps avert a work crisis. Hard work pays off generally.

SCORPIO — October 23 - November 21
Good week for updating wardrobe, cleaning out closets, and taking inventory. Friend is surprisingly generous with information and even cash. Pets figure delightfully in the picture.

SAGITTARIUS — November 22 - December 22
Enjoy opportunity for putting newly acquired skill to use. Platonic relationship is highlighted; make sure partner is aware of the level of your involvement. Family member is committed to your project.

CAPRICORN — December 23 - January 20
Home improvement or other such project may be delayed, but work or educational pursuits are accelerated. You may be asked to take on the role of lecturer or guest speaker.

BORN THIS WEEK
February 23rd, actor Peter Fonda; 24th, singer Renata Scotto; 25th, singer George Harrison; 26th, actor Tony Randall; 27th, actress Joanne Woodward; 28th, actress Bernadette Peters; March 1st, singer Harry Belafonte.

McGrath Urges MWRA Suit

city should continue to very, very vigorously fight this siting decision.

"Just because the board members of the MWRA have voted against what I think is the best interest of the City of Quincy, we should definitely take a very aggressive stand and continue to battle this disastrous decision," McGrath said, adding that the city should "move as rapidly as possible" to bring a lawsuit against the MWRA.

"I think we have an obligation to the citizens of the City of Quincy to do all that we can in order to stop this siting decision," he said.

McGrath also stated the Solicitor's Office should be preparing to file suit "immediately because I feel we don't want to give the MWRA the impression that we are going to take this."

As chairman of the council's Finance Committee, McGrath said he has assured the mayor that "any appropriation order that comes in order to take this legal battle to the courts will receive very, very quick action by my committee."

Asked if there is a limit to his support for funding for a lawsuit, McGrath replied, "I really don't want to get into commenting on a limit above which I would not spend any money.

"My position is that we ought to do all that we possibly can in order to vigorously prosecute a lawsuit of that nature. We don't do ourselves justice when we get into dollar figures above which we will not go. This is the type of thing that is almost impossible to put a dollar value on," he said.

Furthermore, McGrath said, "Who can measure the dollar value of having a cleaner environment down in that area and other sections of Quincy.

"The point is the MWRA doesn't like delay or dissension. I think all the delay and dissension that we can bring forth against them at this point in time definitely serves the best interest of the City of Quincy," he said.

Finn To Explain At Council Meeting

Police Cuts Hit By Patrolmen

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Facing a $250,000 deficit in the department's personal services budget, Quincy Police Chief Francis Finn has cut into the number of police officers on city streets to offset the shortfall, drawing sharp criticism from the city's Police Patrol Officers Association.

Under a policy recently instituted by Finn, the number of police officers on the street has been reduced. Some cruiser and walking beats are going unfilled instead of being covered by officers on overtime.

Members of the police patrolmen's association are criticizing the move, saying the chief should go to Mayor Francis McCauley for a supplemental budget to cover the deficit. If Finn won't go to the mayor for more funding, then he should consider retiring, the organization said.

On Tuesday, Finn made his only statement, saying he will address the issue before the City Council in a public forum.

"I expect to be called before the Public Safety Committee of the City Council and I will comment then in the public forum. I will address the issues in the public forum," he said.

The next meeting of the City Council is Monday, March 6.

If fully funded, the department should field a special investigation team, 13 police cruisers and at least three walking beats. Twelve of the 13 cruisers would have one officer while the other would have two for the Germantown area.

The three walking beats cover the business districts of Norfolk Downs, Wollaston Center and Quincy Square.

To cover the $250,000 deficit, Finn has ordered a progressive series of cuts that will occur if officers call in sick, are on vacation or attending continuing education classes.

The reductions include first deploying the special investigators from their assigned duties to drive or walk a beat, then eliminating a patrol car in Squantum, Adams Shore, Merrymount and West Quincy. Which district would be eliminated in which order depends on the time of week and the time of day.

Police cars from other sections would be expected to

Varsity Club Parking Complaints Aired At License Board

By JANE ARENA

The Quincy License Board continued indefinitely a hearing concerning parking problems at the Varsity Club, Restaurant, 33 Independence Ave.

The hearing was requested due to complaints from neighboring businesses and residents that customers of the establishment are parking in other lots in the area and on the street instead of in the rear parking area of the club.

Ward 4 Councillor James A. Sheets told the board that he has also had complaints of noise in the area at night as patrons are leaving the restaurant. He said that he understands the "difficulty involved in controlling people who leave clubs," but said that he "won't tolerate people's lives being disrupted," referring to the residents in the neighborhood.

Atty. Mark Reed, representing Varsity Club owner, John A. Perette, told the board his client has taken steps to eliminate the parking problems by erecting signs directing customers to the rear parking lot and keeping a police detail on duty to eliminate the noise.

The board noted that the police detail is hired to patrol the inside of the restaurant, not the outside.

Sheets told the board that the area, although zoned for a business, the proximity of a residential neighborhood makes it the wrong area for "this type of club with a younger crowd."

He told the board that the previous establishment at the address, the Alpine Restaurant, was family-oriented and did not have such an adverse impact on the neighborhood.

Perette told the board that the Varsity Club also caters to families and serves food until 11 p.m.

The board heard from neighboring residents and businesses who had complaints about the establishment—

Mrs. Audrey Martin, who for five years has lived behind the CVS parking lot located across the street from the club, told the board that she has called the police "several times" to complain about the noise when patrons, who park in the lot, leave the club at night. She said that the

DeCristofaro Opposes Police Patrol Cuts

Concerned over the potential impact on traffic and public safety if police presence is reduced in Quincy, Ward 2 Councillor Theodore DeCristofaro has voiced his strong opposition against any cuts in police coverage.

In a letter to Police Chief Francis Finn DeCristofaro said—

"Many areas in Ward 2 come to mind and I particularly refer to the intersection of Washington Street and the Southern Artery — if one could imagine this intersection without an officer on duty during peak hours, it could only be described as horrendous.

"Of utmost importance are the children going to and from St. Joseph's School who must cross at this intersection. There are also two churches close to the area and it would be extremely difficult for senior citizens to cross the intersection without a police officer on duty."

DeCristofaro also referred to a beat officer to be assigned to the Lower Point.

"In the interest of public safety, this is absolutely vital to the residents in this area. There have been long-standing problems with young people loitering and causing numerous problems to area residents in the Lower Point and this problem needs to be addressed — the only solution is a beat officer.

"I would like to voice my strong opposition to any cuts in police coverage in Ward 2 and for that matter in any other areas of our city," he said.

Sheets Wants 100 Acres Rezoned As Open Space

Ward 4 Councillor James Sheets has asked the Planning Department to prepare an order calling for the rezoning of most of the city-owned property located off Ricciuti Drive in West Quincy as open space.

Sheets said he plans to introduce the order at the March 6 City Council meeting.

The land, in excess of 100 acres, includes the former West Quincy landfill.

Sheets said he wants the land rezoned as open space so that it cannot be developed. If the order passes, the land will never be developed and the landfill will never be used again.

The area encompasses the landfill and includes some small isolated city-owned land as well. However, it does not include Swingles Quarry. Sheets said he wants to know whether or not rezoning the quarry will affect the possibility of filling in the site which has been the scene of about a dozen deaths over the years.

Moreover, he would like all the city-owned land located off Ricciti Dr. to be rezoned as open space by the end of the year. Sheets pointed out if this is done, there would be about 225 acres of open space, including the MDC's property, at the West Quincy site.

Board Suggests Notarized Letter From Parents On Liquor ID Cards

The Quincy License Board Tuesday made a motion to suggest to the Registry of Motor Vehicles and to the Alcoholic Beverage Commission that applications for liquor identification cards be accompanied by a notarized letter from a parent or guardian.

The board stated that a notarized letter was in order because anything notarized has a number on it which can be traced back easily to double check its authenticity. It would be difficult for minors to obtain liquor identification cards this way, the Board noted.

The board made a motion to suggest this measure to the Registry of Motor Vehicles in Quincy and to the Alcoholic Beverage Commission as either an option they may take or a mandate.

The board also noted that Sgt. Richard Laracy, City Liquor Inspector, is to be commended on this monitoring of liquor identification cards.

Selling Cut Flowers Outside Gas Station 'Unfair' To Florists

In a hearing Tuesday concerning license violations at the Texaco gasoline station at 500 Adams St., the Quincy License Board placed owner Stephen L. Giglio on a six month probationary period for the selling of cut flowers outside the station.

The hearing was called due to a complaint by the City Building Department. Building Commissioner Matthew Mulvey said it is the third complaint issued on the matter.

Ward 4 Councillor James A. Sheets told the board that there is no complaints stemming from the operation of the gas station, but that the complaint lies only with the selling of flowers outside the station.

The board said that a Transient Vendor License is needed for the use, but that this license is issued only when the vendors move from place to place. The gas station has no such license for outside sales. The board said the use is "unfair to florists in the city who are in the business of selling flowers."

Giglio was placed on a six month probationary period with the understanding that the station license may be revoked if the selling of flowers does not desist.

Tobin Faults Inmpact Findings On Sewer Connector

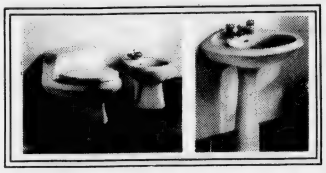
Rep. Steve Tobin has told Massachusetts Water Resources Authority officials that he faults the findings of the draft Environmental Impact Report on the Braintree-Weymouth Sewer Connector.

According to Tobin, the report indicates that option 4D, which is the deep rock tunnel with a North Weymouth Pumping Station, presents the least adverse environmental impacts. The report should conclude that the MWRA supports this option.

Instead, the MWRA has recommended pursuing another option, 1A, which has major adverse environmental impacts on the Germantown neighborhood. This option calls for a sewer pipe connector to be built through an acre of marshland in Germantown along Doane St.

"Essentially, the MWRA is pursuing the option which is less costly. In most cases that is an admirable motive," Tobin said.

"But the way I see it, the MWRA doesn't think the safety and convenience of our citizens and the protection of our salt marsh and clam beds in worth the expense. I find that attitude particularly objectionable," he said.



"The siting of the sludge treatment facility at the shipyard already has negatively affected the residents of Germantown. I cannot believe the MWRA doesn't feel the citizen's interests are best served by adopting option 4D, despite the higher cost in terms of dollars.

"The residents deserve better consideration. The cost to them cannot be measured in dollar terms. That is why the MWRA's cost comparison is so insulting," Tobin said.

Tobin also promised to fight the MWRA's efforts to Pursue any option other than option 4D.

"The residents of Germantown will be heard on this issue. I don't intend to allow the MWRA to disrupt the integrity of this neighborhood," he said.

Presidents' Place Parking Garage To Open Mid-May

The last piece of the Presidents' Place parking garage was put into place last Friday afternoon, setting the stage for a mid-May opening, said Paul Ricciardi, principle for the Riccardi Construction Company and project manager for the development.

Aided by a 220-foot crane, ground workers raised the concrete slab up to the final gap of the garage's top floor where other workers quickly rested the piece into place while a cold, swirling wind blew around them.

To commemorate the moment, a Christmas tree and five American flags, traditional for topping off ceremonies, were attached to the 60 foot-long by 6 foot-wide slab. The topping off marked the end of the construction phase which began last July with the excavation of the site.

The garage consists of 850 concrete and brick pre-cast and pre-stressed pieces. The pieces range in size from 30 to 60 feet long and weigh between 15 to 30 tons.

When it opens in May, the seven-level garage measuring 400 feet long by 125 feet wide will accommodate more than 1,100 cars.

"We're very happy," Ricciardi said. "The whole construction went very smoothly."

According to Ricciardi, the garage is being built to accommodate the $54 million Presidents' Place project located on the site of the former Bargain Center in Quincy Square. He said the entire project, consisting of two office buildings and condominium building as well as the garage, will probably be completed in the summer of 1990, about 18 months from now.

Ricciardi pointed out that a vast majority of the construction, including erection work and brick-laying, is being done by local workers, many from the South Shore.

The project is a joint venture by the Ricciardi Company and Campanelli Industries.

Riccardi thanked the surrounding neighborhood for their cooperation during the construction of the garage, especially Quincy High School and nearby administration offices.

"I want to thank the school department, especially Superintendent Dr. Robert Ricci, for their cooperation with the project and the teaching staff for rescheduling their parking to accommodate the erection of the job," he said.

Used Cars License Approved On Adams St.

The Quincy License Board Tuesday granted a request from Jeanne MacNeil for a Motor II license to sell two used cars at South Shore Wholesale Tire, 706 Adams St.

MacNeil told the board that no repairs would be done on the cars and that they would be stored inside the building which is owned by Don Delaney.

The Board noted that the area is zoned for business use and that the former establishment at the address, Comer Electric, was far busier than this type of business would be.

Ward Four Councillor James A. Sheets went on record in opposition to the license, saying that the area is already impacted with the Villa Rosa Restaurant and that "residents should not have to put up with" this business.

The Board issued strict restrictions on the license, stating that the hours of operation are to be from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., that no repairs be done, that the cars are kept inside at all times, that the number of cars be limited to two, and that no access from Wallace Road be allowed for the business, but access only from Adams St.

Auto Agency Zoning Violation Hearing Continued

By JANE ARENA

The Quincy License Board Tuesday continued for one week a hearing concerning a zoning violation at Bay State Volkswagen, Inc., doing business as Bay State Toyota, 625 Southern Artery.

The Board received a letter of complaint from Brian A. Leonard of Bentley's Steak House, saying that Bay State is using a salvage yard across the street from the car dealership which should not be used.

Atty. Mark Reed, representing Gerry Guthro, Vice President of Bay State Volkswagen, told the board that the yard is being used for the storage of cars and not for sales.

The board said that the salvage yard has been rezoned as Planned Unit Development (PUD) and that special permits are required for any use of the land.

Reed told the Board that his client has filed for a special permit and that the matter is scheduled to come before the City Council at Monday night's meeting.

In the meantime, the Board noted, the land is not supposed to be in use and its use is a violation of the Bay State License.

Building Commissioner Matthew Mulvey noted that the Building Department has served notices to Bay State in the past on the matter.

The board also noted that employees of Bay State Toyota park in the yard across the street and then have to cross back over Southern Artery which is a dangerous traffic area.

Guthro told the board that a solution to this would be for employees to cross at Field Street where there is a pedestrian crossing.

The board reiterated that any use of the land without a permit was in violation of the Bay State license.

Board Chairman John Gillis said, "You're extending your license across the street. You've got to abide by the rules."

He called the fact that Bay State has applied for the permit a "cart before the horse sort of thing" in that the establishment is already using the land without a permit.

The board continued the hearing for one week until after Monday night's City Council meeting to get the councillors' input on the matter.

LIFE INSURANCE -- DO YOU HAVE ENOUGH?

"Do I have enough life insurance?" has been asked over and over again. Generally speaking, you are the one to decide. Some like to use a "rule of thumb" concept, which says that if you own five times your annual income, that would be suffucient. An example would be, someone earning forty thousand dollars should own two hundred thousand dollars of life insurance. This is only a probable method and should not be considered exact, because your particular situation may warrant a different figure.

One way (and probably a safer way) to calculate your insurance needs is to sit down with a life insurance agent or a financial planner, and do a financial planning for you and your family. Based on the information that you give them, they will be able to calculate a true life insurance amount that is based on your individual needs, rather than using a "rule of thumb" method.

If you are considering protection get in touch with the insurance professionals at Riley & Rielly Insurance Agency, Inc. Please visit our office at 1050 Hancock Street in Quincy or give us a call at 471-6200.

LaRaia: 'Pulling Out All Stops'

Joseph LaRaia says he is going to campaign for mayor this year like the Joe LaRaia of 1975 did against Walter Hannon.

LaRAIA

"I'm going back to 1975 and pull out all the stops," he says. "It's going to be a grass roots campaign. Knocking on doors. Meeting the people. Raising the issues."

Fourteen years ago, he unseated Hannon in a bloody brawl and on a controversial recount by 483 votes.

HANNON

A few days after taking office, familiar faces began disappearing from City Hall as LaRaia weeded out holdovers from the Hannon and James McIntyre administrations. It was dubbed "The January Massacre" because so many went so fast — like machine gun style.

"That was a bum rap," LaRaia insists, referring to the word massacre.

"Every mayor wants his own team," he says. "I wanted mine. Most of the people I let go, I called into my office and told them I would be making changes. And I offered them time to find new jobs.

But, he says, he would do things a little differently if elected this year.

"It would be an orderly transition," he says. "I don't think I would make any changes outside the immediate area of the mayor's office.

"I would want my own administrative aides and law office but I would keep most of the people in the other departments.

But, he says, any present City Hall executives who are out campaigning for mayoral candidates or hoisting political signs for them, would be the first to go if he were elected.

"How could you keep them knowing their loyalty is with someone else?"

There have been reports LaRaia has lost campaign supporters to other candidates.

"Well," he says. "I had an organizational meeting at the Sons of Italy Feb. 8. I invited the nucleus from my campaign two years ago. A good 125 of them showed up for the meeting."

He plans to beef up the organization this year.

There have also been speculations that he might have trouble raising money. He doesn't think it will be a problem.

In fact he has two fundraisers coming up.

The first is March 10 at the Sheraton Tara, Braintree. This one is by invitation at $500 a pop, for mainly business and professional people.

That will be followed April 7 with another one at Morrisette Legion Post with tickets down to $10. This one is for "the average voter."

He says there will probably be another fundraiser in May or June.

LaRaia figures that an effective campaign this year will cost in the neighborhood of $75,000.

But he feels he, for one, can run a good campaign without that amount.

He points to his strong recognition factor — something he doesn't have to spend money on.

The recognition factor is strong enough, he says, to offset any financial difficulty if there were one.

"People know who I am. I don't have to buy recognition. And once the campaign is really underway, people will know where I stand. I have never been a quiet candidate. And I won't be a quiet one this year."

He has another thought on campaign money.

"Sometimes," he says, "you can raise too much money. The more money you get the more special interests go into City Hall with you when you take office."

LaRaia says he will open his campaign headquarters this week at 57-A Coddington St., a basement level across from Quincy High School but visible from the street. It is in the same building where his real estate office is located but is separate of that office.

The address may be a good omen, he hopes. He'll be 57 in August.

LaRaia says he will spend a lot of time in all sections of the city, including Ward 4 where he has been a strong vote getter but this year has Councillor James Sheets, another mayoral candidate, to contend with.

SHEETS

He concedes that Sheets, a popular 16-year ward councillor, could take some votes away from him in West Quincy.

But he thinks Sheets' candidacy could be a blessing in disguise for him.

"You can fall into a complacency and not realize it before it's too late," he says. With Jim Sheets running out of Ward 4, I know I can't afford to be complacent about votes I have gotten there in the past. It will make me campaign harder."

This will be LaRaia's fifth run for mayor.

McINTYRE

His first time out in 1965 he was crushed by McIntyre who succeeded Amelo Della Chiesa.

"I think that was a premature run," he says, indicating he should have waited awhile before going into the main political arena.

He waited 10 years after that and defeated Hannon in the famous recount. Two years later he was ousted by Arthur Tobin. And just two years ago, lost to incumbent Francis McCauley by a mere 460 votes.

Does he think people might be getting a little tired of seeing his name on the ballot?

"Not from the reaction I'm getting," he says.

He sees a close primary race between himself, Sheets, Councillor Steve McGrath and businessman Peter O'Connell. He thinks June will be the first opportunity to take a strength reading.

He feels he has a good shot at nailing down one of the nominations but "I'm not taking anything for granted."

If he doesn't make it this year, would that be it?

Would he retire from the political ring?

"If you're asking me if I would ever rule myself out in the future, I would probably say, 'no'. You just don't know about the future. You should always wait and see."

But, he adds, he has a successful business and would never have to depend on politics.

But, he likes politics.

So?

THREE JOURNALISTS from West Africa visited Quincy recently to attend the City Council meeting to observe government at the local level. The Council's agenda was unusually cut and dry that evening, so Senator Paul Harold who was accompanying the group took them to the Youth Hockey rink to catch the last game of the night of the Quincy Kiwanis hockey tournament. None had ever seen an ice rink or skating.

HAROLD

"To say the least, they were fascinated with the game," said Harold.

Beverly Reinhardt, rink manager and co-ordinator of the tournament extended a special welcome to the visitors, making sure each one sported a QYHA-Kiwanis badge before they left.

NQHS Biology Teacher Completes Educational Cruise

Fred Cawthorne, North Quincy High School biology teacher, recently completed a nine-day educational cruise to the Bahamas with his son, David, accompanying him.

They were among students, professors and alumni from Eastern Nazarene College who completed the ENC Tropical Marine Biology Course aboard the 125-foot full-rigged, two masted schooner Research Vessel Westward.

The group lived and learned at sea from Jan. 28-Feb. 5. In addition to diving expeditions, night time marine specimen collections and island explorations, the group acted as crew, swabbing the deck, keeping watch, and setting sail.

The Research Vessel Westward is owned and operated by the Sea Education Association of Woods Hole. It carries a crew of ten scientists (mates) and approximately 24 students (crew) on each cruise. Usually the course runs 12 weeks, but the nine-day excursion was arranged by ENC's Dr. Phil McLaren.

Credit for the course was finalized by the completion of a three-hour exam. Cawthorne successfully sailed through the test, docking high marks and bringing back to North Quincy High a sea of classroom enrichment material.

How Many Condos Is Too Many Condos?

Editor, The Quincy Sun,

Seven people recently turned out for an information meeting at Quincy City Hall on Phase III of The Falls condominium project to be located at the junction of Southern Artery and Quincy Avenue.

An official for the developers, Fox Associates, assumed the low turnout means most residents are, apparently, satisfied with the project and confident with the developer's plans for the 1062-unit condominium community. Ward Two City Councilor Ted DeCristofaro told the Patriot Ledger most of the abutters to the complex have worked out their problems with the project. Said the city councilor, "We have no problem with Fox Associates. The city has worked with them before and they have been good to us."

First, the councilor should not be using the pontifical "We" and to whom are the "Us" he makes reference in his statement? Assuming that the low turnout means acceptance is a highly speculative assumption that may have very little validity to it. One could just as easily assume that many folks have just given up any realistic hope in affecting the future of The Falls project.

As a relative newcomer to the City of Quincy, it seems to me that a green light has, apparently, been given to condo developers to march through marsh and blast through granite in the question of saturating Quincy with this form of housing. How many condos is too many condos? And is anybody on the city council or planning board recognizing the growing danger of overdevelopment and the impact more and more condominium developments are having on the city's sewage and water supply, or the city's quality of life?

The Ward 2 councilor also states he has concerns with the company's plans to redesign the intersection of Quincy Ave. and Southern Artery and that proper traffic signals and curb provisions must be included. I'd be concerned too, this traffic junction by Eddie's Diner and the Fore River Lincoln-Mercury dealership is already one of the worse on the South Shore and the real question and concern to be addressed is why Fox Associates, even, planned their access road at this junction. The last thing anyone needs is more cars emptying into this traffic mess.

Finally, an official for the development team says, "The project calls for the preservation of open space and it will transform the quarry into a green, lavish community."

Gimme a break! Who's trying to kid whom here? The developer isn't necessarily trying to beautify Quincy, the developer is trying to build a profit-making condominium project and the only thing green and lavish will, probably, be the color of money from the sale of nearly 1100 condo units. There's an old saying, "The bigger they are, the harder they fall." In the case here, the bigger they are (The Fallls is larger than the Marina Bay project), the harder it is to accept The Falls as anything less than the seemingly endless continuation of the pre-occupation with overdevelopment of Quincy's condominium market.

They Would Blame Dukakis For Pearl Harbor If They Could

Editor, The Quincy Sun,

Often it seems that voters have short memories. Politicians know this, and use it to their advantage, coasting to easy re-elections because no one seems to remember what a poor job they've done.

This has been apparent lately as Democrat legislators try to outdo one another in heaping blame on Michael Dukakis. Since he's now a lame duck, not to mention a politically dead one, these legislators are assigning total blame to him for the budget deficit, the swarm of 03 consultants, excessive spending and higher taxes. They would apparently blame him for Pearl Harbor if they could. Like rats leaving the proverbial sinking ship, they're climbing all over one another to distance themselves from his mess.

Now I'm no fan of Mike Dukakis, but it's worth noting that these critics did not dare to say a word against the Duke or his spending programs last year when they had visions of him in the White House dispensing favors to them. Now he is their favorite target.

Please let us remember that all the spending that went on had to be voted for (rubber-stamped) by these same legislators, the crew that took the six-month vacation last summer and fall so the Duke's questionable management skills wouldn't receive too much public scrutiny.

Unfortunately, as I said, voters seem to have short memories, and as a result, most of these characters were re-elected in November. Too bad that the voters didn't stop to remember who created the MWRA, voted funding for extravagant pork barrel programs, and then voted to hike our taxes, fines and fees to pay for all of it. It wasn't Dukakis.

In most cases it was your friendly local state representative, and all the blame-shifting in the world won't change that. If they knew what they were doing they share the Duke's guilt. If they say they didn't know, they are either liars or incompetents.

Pupils To Purchase Flag For USS Quincy

March 2-8
1936
53 Years Ago

The 15,000 pupils in the Quincy School System were asked to contribute a penny apiece to purchase a city flag for the cruiser USS Quincy which was being completed at the Bethlehem Steel Co.'s Fore River Shipyard.

Mayor Thomas S. Burgin said the collection of one cent -- no more -- from each youngster would be made in mid-March to cover the cost of the flag, estimated to be between $100 and $150.

Meanwhile, Rear Admiral Paul N. Dungan, the ranking Naval officer at the Yard, said Bethlehem could be fined for late delivery of the Quincy, which was promised for Jan. 3 but now appeared due for completion about May 1.

Fore River officials blamed the delay on a serious fire that kept workers off the job and damage to the ship's machinery caused when a foreign object was dropped into the gears, apparently accidentally.

CRANE TO SEEK BARE FACTS

The city buzzed with reports that nude women models were posing at a new art school on Hancock St. in the downtown area.

Mrs. Esther V. Purcell of the School Committee said there was nothing the School Board could do about it and she lamented that there was no Watch and Ward Society in Quincy to stand guard against such goings on.

City Clerk Emery L. Crane said that he had heard the reports, too, and promised to investigate them personally.

J. MICHAEL BRIGGS changes a flat tire for a motorist while patrolling the Southeast Expressway in his CVS/Samaritan van.

(Quincy Sun photos by Robert Bosworth)

SERVICE WITH A SMILE – CVS/Samaritan J. Michael Briggs helps a stranded motorist whose car ran out of gas during a recent morning commute on the Southeast Expressway by pouring some fuel into the car's empty tank.

Always Ready To Help

CVS/Samaritans Friends For Motorists

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

The small blue sign says it all:

"Strive to do as much quality good as you can for many people as you can with unconditional positive regard for all."

Placed above the rear view mirror inside the white CVS/Samaritan vans, the sign is the creed for the vans' drivers who assist thousands of stranded motorists every year along Boston, Providence and Albany highways.

The community service program, which began in 1978, is sponsored by CVS, the ninth largest drugstore chain in the United States with more than 750 stores. In the Boston area, the vans patrol Route 128, the Central Artery and the Southeast Expressway weekdays from 6:30 to 9:30 a.m. and from 3 to 6 p.m.

CVS/Samaritans are multi-talented professionals who are trained to assist people in emergency situations along assigned limited access highways. All drivers go through a 30-day training course in addition to an emergency medical technician (EMT) training program. They also drive for eight weeks under the supervision of a senior CVS/Samaritan.

Last year, drivers assisted 4,021 people in Boston while helping 3,860 people along Route 128. The program is free to those it assists.

The vans, which are designed for safety and temporary emergency repairs, resemble a mini garage equipped with:

- Gasoline, motor oil, transmission fluid and water.
- Spark plugs, distributor caps, radiator hoses and fan belts.
- Fasteners, wrenches, hydraulic jacks and other tools.

The front of the van is a communications station, with a citizen's band radio, a two-way state police radio, a radio to call in traffic reports, a telephone and a scanner.

The van is also equipped with emergency first aid equipments, push bar and tow ball.

Of course, without the driver, this operation would never work.

One driver, J. Michael Briggs, has been a CVS/Samaritan since August, 1986, primarily patrolling the Central Artery and Southeast Expressway.

In his two and half years behind the wheel, Briggs, 27, of Holbrook, has assisted at least one person per shift every day but one. He averages six assists per shift, 12 assists per day.

The busiest times of year are the winter and summer, when the weather extremes are most likely to take their toll on automobiles.

During this time of year, Briggs said the most common breakdown is cars running out of gas.

"Cars running out of gas is more prominent now because gas burns quicker during the winter. A lot of people don't understand this," he says, adding that the van is equipped with six or eight gas cans.

As for the summertime, cars overheating is the most frequent problem he confronts.

Of course, some people might contend that just trying to drive through Boston is a problem in itself. Practically every motorist who has driven along the Southeast Expressway, Route 128 and the Central Artery is all too familiar with the traffic problems that frequent those roadways. Bottlenecks, irratic drivers, pot holes, breakdowns and other obstacles are a way of life for the Boston commuter.

But Briggs, who drives back and forth from Braintree to Storrow Drive several dozen times a day, doesn't mind the traffic conditions that make the boston commute interesting, to say the least.

"It's fun. It's a good job. I like helping people out. You're out here by yourself and there's no one to bother you. Somedays the weather is not the best but I don't mind," he says.

If you doubt his words, just check the van's odometer. Last year, he drove more than 31,000 miles along his 10-mile route, averaging 150 miles each day.

But the biggest reason Briggs is out there every morning and afternoon rush hour is that he enjoys helping people. The job "rewards you with both a good feeling from helping others and a feeling of self-satisfaction from knowing that everyday you can make a difference in people's lives."

Briggs said that very rarely does the traffic congestion displace his easy going, good-natured personality. But, he adds, "if I have to get to some place real quick. the traffic can be very aggravating.

"I've gotten calls where it's taken me two hours to get to (the scene) because of the traffic backup."

Things this winter have been "slow" for Briggs because the weather has been milder than usual. But on one recent, frigid Friday morning, the common winter car problems returned in a big way. During that morning's commute, Briggs came to the rescue of 12 people in three hours. His assistance included:

- Refueling two cars that had run out of gas.
- Changing two flat tires.
- Helping a trucker change the clogged fuel filter in his 18-wheeler.
- Jump starting a car owned by an MDC crossing guard in Dorchester.
- Giving another trucker car phone assistance.
- Checking two abandoned cars for any signs of engine trouble, break-in or a dead body. (Briggs said he has never come across a body but his partner, Tom Wolf of Quincy, who patrols Route 128, has found two.)

He also pushed a broken down car off the highway at the Freeport St.-Dorchester exit to a safe place off the highway. He then inspected the car and determined that the timing belt was gone.

Since this problem may require major repair work, Briggs offers the driver a ride to the nearest phone so that she can call for further help. She then climbs into the van, leaving her blue car behind.

"I'll give you a ride to Linda Mae's," Briggs says, referring to a restaurant in Neponset. "It'll be warm in there." "Okay," the young female replies. "That'll be great."

Before dropping her off, Briggs gives her the phone number of a nearby towing company just in case her car dealer can't come get her.

"They should be able to help you," he says, handing her the piece of paper with the number.

"Thanks for your help," she says , stepping out into the cold morning.

Briggs then drives his van to the nearest ramp and off he goes looking to help more motorists. With each assistance call, he greets the driver with a smile and often a laugh. Then he quickly goes to work.

It takes him about two minutes to give a car a gallon or two of gas and a simple carburator cleaning; three minutes to jump start a car and five minutes to change a flat tire.

Efficiency is the name of the game and Briggs plays it like a pro.

However, CVS/Samaritans are much more than car care professionals.

Being a CVS/Samaritan combines the best elements of helping others. The job requires you to be everything from counselor to mechanic to emergency medic," Briggs said, adding that he has been very fortunate to come across only a few bad accidents, none of them fatal.

And like any other job, Briggs has had his share of overtime shifts.

"Sometimes I'm out here nonstop from six in the morning until eight or nine at night."

He's even had a few repeat customers, "I had one guy that I helped twice in the same day--once in the morning and once in the evening."

If there are any problem spots on the expressway, Briggs says it would be the area near the South Station tunnel. For some unexplained reason, it seems more cars break down there than anywhere else on his route.

Furthermore, about a year ago, Briggs said a huge pot hole did a number on some cars just outside the tunnel.

"There were cars with two or three flats--there must have been 15 people out there on the side of the road."

As for advice to commuters who drive in, through and around Boston, Briggs said they should try to have patience.

"There's nothing you can do about traffic but some people get very tense. People should pay more attention to the commute," he adds, noting that he's seen women putting on make-up, men reading newspapers and one person using a lap-top computer propped up against the steering wheel all while driving on the expressway.

And if you happen to find yourself needing car assistance, "don't leave the car because when I get there and you're not, I can't do anything."

If the breakdown occurs while the vans are making their rounds, Briggs says the MDC, has a fine response record.

So just sit and wait. Someone, like the CVS/Samaritans, will be there to help you as soon as they can.

Police Cuts Hit By Patrolmen

cover the neighborhoods without cruisers.

The plan also calls for the reassignment of an officer who has patrolled Quincy City Hall on a full-time basis.

One of the things thought to be stretching the budget is the effort by Finn to win accreditation from the National Commission on Accreditation of Law Enforcement Agencies. Besides costing money, it also requires officers to attend classes when they otherwise would be on duty.

Responding to the chief's new plan, the executive board of the 160-member patrol officer's association issued a stinging statement, sharply criticizing Finn. The statement, delivered to Finn on Monday, states—

"The challenge from the Association to Chief Finn is simple. Standup for the new programs and systems that have been enforced in the department for the last year and submit the supplementary budget to Mayor McCauley as soon as possible so that proper funding can be obtained for the continuance of these above referenced items for the remainder of fiscal 1988-89.

"This action would show true leadership ability on your part.

"The executive board of the Quincy Police Patrol Officer's Association believes that yes, 'The Buck Stops Here' at the office of the Chief of Police and the Association and its membership-160 strong-want to take this opportunity to state publicly — It's your move now Chief Finn.

"Show your leadership ability to the department by submitting the supplementary budget immediately. If you can't handle that move then maybe retirement is something to be considered.

"An effective leader always knows when it's time to step down. The above decision is yours to make."

The statement was signed by executive board members Paul Quinn, president, Gerald Gardiner, treasurer, and Jeffrey Hull, secretary.

In 1987, Finn requested $9,913,525 and received $9,553,291. For fiscal year 1988, Finn asked for $10,099,678 and received $9,841,657. Department spending for the fiscal year will amount to more than $11 million, McCauley said.

The police budget, like other department budgets is comprised of four parts - personal services, expenses, contractural and capital outlay.

Explaining how a budget is formulated, McCauley said, "They project how much they'll need." Department heads then meet with the mayor and his staff to hammer out a final figure.

In the case of the police personal services being $250,000 short for the second part of the fiscal 1989 which ends June 30, the mayor said he told Finn to cut back.

"I'm not going to tell the chief how to do it. I'm just telling him I don't want any debt in the personal services end."

"(Finn's) got to get personal services in line and make some cutbacks. As long as he does it, I'll back him up," adding that he doesn't tell the chief how or where to deploy his men.

McCauley, who pointed out that serious crime has dropped while the number of patrolmen has decreased over the past several years, said he believes the cuts will not affect public safety in the city.

"I don't feel public safety will be compromised just because a few cuts have been made."

4 Residents On Curry Dean's List

Four Quincy students are among 104 who have been named to the Dean's List for the Fall-1989 semester at Curry College, Milton.

They include Patricia Leary of Squantum, Brian Mahoney and Robert Wilson of Quincy, and Kathleen O'Sullivan of North Quincy.

DeCristofaro Asks MWRA Suit

Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro has requested Mayor Francis McCauley that a law suit in behalf of the City of Quincy be brought against the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority pertaining to the permanent siting of a sluge facility at the Fore River Shipyard in Quincy Point.

DeCristofaro, whose ward the shipyard is located in, has requested that positive action be taken as soon as possible.

"We, as city councillors and representatives of the citizens of Quincy, have done all that is possible and it now appears that legal action is the only avenue left to explore," DeCristofaro said.

"I am urging you to pursue this direction on behalf of the citizens of Quincy Point and the entire City of Quincy," he said.

Islamic Council Hopes Novel 'Satanic Verses' Promotion Discouraged

Responding to world-wide publicity concerning the controversial novel "Satanic Verses" by Salman Rushdie, the Islamic Council of New England has issued a statement saying it "hopes that all responsible people, specifically the publishers, book distributors and media, will discourage the future promotion of this book."

Located at 470 South St., Quincy, the Council is the umbrella for a large number of Muslim organizations in New England.

In stating its position, the Council said—

"The right to the freedom of expression and of religion is upheld as strongly in Islam as it has been enunciated in the First Amendment to the US Constitution. The exercise to this right of free expression is linked to a tolerance for and respect of the beliefs and moral values of others. Villification, mockery or distortion of the beliefs and values of any other religion is prohibited in Islam. In contrast genuine disagreement, criticism and intellectual dialogue are not only acceptable but encouraged.

"To place into perspective why the publication of the Satanic Verses generated such a moral outrage among Muslims worldwide, it is important to understand that Islam is a comprehensive religion, in which ever facet of the believer's actions is governed by a code of moral, ethical and legal conduct based on the principal tenet that the Quran is the word of God transmitted to Prophet Mohammed through the medium of Arch-Angel Gabriel and that Mohammed himself is the role-model to whom the practical application of the Quranic injunctions has been ordained. Satanic Verses which has been described as an "act of moral vandalism" (Buchanan, Boston Herald, Feb. 19, 1989), is in this light is totally anti-Islamic — It is blasphemous in its depiction of Gabriel, Prophet Mohammed, his wives and his followers, it is hateful in its portrayal of Mohammed (the role-model) as Mahound (the devil), and evil in its attempt to subvert the basic tenet that the Quran represents the total and unadulterated word of God.

"It is the debasement of these beliefs that outraged the entire Muslim world. They felt that the basic principle of the freedom of expression had been grotesquely abused in this instance. The author has used it as a license to cause severe anguish to Muslims by villification, mockery and slander. In this respect there are legal precedents that have awarded judgement against the publishing of emotionally distressful material.

"It is profoundly regretable that the deep outrage that some Muslims felt by the publication of this book had culminated in violence in certain countries. The Islamic Council of New England does not advocate or condone violence in any shape or form.

"It is unfortunate that our repeated pleas to the publishers before the publication of the book had been totally disregarded. The inevitable has happened.

"The Islamic Council hopes that all responsible people, specifically the publishers, book distributors and media, will discourage the future promotion of this book. In expressing, such a hope we are not attempting to infringe on any individual's right of expression, but requesting that the legitimate concerns of millions of others be respected.

The statement is from Dr. Abdul Cader Asmal, Wayland, Dr. Abdul Karim Khudairi, Quincy, and Dr. Riaz Khan, Worcester.

patrons continue to drink and make noise after they leave the club. The board noted that patrons can not carry beer bottles out of the establishment and said that, if patrons are drinking, they must have brought the beer bottles with them.

George Miller, owner and operator of Miller Pharmacy, 25 Independence Ave., next door to the club, told the board that the club's patrons frequently use his lot for parking and that he has complained before.

Perette told the board he had erected signs which stated that parking was not allowed at the Miller Pharmacy. He also said that he has offered to put up a fence as a barrier around the Miller parking lot at his own expense, but that the pharmacy declined the offer.

The board noted that Perette would be legally allowed to construct the fence (under six feet high) because it would be on his own property.

Miller told the board that Perette does not have sufficient parking in the rear for his patrons.

According to the zoning by-laws, however, an establishment must have parking available for every four people inside. The capacity of the club is 125 people, thus needing 32 parking spaces. The club has 38 spaces in the rear lot.

John Barry, district manager of CVS told the board that, although Perette was under the impression that the CVS store was allowing the use of the lot for Varsity Club patrons, there "must have been some misunderstanding." He said that CVS does not want the cars in their lot.

Barry said that Perette has been cooperative in the matter by way of erecting signs directing his patrons to his own rear lot, but that there is still a problem. He said that CVS does not want to be a "poor neighbor" and that he would be "glad to work with them" in finding a solution.

Ann and Richard McGee of Goddard St. told the board that they do not want the CVS lot to be fenced in because they are concerned that Varsity Club patrons would then have no alternative but to park on their street thus blocking their driveways and sidewalks.

Sheets told the board he wants to plan a neighborhood meeting on the matter and that he will need at least a month to organize the meeting.

The board continued the hearing indefinitely until they hear from Sheets.

The board stipulated that Perette is to continue his efforts to mitigate the problem in the interim.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

The pre-arranging of a funeral is an important decision. There are many factors which must be carefully considered. How it is done will determine what effect it will have on the survivors. Planning from complete knowledge of the various practical, legal, economic and psychological factors is essential.

If a formal pre-arranged funeral agreement or an informal one is desired, the inherent uncertainties of such an agreement make it highly desirable to get expert, professional counseling from a funeral director.

We at the Deware Funeral Home have aprovided this expert and professional counseling through the years. We are always available for counsel if one wishes to make arrangements in advance. Through the years we are proud that at our establishment we are always able to provide clear answers to any questions about charges for our services and merchandise required in connection with it.

Crime Prevention Tips For Senior Citizens

Help make your community a safer place to live and do not let fear of crime restrict your activities. Being alert to your surroundings, installing good locks on doors and windows, and taking comon-sense precautions while inside and outside your home can reduce opportunities for crime. To give yourself that extra margin of security:

- Use Direct Deposit for pension and social security checks.
- Do not display large amounts of cash in public.
- Be wary of talkative strangers when the conversation turns to money. Read every newspaper repaort on con games and be ready to say no if someone comes to you with a get-rich-quick scheme.
- Travel with friends when you leave home to go shopping, to the bank, or doctor.
- Get to know your neighbors and keep their phone numbers handy for emergencies.
- Work out a "buddy" system with a friend to check on each other's welfare daily.
- If you are along, do not advertise it. Use only your first intitial in phone books, directories, and apartment lobbies.
- If you must carry a purse, hold it close to your body. Do not leave your wallet or purse on a counter or in a shopping cart unattended.
- If you are threatened by physical force, do not resist. Remain calm and observe the assailant so you can give an accurate description to the police.

North Ends Season With Tourney Title

The North Quincy boys' basketball team completed its season in fine fashion by capturing the first Red Raider tournament with impressive wins over two of the top South Shore League teams, Norwell and Hanover, last week.

The twin victories gave Ted Stevenson's Raiders a final 7-13 record in a disappointing regular season.

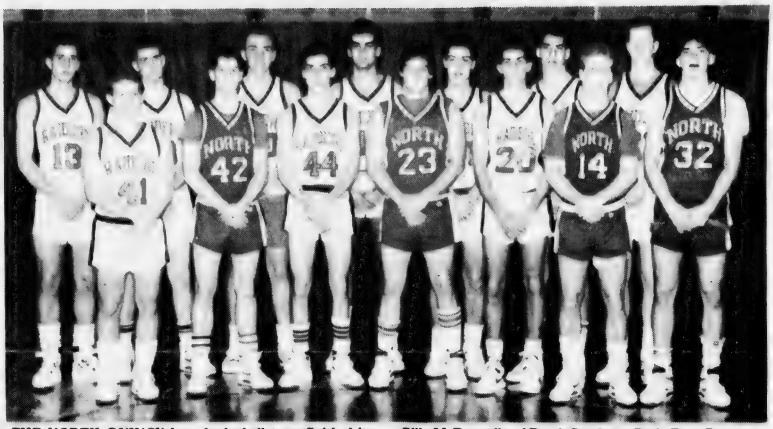
After defeating Hanover, 62-43, in the first round, knocking the Indians out of the Eastern Mass. Tournament (Hanover needed two wins to qualify), North put on another impressive performance to defeat tournament-bound Norwell (13-7), 80-56, to cop the tourney title.

"I'm very happy for our seniors, they went out in style," said Stevenson. "We got off to a good start (18-6 lead after one quarter) and I think that was the key. We have 12 seniors on the squad and we really wanted to win this. Our goal was to bring home the plaque."

Matt Sumner connected on two three-point shots or for the game's first six points and a tournament MVP Billy MacDougall had a game-high 15 points to spark the Raiders.

Kipp Caldwell and Mike Ainsley joined Macdougall on the all-tournament team.

Some cold shooting by Norwell, which missed its first four layups, was one reason for North getting off to its big 18-6 lead.



Norwell came back to play the Raiders even in the second quarter, both scoring 22 points, and North held a 40-28 advantage at the half.

North had another big quarter as it outscored the Clippers, 21-12, in the third and took a big 61-40 lead into the final session.

North dominated the game in every department. Caldwell, a senior forward, chipped in with 10 points along with 15 rebounds. Sumner wound up with three three-pointers and 11 points and Ainsley scored 10 points. Sean McDonough scored nine points and Erik DeBoer had two three-pointers and Chris Griffin one.

Caldwell was named to the Suburban League third all-star team and played in the annual all-star game at the Quincy Vo-Tech gym.

North Girls Win Tourney

The North Quincy girls' basketball team finished the season on a high note last week when it won the North-South Invitational tournament held at North Quincy and Newton South.

Paul Bregoli's Raiderettes won the title with a 44-37 win over Indian Hill, N.J., after topping Lincoln-Sudbury, 54-46, in the opening round. The sweep gave North a final 9-11 record.

North took an early 5-2 lead in the final game at Newton South with Paula Tolson and Kellene Duffy converting steals into baskets. The New Jersey Braves, behind 6-1 center Jennifer Orzo, took an 11-10 lead early in the second quarter. However, sophomore forward Tara Miles ignited the Raiderettes with a long three-point field goal and a corner jump shot to give North a lead it never lost. Miles' shooting seemed to be the turning point as Paula Tolson tossed in two long jumpers and Debbie Panaro hit from outside.

Leading, 23-17, at halftime, North's Kerry Tolson and Deirdre Murphy gave North a 32-22 lead midway through the quarter. Murphy scored eight straight points as Tricia Mitton and Kerry Tolson hit her with perfect passes underneath.

North remained in control in the last quarter as Kerry Tolson and Murphy took care of the offensive and Duffy, Panaro and Mitton handled Indian Hill's full-court press.

Murphy finished with 17 points, 14 rebounds and a school record six blocked shots. Paula Tolson had eight points, three assists and three steals and Panaro six points, seven rebounds and three steals. Duffy broke two records, setting a single-game assist mark with 10, breaking Nancy Flukes' mark and having four steals, to set a single-season record for steals with 95.

In the opener at North Quincy, North jumped off to a 10-0 lead early with Murphy hitting six points. However, Lincoln-Sudbury went on a 7-1 run to close the gap to 11-8 before Paula Tolson hit a jumper with three seconds left in the quarter.

North went cold in the second quarter while L-S ran off 11 straight points. North came back as Murphy scored five straight points. North trailed at the half, 26-22.

L-S went up by eight points 40 seconds into the third quarter. After a timeout, North went to a pressure man-to-man defense and outscored L-S, 12-2. Panaro hit two jumpers and Duffy and Murphy added four points each. North took the lead for good on a Duffy steal and layup.

Leading, 38-35, entering the last quarter, Murphy hit two three throws and Miles a short jumper to increase the lead to seven. But North couldn't shake free until Murphy hit for six points and Kara Sullivan and Paula Tolson hit layups to steal the win.

Murphy had a career-high 25 points, 13 rebounds and three blocked shots, Duffy added eight points and tied her own school record with 11 steals and added six assists to finish the season with 82, second most in a season behind Flukes' 90. Paula Tolson had six points, five assists and three steals and Panara scored six points.

Murphy was named the tourney MVP with her 42 points, 28 rebounds and nine blocked shots. Paula Tolson also made the all-tournament team.

"The kids played super in the tournament," said Bregoli. "Murphy was awesome but her teammates also played very well around her. All the seniors sent out in style while the underclassmen, especially Kerry Tolson, Sullivan and Miles looked good. It was a great way to finish."

North had lost its last two games of the regular season to Brookline, 47-35, and Brockton, 81-44.

Murphy led North against Brookline with 10 points, 18 rebounds and three steals. Panaro had eight points, five rebounds, three assists and four steals, Duffy had eight points and Karin Reister, playing a strong overall game, had six rebounds, three assists, two steals and four blocked shots.

In the Brockton game Paula Tolson had 16 points and five steals, Kerry Tolson a career-high 11 points, Panara a career-high nine rebounds, four steals and a fine floor game and Sullivan seven rebounds, two assists and two steals.

An Up And Down Season For Quincy

The Quincy boys' basketball team turned a discouraging season around down the stretch and won four games in a row before the season ended on a disappointing note last Thursday night when it lost to Silver Lake, 70-65, in the finals of the second annual Quincy invitational tournament.

John Franceschini's Presidents, who won their last three regular season games to go 7-11, defeated Hingham, 80-67, in the opening round to move into the finals against Silver Lake, which defeated Stoughton, 93-66.

Both Silver Lake, which finished at 14-6 and qualified for the Eastern Mass. Tournament, and Hingham are members of the Old Colony League and will become league rivals when Quincy joins that league in two years.

Quincy lost the Silver Lake game from the foul line. While the Lakers hit 11 of 12 free throws in the final 2.28 of the game, the Presidents missed several crucial shots in that critical stretch.

"For most of the game we were in good position to take control," said Franceschini, "The big difference was at the line, where we didn't make the free throws when we had to, while Silver Lake did."

With 2.28 left and the score tied at 59, the Lakers sank four straight free throws, while the Presidents missed three with 1.41 left.

Quincy was forced to foul and Silver Lake added five free throws to clinch the victory.

Quincy Edges Burlington

Troy Pee Wee Champs

Quincy's Pee Wee team got off to a good start in the Kiwanis Tournament with a win over Burlington, but lost its next two games.

Like the Squirt division, the Pee Wee championship game was an all-New York meeting with Troy blanking Suffolk, 3-0.

In a 6-5 win over Burlington, Mike DesRoche had a hat trick, Bob Guarnieri two goals and Brian Wood one. Guarnieri had two assists and Brian Sullivan, Wood, Kevin Barrett, DesRoche, James Schatzl, and Steve Miller one each.

Quincy bowed to Sackville, Nova Scotia, 4-2, with Wood and Guarnieri scoring the goals and DesRoche and Wood having assists.

In a 4-2 loss to Schenectady, N.Y., Sullivan and Guarnieri had the goals and DesRoche, Jeff Craig and Wood had assists.

Also playing for Quincy were Scott Joyce, Danny Morrell, Doug Nolan, Matt McGowan, Kevin Boylen and Tim Wassiege. Steve Sullivan and Steve DesRoche were the coaches.

QUINCY MITES' Robbie Winter, left, and Billy Graney, move to the net against Suffolk, N.Y. in Kiwanis tournament.

Hectic Trip For Colorado

The Colorado Youth hockey team, which last year won the Pee Wee division title in the Kiwanis Tournament, had a hectic trip to Quincy last week as it attempted to repeat for the crown.

On the way to the Youth Arena for a 7.50 p.m. opening-round game, the team's plane didn't land at Logan Airport until 5.30.

The team got stuck in tunnel traffic and didn't arrive at the rink until 6.45, about an hour before the scheduled game with Framingham.

Colorado won its first two games, 2-1 over Framingham and 8-2 over Adirondack. However, it was eliminated in the semifinals by Sackville, Nova Scotia, 3-1.

"This is the closest we've come in getting to a game," said coach Bryan Bergland. "I've seen much better performances from my players, but, given the circumstances, we won the game and that's all we needed.

"This is one of the finest tournaments we have played in. Last year was our first here and we all looked forward to playing here again this year."

North Girls Finish 4th In League Championships

The North Quincy girls' track team, which finished the regular season with wins over Quincy and Waltham. came up with its best performances of the year to finish in a fourth place tie with Brookline with 32 points in the Suburban League championship meet at Cambridge Rindge and Latin.

As an added bonus, Amanda Young (600) and Bridget Toland (two-mile), qualified for the state meet Saturday and Sunday at Harvard. The Raiderettes will have seven girls in the state meet.

Young, running against only one other girl, ran a 1:40.0 in the third heat, qualifying for the states. Toland came from seventh to fourth place over the final half mile of the two-mile. Her time was 2.7 seconds off the state qualifying time of 12:50, but she was accepted by the state director.

"Bridget was involved in an unfortunate incident at the state coaches meet at Harvard in January," coach Jeff Hennessy explained. "She and seven other girls were running the seeded section of the two-mile. They were lapped by the two leaders and the officials made them leave the track. All eight were on pace to beat the 12:50 necessary which is easier to do at Harvard than Cambridge. Many coaches protested, but there was little to do. State director Dudley O'Leary showed true compassion for the athletes by signing Bridget into the state meet. She is a captain, a senior and a leader by example."

Quincy's Beth Weixler ran her best time of 7.7 placing third in the hurdles. She and teammate Jessica Rutan (hurdles) will compete in the state championships.

North girls scoring in the league championship meet were Robin Guilfoy, second in the dash (6.6) and fifth in the shot put (29-10½); Karen Cashman, second in the 1000 (3:00.3); Sherrin Quintiliani, third in the mile (5:38.4), and the mile relay team of Young, Quintiliani, Amy Wong and Cashman.

Quincy's Weixler was the only scorer with her third place in the hurdles.

North's only scorer in the boys' division was Wayne Sit, sixth in the dash (6.0).

The following North girls competed in the state championships (Class A) Saturday and Sunday:

Guilfoy, a senior, dash and shot put; Wong, a freshman, dash; Young, a sophomore, 600; Cashman, a senior, 1000; Quintiliani, a junior, mile; Joanne Moriarty, a junior, mile; Toland, a senior, two-mile, and the mile relay team

Guilfoy gave North its only points with 6th places in the dash and shot put.

The following Raiders competed in the boys' division (Class B): Sit, a sophomore, dash; sophomore Hiep Ngo, dash; junior Kevin MacDougall, 300; senior Brian Barrett, two-mile; senior Ryan Craig, shot put, and the mile relay team of MacDougall, junior Mike Doherty, Craig and either Sit or Ngo.

Weixler and Rutan ran the hurdles for the Quincy girls in Class A.

The North girls finished the regular season with a 52-34 win over Waltham.

North's winners were Guilfoy, dash; Young, 600; Cashman, 1000; Quintiliani, mile; Young, high jump, and the relay team of Young, Quintiliani, Wong and Cashman.

Placing second were Wong, dash; Carol Wirtz, 300; Lewis, mile; Toland, two-mile; Cashman, high jump, and Guilfoy, shot put.

Taking third places were Cheryl Kelly, 300; Cindy Walsh, 1000, and Moriarty, two-mile.

In their previous meet the Raiderettes had defeated Quincy, 62-22.

Quincy Completes Strong Season

The Quincy wrestling team completed a fine season with a strong showing in the South Sectional and competing in the state championships.

Junior Brian Burgess won the 160-pound sectional title and senior co-captain Todd Kimmell capped his career with his second successive runnerup finish at 145 pounds and was the Presidents' only place winner with a sixth in the state championships at Reading. As a team Quincy finished fifth in a field of 17 teams in the sectionals.

Burgess capped off his 14-1 dual meet season and Suburban League championship with a victory in the finals over Weymouth North's Chuck Struzziere, 10-6.

"Brian is a shining example of how hard work pays off in the end," said Quincy coach Lou Venturelli. "He went to every summer tournament and has devoted 12 months to the sport. We are very happy for him."

Kimmell ended his senior season with a dual meet record of 15-1-1 and his second straight league championship. His only loss came at the hands of Marshfield's Mike Ayer, his opponent in the sectional final. In the rematch of the 10-3 loss during the season, Kimmell wrestled an almost-perfect match, losing, 4-3.

"I really can't say enough of the effort Todd has put into this team," said Venturelli. "As captain for two years he has done his leading by example and we are very proud of the effect he has had on everyone involved. Whatever college is lucky enough to get him, he will be an asset to that program."

Kimmell went to the state semifinals before bowing to the tournament's most outstanding wrestler, Billerica's Ralph Lyman, and to a nagging shoulder injury. Its effect was evident in his third try at Ayer, losing, 6-2.

Also entered in the state tournament were senior Robert Connolly at 140 and heavyweight Tony Madden, after both finished fourth in the sectionals.

Senior Tim Scultz took fifth at 103 and freshman Greg Souza sixth in the sectionals.

"I'm losing quite a group of wrestlers," said Venturelli. "Connolly (12-3-1) always came through when needed, Schultz sacrificed regularly for the good of the team and Madden came through with many big pins."

Also graduating will be co-capt. Scott O'Brien, Ennio Eleuteri, Sean Gannon, Rob Grant and John Killen.

"This successful season should send a message to people that Quincy can complete and that, with continued support, the Quincy High 'Men at Work' wrestling team is back on the job," Venturelli concluded.

Quincy Girls Finish Rebuilding Year

The Quincy girls' basketball team finished its season last Friday by losing to Waltham, 65-26, and finishing with a 2-17 record.

This was a rebuilding year for Doug MacFarlane's First Ladies and they faced teams with much more experience and height, making things hard for the young Quincy team.

"The girls gave it all they had all season and never let down," MacFarlane said. "We were small and very inexperienced and things should be looking up for us next season."

In the finale against Waltham (14-4), Melanie Sullivan paced the First Ladies with nine points and 14 rebounds.

Waltham outscored Quincy, 22-2, in the second quarter and was never in trouble as it held an insurmountable 40-8 lead at the half.

Earlier in the week Quincy lost to a strong Abp. Williams team, 74-40, in a non-league game as Williams' Mary Kerins scored 31 points.

Last Friday Kerins became the first Williams female player to hit the 1000-point mark as she scored 36 points in a 65-31 win over Cardinal Spellman, improving the lady Bishops' record to 15-4.

Amy Baker scored eight points and Julie McCloskey six for Quincy, which trailed Wiliams, 57-32, at halftime, and Maureen Shea grabbed 11 rebounds.

WEEK OF:March 2

BIRTHDAY THIS WEEK
You're artistic by nature, and express yourself effectively through art or poetry. New interests are highlighted over the next twelve months. A unique travel opportunity may open up by mid-1989.

AQUARIUS — January 21 - February 19
Taking inventory of family's health and money needs is an important responsibility at this time. Contacts prove extremely helpful on the work scene; use them to best advantage.

PISCES — February 20 - March 20
Rely less heavily on the ideas of others; this is a prime week for you to set examples. Musical and literary abilities come to the forefront right now.

ARIES — March 21 - April 20
Tasks left over from last month must be finalized before you put a new project into motion. Shopping jaunts may include happy surprises this weekend.

TAURUS — April 21 - May 22
A recent mystery is solved, thanks largely to your unceasing determination. Necessity is indeed the mother of invention, something you come to appreciate this week.

GEMINI — May 23 - June 21
Good week to talk over plans, whether they be of a business or personal nature. Choose confidant with special care. Unusual travel destinations are now spotlighted.

CANCER — June 22 - July 22
Difficult-to-please individual is infinitely easier to get along with. Celebrity may step into the scene on the weekend. Persistence pays off; you get a major go-ahead by Wednesday.

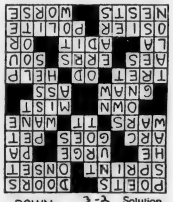
LEO — July 23 - August 22
Negotiations are positively spotlighted, but be sure to do all your homework. If hiring someone, check out references with added care. Recent job risk may pay off.

VIRGO — August 23 - September 22
Good opportunities abound for speaking out about an important cause; don't let them slip by. On the homefront, this is not the week for being shy.

LIBRA — September 23 - October 22
You thrive on competition, which incidentally stiffens through the week. Money-related decisions should be based on experience and logic. Improved concentration brings results.

SCORPIO — October 23 - November 21
Faraway friend may contact you during this period. The week is favorable for platonic relationships and domestic harmony. Financial moves require caution.

SAGITTARIUS — November 22 - December 22
Relative may make a mysterious request, but it's less odd than you initially think. New friendship should not be rushed. Be wary of too-helpful neighbors or co-workers.



CAPRICORN — December 23 - January 20
Local travel and long-distance communiqués are currently highlighted. Information you've been seeking arrives by special messenger. Creative juices are running freely.

BORN THIS WEEK
March 2nd, actress Jennifer Jones; 3rd, actress Jean Harlow; 4th, actress Susan Clark; 5th, singer Andy Gibb; 6th, host Ed McMahon; 7th, composer Maurice Ravel; 8th, actress Lynne Redgrave.

McCauley Says MBTA Hid Some Fare Increase Plans

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Stating that "process is very important to change," Mayor Francis McCauley told MBTA officials Monday that the transit authority concealed at least some of its plans for fare increases and deprived the public of important information.

McCauley, who was recently elected chairman of the MBTA's Advisory Committee, made the comments during a public hearing Monday on the authority's proposed fare hikes at Quincy City Hall.

The mayor also charged that MBTA circumvented the political process in the way it allowed news of its fares-increase proposal to trickle out.

McCauley was one of three people who spoke at one of three hearings the MBTA held this week regarding a proposal to raise subway fares, including Red Line service, 15 cents, from 60 to 75 cents. The proposal is in response to the Advisory Board's demands to control a $500-million-a-year deficit.

Although he stopped short of a full endorsement of the higher fares, the mayor repeated earlier positions taken by the Advisory Board, which represents the 78 cities and towns in the MBTA district. The board favors any steps to curb the MBTA deficit.

However, McCauley was critical of the MBTA for not first presenting its fare proposals to its directors as "an essential public announcement of what is being proposed," and then withholding further plans to raise fares on express buses and on the Riverside branch of the Green Line.

"In sharp contrast to the orderly process used in recent months to consider and subsequently approve increases in commuter rail fares, the process involved in the current proposal has been replete with lack of public information, the need for major corrections in what is being proposed and perceived absence of planning.

"Process is very important to any proposal for fare change. Public hearings are mere lip service to public input if complete and accurate information is not widely available in a timely fashion to all interested parties," he said.

To correct this, McCauley made four recommendations,

- Any future proposals for changes in fares or in passes should begin with preliminary approval by the Board of Directors at a regularly scheduled meeting.
- Substantial additions to a fare proposal made after a Board vote and prior to public hearing should trigger an extension of the comment period and if warranted an additional hearing(s).
- Effort should be made to hold at least one hearing in a geographical area where proposed changes in service for fares might have a unique impact.
- When, in a short time, more than one simple fare increase is to be proposed, a comprehensive proposal and comprehensive information should be readily available to the public before any hearings are held, even if separate series of hearings on each mode change proposed are deemed most appropriate.

Only two other people made comments at the hearing.

One person was Peter Morin, who represented Senator Paul D. Harold who was unable to attend because of a scheduling conflict.

Morin stated Harold's recommendation that the current two-token fare to Braintree, Quincy-Adams and Quincy stations on the Red Line be cut in half — or as an alternative, that fares to Porter Square, Davis Square and Alewife, on the other end of the Red Line in Cambridge, be raised to two-tokens from one.

The final decision on the fare hikes will be made by the authority's Board of Directors after all public comment has been compiled and considered.

If approved, it would be the first increases since 1981.

After Chapter 2 - Administration, Article XI Health Commissioner, Section 65 Powers and Duties, add the following new section:

Section 65A - permit for the removal of cesspool, septic, sewage or other offensive substances, including sewerage and sludge.

No person shall remove or transport cesspool, septic, sewage or other offensive substances through or across any street of the City without first obtaining a permit from the Health Commissioner of the City as provided by M.G.L. Affordable Housing Order Creating False Hope, Says Tardo

According to Denis Tardo, candidate for councillor-at-large, "Council Order No. 340 is creating a false hope for those who seek affordable housing."

Tardo, president of the Quincy Tenant Organization, said, "Linkage is a tax that will raise purchase prices and pass rent increases to tenants making affordable housing less of a reality. The only benefactors of the trust fund will be the administrators of the fund."

"The current wording of Order 340 would generate around $100,000, less than the cost of one single family home or condo. The Human Services Committee could better solve the affordable housing problem by demanding that block grant money, $1.7 million last year, be spent on housing.

"The high cost of living contributes to the problem of affordability," Tardo said. "Raising the cost will only increase the need for affordability.

"To make housing affordable we must stabilize existing prices and generate guidelines that ensure proper implementation of existing funds," he added.

The Human Services Committee is scheduled to discuss the order on Monday, March 6 at 7 p.m. in the Council Chambers.

Marty Finnegan Honored As Quincy Sun's Citizen Of Year

Martin C. (Marty) Finnegan, coordinator of Project Impact, an innovative program to help youngsters deal with drugs, alcohol and other problems, was honored Sunday as The Quincy Sun's Citizen of the Year.

The award was presented at a reception at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center attended by more than 100 persons, including family members, city officials and present and past collegues in the Quincy public schools system.

Also attending were previous Award recipients Deputy Civil Defense Director Anthony Siciliano, and Ruth Wainwright, community volunteer. Thomas Koch, executive director of the Quincy Council on Aging and son of the late Richard J. Koch, Sr., who was honored posthumously last year, represented the Koch family Sunday.

Senator Paul Harold was emcee. Speakers were Mayor Francis McCauley and Sun Publisher Henry Bosworth.

Bosworth presented Finnegan, who is also Quincy Public schools athletics director, with a clock plaque as Sun Citizen of the Year for 1988, inscribed–

"For his vision and dedication to freeing our youth from drug and alcohol abuse through Project Impact."

On Construction Projects

Strong Support For Local Hiring

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Approximately 100 residents and eight city councillors went on record Monday in favor of a revised local preference hiring bill during a public hearing at City Hall.

The revised ordinance calls for Quincy residents to be hired for constructional projects wholly or partially funded by the city on a three to one basis. It would apply to projects costing at least $250,000.

Originally, it was drafted to hire qualified residents on a two to one basis for projects costing at least $10,000. The original ordinance was vetoed by Mayor Francis McCauley in October because he said it was restrictive and unconstitutional.

In December, Councillors Stephen McGrath, Patricia Toland and Michael Cheney reintroduced the revised order which they say addresses the concerns raised in the mayor's veto message.

Speaking on the revised order Tuesday, McCauley said he would have "no comment on it until it reaches his desk."

It appears the order will be passed by the council and once it does, the mayor must act on it within 10 days of receiving it. The bill could come to a vote at the March 20 City Council meeting.

At Monday night's hearing, proponents said the ordinance would allow Quincy residents to reap the benefits of the city's development boom as well as give them work that is otherwise going to out-of-state workers.

Speaking out against the bill were Councillor Timothy Cahill and Anne Klayman, executive director of the Utility Contractors Association of New England.

Cahill, who said he is not anti-business or anti-worker, said he is against the concept of protectionism.

"I don't think it's part of what made this country great," he said.

Klayman was quite pointed in her remarks, saying.

"The residency requirement ordinance you're considering is anti-constitutional, anti-worker and anti-business. It is an archaic ordinance that really can not be tolerated in a free and democratic society."

In support of the bill, McGrath said,

"In my opinion, the ordinance before the City Council is a workable ordinance which will guarantee that Quincy residents will be given preference for local construction projects."

McGrath, who consulted an attorney before submitting the revised order, said a ruling on whether it is unconstitutional or not should be left up to the courts, not the mayor or the city solicitor.

"That decision is not up to the mayor nor the city solicitor. If someone wants to challenge the constitutionality of an order, let the courts do it. If a developer has a problem with it, let the developer take the order to court," McGrath said.

"There are local employees that are being exploited and used by developers. This order will protect these people," McGrath said, adding that if the mayor does veto the revised order, he will attempt an override.

In concurring with McGrath, Ward 1 Councillor Michael Cheney said the occurance of out-of-town and out-of-state workers is costing the city $3 million in lost revenue each year.

"We need to share in the development boom in Quincy. This (bill) goes to support the blue collar working class in Quincy.

(Cont'd on Page 24)

Councillors Raise Methadone Concerns

In discussing a proposal for a mobile methadone van in Quincy Monday night, city councillors expressed their concerns while two officials behind the plan said Quincy "does have a choice" in whether to allow the van to operate on city property.

Responding to a question by Councillor Stephen McGrath whether the city could prevent the van from coming to Quincy, David Mulligan of the state's Divisions of Alcoholism and Drug Rehabilitation said, "Quincy does have a choice." Mulligan then added that in every community that has a van, an agreement or "accord" was reached prior to its operation.

"We want to work with you. We think Quincy residents will be better served if we come into accord," Mulligan said.

McGrath then asked Mulligan what if Quincy and the state fail to reach an accord. Mulligan replied that he doesn't know what would happen in that case since that scenario hasn't occured yet.

McGrath also said the final decision should rest with Mayor Francis McCauley.

MacRitchie Replaces Anderson On MWRA Board

City Solicitor Joseph "Jay" MacRitchie has been appointed to the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority's Board of Directors as Quincy's representative by Gov. Michael Dukakis.

MacRitchie was expected to be sworn into his four-year term Tuesday or Wednesday and attend his first meeting this week.

"I think Jay will do an excellent job. He's a resident of Squantum, a yachtsman and has been involved in MWRA issues," said Mayor Francis McCauley.

MacRitchie was one of three people the governor considered from a list submitted recently by McCauley. Others considered were Paul Anderson, Quincy's Public Works Commissioner and the city's former board member, and David Smith, the city's personnel director.

McCauley commended Anderson for his hard work and leadership during his term as Quincy's representative. The mayor pointed out that Anderson "was instrumental" in the siting of a new sewerage treatment plant at Deer Island off Winthrop instead of on Nut Island in Houghs Neck and Long Island in Quincy Bay.

"Paul is a hard worker and represented the city's views very well," McCauley said.

Second Half Tax Bills In Mail Friday

Second half tax bills for fiscal year 1989 will be mailed out Friday, Mayor Francis McCauley announces.

The bills are due Monday, May 1. McCauley noted this is the earliest mailing for the May bill since he has been mayor.

Although the bills are not due for seven weeks, McCauley said he would appreciate residents paying them before the deadline "It will help the city's cash flow position," he said.

The mayor also noted that bills paid after May 1 are subject to a 14 percent interest charge retroactive to April 1.

Cars In Salvage Lot To Be Removed In Two Weeks

The Quincy License Board Tuesday voted to allow Baystate Volkswagen, Inc., 625 Southern Artery, a period of two weeks to remove the stored vehicles from the salvage lot located across the street from the dealership.

Atty. Carl Johnson appeared before the board on behalf of Brian Leonard of Bentley's Steak House who had written a letter to the board "some time ago" concerning the illegal storage of vehicles on the lot.

Baystate Vice President Jerry Guthro was also present before the board and asked for a period of two weeks to remove the cars and find other storage arrangements for them.

The board granted the request with the stipulation that any employees who must cross over to the lot must drive and not walk across the street due to heavy traffic.

Causes $100,000 Damage

Adams Shore Fire Drives 14 To Street

Fourteen people were driven out of their homes early Monday when a two-alarm fire seriously damaged a six-unit Adams Shore apartment building just after midnight.

The probable cause of the fire is the careless disposal of a smoking material, said a spokesman for the Quincy Fire Prevention Bureau. The fire is being investigated by the Fire Prevention Bureau.

Although firefighters were able to contain the fire to the third-floor apartment where it originated, the rest of the building was damaged by smoke and water, Fire Chief Thomas Gorman said. The fire caused an estimated $100,000 damage and left the building at 51 Plover Rd. uninhabitable, Gorman said.

The building is owned by the Ricciard Co. The residents escaped without injury but two firefighters suffered minor burns on their hands, the chief said.

None of the heat-detector alarms in the building sounded, according to some residents, who said they went door-to-door to alert their neighbors.

Because the building was old it had heat detectors but was not required to have hard-wired smoke detectors, Gorman said. When the building is done over it will be required to come up to code, which includes the installation of smoke detectors, he said.

The fire began in the couch of the third floor apartment rented by Michael Pedula, Rosemary Staff and her two children. The blaze was extinguished in about 15 minutes.

An emergency shelter was set up for the victims at Civil Defense headquarters on Sea St. Aid was provided by Civil Defense volunteers and the American Red Cross.

People at the relief scene included Civil Defense Deputy Director Tony Siciliano and Chief Gorman.

Assistance included cots, blankets, coffee and donuts as well as vouchers.

By 5 a.m., all of the victims had been relocated with either a friend or relative, Siciliano said.

Hearing Continued On Lighting Complaints At Auto Agency

The Quincy License Board Tuesday continued for two weeks a hearing concerning exterior lighting problems at Quirk Ford Inc., 540 Southern Artery.

The board noted that neighbors in the area, including Donna L. Risk of 18 Walpole St., had complained about the lights from the dealership shining in the windows of their homes.

Rudy Pompeo, representing Quirk, told the board the lights were mis-aimed due to the breakdown of an installer's tool during their installation.

Pompeo said that he had spoken to the residents who had complained and had gone inside their houses to see first hand the problem. He told the board that the lights have since been re-aimed.

He said that he has heard no complaints from the neighbors since reaiming the lights.

The board noted that the low exterior lights are also in need of some sort of shielding to prevent them from shining in the windows of neighboring residents. Pompeo said he is in the process of locating the manufacturer's shields.

The board said that they will give Pompeo a period of two weeks to correct the problem in which case he will not need to appear before the board again.

Affordable Housing Fund Gets Council Green Light

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

The establishment of an affordable housing trust fund in Quincy got the green light Monday night from the City Council and is awaiting action by Mayor Francis McCauley.

By a 7-2 vote, the City Council approved a home rule petition calling for the establishment of an affordable housing trust fund. The fund would be supplied by a one percent fee on all future commercial and industrial development in Quincy.

On Tuesday, McCauley said he will review the petition and make a decision "sometime in the future." The mayor, who is not required to make a decision within a certain time frame, said "The matter had not come to my desk yet. When it does, I'll review it and then make a decision."

Since the order is in the form of a home-rule petition, it needs the mayor's signature before it can be acted on in the state legislature. The legislature must approve it before it can be enacted.

At Monday's meeting of the Human Services Committee prior to the Council meeting, the order was amended to include only projects that exceed $100,000. It was introduced by Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien, chairman of the Human Services Committee and principle drafter of the home rule petition.

Specifically, the amended order states that "contributions to such account shall be made by applicants for building permits for the construction, erection, improvement, reuse or rehabilitation of land or the buildings thereon for industrial and commercail uses, provided the total estimated construction cost during any 24 month period of said construction, erection, improvement, reuse or rehabilitation of land or buildings exceeds $100,000."

Last month, the order was amended from four percent to one percent of all future commercial and industrial developments. And Monday night, another amendment was offered to raise the threshold from $100,000 to $250,000 but it was defeated 6-3. Voting for the amendment were Councillors Timothy Cahill, Theodore DeCristofaro and Michael Cheney who offered it.

According to Chretien, the $100,000 threshold should not have a major impact on the amount of revenue generated, adding that the fund could reach $150,000 to $200,000 anually.

At the meeting, all the councillors agreed that affordable housing should be one of the top priorities of the city's government. Seven councillors said they believe the fund is an important first step in providing affordable housing in Quincy but two councillors were against some of the details of the proposal.
